Academic Writing Skills I (Class 3)

Mark Birtles

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 木 4/Thu.4

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

Academic Writing Skills I introduces the formal structures and styles of academic writing. The course focuses on two primary areas. The first is essay organization: we will examine the fundamentals of outlining and structuring essays as well as practice writing a variety of essay forms. The second is academic language: we will study the specific vocabulary, conventions, and styles of writing particular to university research. Additionally, this course will build confidence and competence in writing more generally, preparing you for Academic Writing Skills II, in which you will write a formal research paper.

The related activities and tasks are completed mainly through such communicative approaches as presentation and discussion in order to facilitate students' thorough engagement in active communication in English. This will cultivate their listening and speaking skills in the target language as well as those of reading and writing.

[Goal]

This course aims to build competence in the following areas:

1. Organizing a variety of essay styles clearly and logically
2. Using academic vocabulary and styles of prose effectively
3. Citing and referencing sources correctly
4. Proofreading, editing, and revising multiple essay drafts

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1" and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Each class consists of two basic parts: one is a short exercise building fundamental aspects of academic writing, such as vocabulary, sentence structure, or style; the second is longer, including a discussion on the week's lesson and exercises to illustrate its central components. Often we will work together on exercises, both in small groups and as a class. We will also share and edit each other's writing, so students should be prepared for both giving and receiving constructive feedback on assignments.

Instructors will provide general feedback in class, and students will receive written feedback on submitted assignments.

The first is essay organization: we will examine the fundamentals of outlining and structuring essays as well as practice writing a variety of essay forms. The second is academic language: we will study the specific vocabulary, conventions, and styles of writing particular to university research. Additionally, this course will build confidence and competence in writing more generally, preparing you for Academic Writing Skills II, in which you will write a formal research paper.

The related activities and tasks are completed mainly through such communicative approaches as presentation and discussion in order to facilitate students' thorough engagement in active communication in English. This will cultivate their listening and speaking skills in the target language as well as those of reading and writing.

[Goal]

This course aims to build competence in the following areas:

1. Organizing a variety of essay styles clearly and logically
2. Using academic vocabulary and styles of prose effectively
3. Citing and referencing sources correctly
4. Proofreading, editing, and revising multiple essay drafts

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1" and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Each class consists of two basic parts: one is a short exercise building fundamental aspects of academic writing, such as vocabulary, sentence structure, or style; the second is longer, including a discussion on the week's lesson and exercises to illustrate its central components. Often we will work together on exercises, both in small groups and as a class. We will also share and edit each other's writing, so students should be prepared for both giving and receiving constructive feedback on assignments.

Instructors will provide general feedback in class, and students will receive written feedback on submitted assignments.

Academic Writing Skills II (Class 8)

Marcus Lovitt

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 1~4
Day/Period : 月 3/Mon.3

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

Academic Writing Skills II builds on the skills learned in Academic Writing Skills I and applies them to the organization and writing of a major research paper (in either the humanities or social sciences). Students are expected to take responsibility in choosing a theme and thoroughly researching it for the final paper, no less than 2500 words, excluding a bibliography (Times New Roman, 12-pt.font, double spaced [10 pages]). Course content includes essay organization, research strategies (collecting and evaluating references, conducting web searches, using electronic databases), bibliographic organization, and citation styles: footnotes, endnotes, or in-text forms of MLA and APA.

The related activities and tasks are completed mainly through such communicative approaches as presentation and discussion in order to facilitate students' thorough engagement in active communication in English. This will cultivate their listening and speaking skills in the target language as well as those of reading and writing.

[Goal]

This course aims to build competence in the following areas:

1. Planning and organizing a major research paper
2. Choosing, evaluating, and using academic sources
3. Building on previous research in developing an original research contribution
4. Proofreading, editing, and revising research papers

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1" and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Each class consists of a short lecture or demonstration of academic writing principles and a number of writing or editing exercises. Often we will work together on exercises, both in small groups and as a class. We will also share and edit each other's writing, so students should be prepared for both giving and receiving constructive feedback on assignments.

Instructors will provide general feedback in class, and students will receive written feedback on submitted assignments.

[Outline and objectives]

This course reinforces the basic reading skills and strategies that are needed for academic success at the university level, and moves up through critical reading of more advanced texts toward the reading and understanding of academic papers.

These objectives are achieved via the use of such communicative methods as discussion and presentation in pairs, groups and at class level. This will ensure students actively communicate in English, helping them to enhance skills in listening and speaking as well as in reading and writing.

[Goal]

To improve students' reading speed and accuracy, enhancing their critical thinking skills, and exposing them to academic material, in order to prepare them for the Department's demanding course of study.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Through the textbook and its academic reading selections and exercises, students will explore real-world issues, discuss academic topics, read and study content-based and thematic materials; interact in pair work, small group work, and whole class activities that present opportunities for real-world use of language; acquire tools that promote the critical thinking skills crucial to success in the academic world; expand their vocabulary; and gain familiarity with the ingredients of widely used tests of English proficiency. This will occupy the first half of the course. During the second half, students will be introduced via more demanding material intended for non-specialists to a topic of academic concern, and then shown how best to approach and digest an academic paper on this topic.

Students will receive written and spoken feedback in class for both HW and exams that address areas needing improvement.

*Class 1 (Professor Evans) will be held online.

Freshman English I

Credit(s) : 1 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 月 1/Mon.1

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

Freshman English I aims to enhance students' academic prospects and cultivate language proficiency through reading a range of authentic academic texts. In particular, the students are provided solid understanding of common academic practices at the international standard, which they can apply to university-level debates and discussions; including micro-/macro-level reading, critical thinking and spontaneous discussion activities. The course also offers various tips for independent study, suggesting how to make a good transfer from the module to their own learning (and vice versa).

【Goal】

Through a series of interactive and voluntary engagements in and out of the class, the students are expected to acquire three dominant academic skills, as follows.

- Reading strategies for extensive and multiple texts
- Good note-taking skills in reading
- Critical thinking skills in coherent and logical argumentation

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】
Will be able to gain “DP 1” and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course will be conducted via informal and interactive lectures with a combination of in-class exercises and take-home assignments. The students will be engaged in a wide variety of interactive practices, such as: in-class activities on the materials; small-group and roundtable discussions; and reflective writing tasks.

All attendees are expected to actively participate, in which they mediate their understanding by producing language, and make every effort to contribute meaningfully to both planned and spontaneous activities. Feedback will be offered to students in due course, or as soon as possible after each assessment via an online learning management system.

【Grading criteria】

The final grade for this course will take into account grades awarded on all assignments in the following proportions:

- Module-final exam: 50%
- Weekly assignments: 40%
- Active engagement: 10%

【Changes following student comments】

The textbook is changed from the previous years, in alignment with a major revision made in Freshman English II.

【Equipment student needs to prepare】

None.

【Others】

Analogous to other courses in GIS, your attendance is strictly monitored. Those who have three or more unauthorised absences will automatically receive a failing grade; it should also be noted that late attendance with no prior notice will end up downgrading your final mark significantly.

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed in accordance with Freshman English I, which focuses on lectures and participating in informal discussion and presentations. Students will grasp how to understand key information and language in short, video-based extracts from authentic lectures, as well as applying general language and critical thinking skills to express perspective and stance on the provided topics. Students will also be provided opportunities to utilise what has been learnt in other modules.

[Goal]

Students are expected to become competent at basic academic abilities of organising information and effective note-taking for follow-up discussions. This course also aims at helping students cultivate critical thinking skills in argumentation that can be applied to university-level debates and discussions.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

[Changes following student comments]
Considering that GIS students (freshers, Class 7 and 8) have ample opportunities to improve writing skill sets in their first year, but should grasp more regarding how to survive from lectures in all-in-English environment, Freshman English II changes its pedagogical focus from writing (since 2022) to listening and note-taking.

[Equipment student needs to prepare]
None.

[Others]
Analogous to other modules in GIS (including Freshman English I), your attendance is strictly monitored. Those who have three or more unauthorised absences will automatically receive a failing grade; it should also be noted that late attendance with no prior notice will also end up in downgrading a final mark.

[Prerequisite]
None.

【Outline and objectives】

This course aims at helping students cultivate skills in argumentation that they can apply to debate and discussion. Therefore, in this class, students will learn not only how to conduct themselves in debates and discussions, but also critical thinking, organizational and speaking skills.

Students will first learn the basics of argumentation, including analysis, the use of evidence, causal reasoning and reasoning from analogy, and refutation. They will then learn the technical aspects of how debates and discussions are structured before applying the argumentation skills they have acquired to actual team debates and small-group discussions.

【Goal】

Through the critical thinking exercises and practices in debates and discussions, students will become able to formulate arguments and express their opinions on various issues, as well as actively participate in group discussions. The skills they acquire through this course should prepare them well for the core content courses in the curriculum.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

In the first half of the course, each class is composed of a partial lecture on key concepts and in-class exercises (including small group discussions and presentations) to help students learn and apply the concepts. The second half of the course is centered on student debates and discussions. Students will be encouraged to evaluate their own performance and give each other feedback, and the instructor will provide oral and written feedback to each student.

Submission of assignments and feedback will either be in-class or via the Learning Management System.

Presentation and Public Speaking (Advanced)

Mark Birtles

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 木 3/Thu.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

Being able to take command of a room and speak confidently in front of other people is a vital skill, but one many people have difficulty with. The primary aim of this course is to build confidence and competence in public speaking, with the main focus on the preparation and delivery of two kinds of speech: informative and persuasive. This course will not only have relevance in an academic sense, but the skills learned can also be applied in both business and social settings.

【Goal】

Upon completing this course, students will have gained:

- Competency in identifying and analysing basic communication theory
- The ability to put this theory into practice
- Confidence in presentation and public speaking on a variety of topics
- Key skills in both verbal and non-verbal aspects of public speaking
- The ability to be an active listener and ask meaningful questions.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 2” and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Although there is some theoretical analysis, Presentation and Public Speaking is primarily a practical, skills-based course, with students producing meaningful class content. Submission of assignments and feedback will either be in-person or via the Learning Management System. Students will prepare and deliver speeches and learn essential skills along the way: how to select, organize and use materials to support an idea, delivery techniques, and how to effectively utilise multimedia tools in presentations.

Some students were mistaken in thinking that the Presentation and Public Speaking course had two parts, but that is incorrect. The "Standard" and "Advanced" levels have the same course content and students can only take this course once. Please see the "Others" section for more details.

【Equipment student needs to prepare】

A laptop will be required in many sessions. If access to a laptop computer is difficult, please inform the instructor.

【Others】

This course has two levels, "Standard" and "Advanced." This is not a two-part course: the two levels are designed to separate students based on English proficiency, so the instructors can tailor the content for different skill levels. Think carefully about which level is right for you before selecting the course. For the Advanced level course, students are expected to meet or exceed one of the following scores: TOEFL ITP 550, TOEFL iBT 80, IELTS 6.5 or IB Diploma (English as Language A).

[Outline and objectives]

English Test Preparation for IELTS is designed to teach language skills, effective test-taking techniques, and strategies for the IELTS examination.

[Goal]

This course is designed for students who are interested in improving their English test scores or who want to study in the United Kingdom, Australia or New Zealand in the future. Its purpose is to help you attain advanced command of English, which shall be reflected in your IELTS test scores.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Students will learn effective strategies for increasing scores in each section of the IELTS through class discussion and exercises throughout the course. These include becoming familiar with the test format, understanding question types, and learning how to expand speaking and writing responses. Personal advice on methods of individual study (which is strongly recommended) will be given as required. As this is a skills-based course, emphasis will be placed on practical skills rather than class lectures. To this end, students will also participate in regular vocabulary and idiom quizzes, as peer review activities. Feedback on coursework will be given during class.

The course will take into account test changes which came into effect August 1st 2019. [Goal] This course is designed for students who are interested in improving their English test scores or who want to study abroad in the future. Its purpose is to help you attain advanced command of English, which shall be reflected in your scores on the TOEFL iBT. The course is designed to help you express your own ideas in English on practical/academic topics. [Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?] Will be able to gain “DP 4”. [Method(s)] Students will learn effective strategies for increasing scores in each section of the TOEFL iBT by lecture and exercises throughout the course. These include becoming familiar with the test format, understanding question types, and learning how to expand speaking and writing responses. Personal advice on methods of individual study (which is strongly recommended) will be given as required. As this is a skills-based course, emphasis will be placed on practical skills rather than class lectures. To this end, students will also participate in regular vocabulary and idiom quizzes, as peer review activities. Comments on activities will be given in class. Submission of assignments and feedback will be on the Learning Management System. [Active learning in class (Group discussion, Debate.etc.)] あり / Yes [Fieldwork in class] なし / No [Schedule] 授業形態 : 対面/face to face <table border="0" style="width: 100%; border-collapse: collapse;"> <thead> <tr> <th style="text-align: left;">No.</th> <th style="text-align: left;">Theme</th> <th style="text-align: left;">Contents</th> </tr> </thead> <tbody> <tr> <td>1</td> <td>Introduction</td> <td>Introduction</td> </tr> <tr> <td>2</td> <td>Diagnostic test</td> <td> <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ・ Abridged test in class for diagnostic purposes </td> </tr> <tr> <td>3</td> <td>Speaking (I)</td> <td> <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ・ Vocabulary and idiomatic expression quiz (V&I quiz) ・ Review diagnostic test ・ Strategy for the Speaking section; question types ・ Speaking exercises: Independent tasks ・ Typical speaking topics: urban life, university life </td> </tr> <tr> <td>4</td> <td>Listening (I)</td> <td> <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ・ V&I quiz ・ Review Speaking (I) ・ Strategy for the Listening section; question types ・ Listening exercises: academic lectures ・ Typical lecture topics: arts, life science, physical science, social science </td> </tr> <tr> <td>5</td> <td>Writing (I)</td> <td> <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ・ V&I quiz ・ Review Listening (I) ・ Strategy for the Writing section ・ Writing exercises: integrated tasks ・ Typical writing topics: school life, university life, </td> </tr> <tr> <td>6</td> <td>Reading (I)</td> <td> <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ・ V&I quiz ・ Review Writing (I) ・ Strategy for the Reading section; question types ・ Reading exercises ・ Typical reading topics: arts, life science, physical science, social science </td> </tr> </tbody> </table>	No.	Theme	Contents	1	Introduction	Introduction	2	Diagnostic test	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ・ Abridged test in class for diagnostic purposes 	3	Speaking (I)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ・ Vocabulary and idiomatic expression quiz (V&I quiz) ・ Review diagnostic test ・ Strategy for the Speaking section; question types ・ Speaking exercises: Independent tasks ・ Typical speaking topics: urban life, university life 	4	Listening (I)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ・ V&I quiz ・ Review Speaking (I) ・ Strategy for the Listening section; question types ・ Listening exercises: academic lectures ・ Typical lecture topics: arts, life science, physical science, social science 	5	Writing (I)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ・ V&I quiz ・ Review Listening (I) ・ Strategy for the Writing section ・ Writing exercises: integrated tasks ・ Typical writing topics: school life, university life, 	6	Reading (I)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ・ V&I quiz ・ Review Writing (I) ・ Strategy for the Reading section; question types ・ Reading exercises ・ Typical reading topics: arts, life science, physical science, social science 	7 Speaking (II) 8 Listening (II) 9 Writing (II) 10 Reading (II) 11 Speaking (III) 12 Writing (III) 13 Final practice test 14 Wrap-up and Review the Course	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ・ V&I quiz ・ Review Reading (I) ・ Speaking exercises: Integrated tasks ・ Typical speaking topics: school life, civic responsibilities, university life ・ V&I quiz ・ Review Speaking (II) ・ Listening exercises: conversations ・ Typical conversation topics: office hours, service encounters ・ V&I quiz ・ Review Listening (II) ・ Writing exercises: independent tasks ・ Writing based on knowledge and experience, giving opinions ・ Typical writing topics: school life, university life ・ V&I quiz ・ Review Writing (II) ・ Reading exercises ・ Typical reading topics: arts, life science, physical science, social science ・ V&I quiz ・ Review Reading (II) ・ Speaking exercises: both question types ・ V&I quiz ・ Review Speaking (III) ・ Writing exercises: both questions types ・ Abridged version of the test ・ Wrap-up and review the course [Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)] As this is an intensive class, students should prepare by studying academic/campus vocabulary, doing practice tests and conducting other forms of self-study prior to the first class. Professional Communication

Mark Birtles

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 1~4
Day/Period : 金 3/Fri.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

Communication is one of the key skills employers look for in potential employees. The rapid diversification of global communications and the collapse of traditional professional working practices in the first two decades of the twenty-first century have made these skills even more salient; modern employers increasingly demand transferrable skills, interdisciplinary knowledge and an ability to address a diverse audience. At their very heart, these competencies are enhanced by an ability to understand, construct and manipulate written information in order to use them in a variety of situations.

[Goal]

Graduates with a good command of English are likely to end up in the global job market, so this course aims at giving students a competitive edge when embarking upon their chosen career path. This course will help students prepare for the English-language job hunting process and provide an overview of the key professional communication styles, as well as a chance to see how these have a real application in the professional world.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 2” and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The first half of the course will look at the English-language job hunting process, from analysing a job advertisement to creating a CV (résumé) and cover letter. Students will learn how to make their application documents stand out from the crowd and then participate in a mock interview for the job. These documents and skills can be used in a real-life job, or internship, application. The second half of the course then aims to build familiarity in some of the key forms of professional communication, such as press releases, emails and business documents. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

その他属性 : 〈優〉

Those who take and pass this course may be given priority in the enrollment of some of the psychology courses.

[Prerequisite]

None.

[Outline and objectives]

In this course, students learn basic concepts and skills of statistical methods and data analysis.

[Goal]

The objective of this course is twofold. First, students learn basic concepts in statistics (e.g., mean, standard deviation, standard error, normal distribution, t-test and regression analysis). Second, practical skills for visualizing data and conducting appropriate statistical tests are introduced and students practice them using statistical software.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This is an introductory course on statistical methods and data analysis. It explains the basic ideas behind statistical testing and covers various statistical methods for survey and experimental data. Each class combines a lecture with hands-on exercises (free statistical software are used). In addition, an assignment is given after every class. At the beginning of class, feedback for the previous class is given using some comments from submitted assignments. Students are encouraged to ask questions and to be actively involved in the class.

【Outline and objectives】

To improve Japanese-to-English translation and intercultural communication skills. Major emphasis will be placed on: 1) non-verbatim translation, 2) logical clarity, and 3) language accuracy and 4) intercultural communication.

【Goal】

Students will learn to how to: (1) choose the appropriate English when translating from Japanese to English (2) use natural, idiomatic English (3) convey information and meaning accurately, logically, and in the proper register.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This introductory-level course in Japanese-to-English translation will be conducted in a workshop style. Methods will include both sight translation and written translation. In sight translation, students will be called on, individually and in groups, to orally translate a text from Japanese to English on the spot. This will be followed by feedback, discussion, and write-up. Students will also complete translation exercises and submit written translations for homework and peer review. Material will be taken from newspaper and magazine articles, essays, and short literary and academic texts. Feedback on homework assignments will also be given in class in the form of discussion and examples.

[Outline and objectives]

The objective is to enable students to apply Information Technology using personal computers and other communication devices. No specialized knowledge is required for this class. Solutions to common problems that occur using the Internet and the cloud will be discussed from a non-specialist perspective.

[Goal]

The goal is to give students essential computer literacy skills, including basic knowledge of operating systems (particularly Windows), Internet security and privacy issues, data protection, search engines, intellectual property issues, and presentation techniques using software applications. Evaluation is based on student presentations and submitted reports.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The classes will consist of lectures and interactive presentations by students. Time will also be given for students to work on projects using computers in the classroom and to obtain personal guidance.

- (1) For student presentations, feedback will be given after each presentation.
- (2) For responses to the general quiz near the end of the semester, feedback will be given in the final class.

[Outline and objectives]

What is literature? What happens when we are reading a novel or studying a text? At its base, the study of literature is an ongoing conversation about these questions. This course prepares students to take part in that conversation by introducing the major concepts, tools, and theories of literary research. Students will broadly explore the historical issues that shape the field and cultivate an approach to critical reading that can be utilized in upper-level literature classes. In particular, this course will cover concepts of canonization, genre, close reading, and historical and comparative methodologies.

[Goal]

Students will gain an understanding of the basic methodologies and approaches of literature research. Students will also develop critical reading and writing skills.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Classes will consist of lectures focused on specific concepts of literary theory and research followed by group discussions. Students will also utilize the methods we cover through reading and responding to selected texts. In-class feedback will be given for daily reaction papers and written assignments.

Introduction to English Literature

Christopher Edward John Simons

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 水 1/Wed.1

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

The objectives are to introduce English literature in the historical context and provide a general knowledge of literature for foreign students.

[Goal]

Students will study facts and ideas of English literature, learn how to read literary works, and widen the cultural frame of reference around the English speaking world.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

English Literature may be an unfamiliar subject to many Japanese students. In this course, the approach to literature is traditional. Students will acquire basic knowledge of literary terms, works, authors, literary movements, and its history. Commentary will be made on various related aspects about Britain, including geography, race, religion, society, politics, and so on, to help students have a deeper understanding and appreciation of the works. At the same time, students will consider how ideas about literature and its interpretations have changed in post-war Britain when many British colonial states became independent. During this period, the UK went through drastic shifts and changes, and became more multi-racial and multi-cultural. Reference will be made to critical theory and topics including nationalism, post-colonialism, globalisation, and ethnicity. Students will read literary works, see film adaptations, and have discussions.

Feedback will be given through Hoppii.

Day/Period : 木 1/Thu.1

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

Students will learn about the history and aesthetic conventions of Japanese traditional performing arts, presented as living traditions in the context of contemporary Japanese society, using a combination of textual and audiovisual materials. The course will provide ample opportunities to watch videoed performances as well as information regarding live performances. The first half of the semester will focus on noh-gaku. In the second half we look at kabuki, bunraku and contemporary theatre. This class will also feature guest lectures from master craftsman and performers depending on their availability.

To complement the academic background about the arts this class will also feature a direct, hands-on approach to the topics covered as well.

[Goal]

By the end of this course, students will have a good overview of how the performing arts in Japan is continually evolving from tribal ritual, to modern stage performance.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

1. This course will employ a number of teaching methods relevant to the subject, ranging from activity based classes, group discussions, research assignments and culminating in a final project that can be either literary (traditional essay, original script in a style learned in class) or performative (students can stage an original performance of their choosing)

2. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System and/or Google Classroom.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students must complete any homework tasks given prior to or following certain classes.

Reading assignments must be read before each class. Students will watch some video in class, but there will also be assignments to watch online content outside the classroom.

In addition, students must keep a viewing journal which describes one performative event they witness each week. Whether it is an actual live performance or an everyday interaction (such as: transaction at a convenience store, observing a couple arguing, someone reading sleeping on public transport etc.)

Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Textbooks]

Material - when necessary - will be provided by the instructor and distributed in class or online.

[References]

A list of related references - when necessary - will be provided by the instructor.

[Grading criteria]

Weekly live event journal 30%

Final assignment (paper or performance): 30%

[Changes following student comments]

As this is my first semester teaching here, I look forward to student comments.

[Others]

Watching on screens is a weak substitute for the live event. While it is not required or possible for the whole class to attend performances, I believe students will benefit immeasurably from going to see the traditional arts in person. For students interested in going on their own to performances around Tokyo, the instructor can give further information on the best ways to attend.

Introduction to Philosophy

Joel Van Fossen

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 木 1/Thu.1

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

You are reading a syllabus for Introduction to Philosophy right now, or at least you believe so. But how do you justify such a belief when you think of the possibility that you are in fact sleeping and just having a dream about reading these sentences? This might sound like a stupid question, but it actually leads us to explore more important questions about the world and ourselves that we cannot reject as nonsense. Philosophy tells you how to tackle those fundamental questions in comprehensive and systematic ways.

This course aims at being an introduction to philosophy and helping you become familiar with major branches in philosophy: you will learn how to work on such questions as "What exists in the world?" "How do we know about them?" and "How should we live?" by acquiring philosophical language and ways of thinking. They are the questions that have survived the history of humankind for thousands of years and enigmatically attracted an enormous number of people, so it is sensible for you too to be prepared before getting entangled alone in them.

Studying philosophy involves learning how to think carefully and how to express your thoughts clearly, which gives you transferable skills that every university student should have.

【Goal】

Upon completion of this course, students should have: 1) gained an understanding of major philosophical questions, views, and arguments; 2) learnt general critical thinking and writing skills; 3) become confident in delivering and discussing their own thoughts; and 4) cultivated an ability to apply philosophical theories to social and practical issues. Moreover, students will acquire certain intellectually virtuous attitudes such as patience and tenacity with which they can struggle with a difficult problem even when there is no guarantee of attaining one single answer.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Each class consists of a lecture with a discussion or debate to follow. The last class is a tutorial session for the final essay. Good comments in reaction papers will be introduced in the class and used for further discussions. Comments and feedback on assignments will be given on the online Learning Management System.

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

In addition to completing reading assignments and preparing for discussion beforehand, students are expected to review class materials after each class. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

【Textbooks】

There are no textbooks for this course. Class materials, including weekly handouts and other reading materials (typically excerpts from major philosophical works or introductory books), will be uploaded on Hoppii or distributed in class.

【References】

No texts are required. A full bibliography will be given to students at the beginning of the course.

【Grading criteria】

Evaluation will be based on class participation including writing reaction papers (40%), in-class/take-home tasks (30%), and final essay (30%). More than 2 unexcused absences will result in failure of this course.

【Changes following student comments】

Students have generally evaluated the class positively in the previous years, so the topics and styles will remain basically the same, but more effective measures are to be implemented to facilitate classroom discussions. Also, different types of assignments will be given through the course to promote student's creative ability as well as formal/academic writing skills.

【Equipment student needs to prepare】

Students should register their email address on Hoppii immediately after they decide to take this course, or before the second class of the semester at the latest. Visit Hoppii regularly for updates and class resources, as well as for the submission of assignments. Please also bring a computer to class for in-class surveys.

【Prerequisite】

There is no prerequisite for this course. Students who intend to register for this course are required to attend the first class (online). A screening will be conducted in the class if necessary.

Religious Studies

Robert Sinclair

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 1~4
Day/Period : 水 3/Wed.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

The primary purpose of this course is to expose students to some of the major questions in the scholarly study of religion. What is religion? What do religious symbols mean? Why do religions exist? How should we account for the differences among religions? Can or should we make judgments about religions, especially given our own commitments and biases? How does or should religion relate to morality? What is the relation of religion to culture? The selected readings will provide an introduction to the many approaches found in the study of religion, and provide examples of the various theories that arise when considering the complexity of religious experience. We will further discuss the early development of religion, and provide overviews of major and minor religions from Islam to Scientology.

[Goal]

The course aims to:

1. promote an enquiring, critical and sympathetic approach to the study of religion.
2. introduce students to the challenging and varied nature of religion, and to the ways in which this is reflected in experience, belief and practice
3. help students to identify and explore questions about the meaning of life, and to consider such questions in relation to religious traditions

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Outline and objectives】

The world we live in is a world of sovereign (nation-)states. It seems as if those countries we know today have always been there, at least in some form. This course will critically examine this view and look at the major developments in Western history from the 18th to the 20th century that shaped modern Europe:

The emergence of modern states, 1789, the idea of the nation and nationality; the Industrial Revolution; colonisation and imperialism; the idea of 'balance of power'; the onset of mass democracy; and two world wars.

【Goal】

1) Gain an in-depth understanding of the origin of European state-and-nation-building, its impact on the world, and how it still shapes our perceptions today; 2) Identify the major intellectual, economic, and political developments from 1789-1945; 3) understand how 'modernity' and 'modern life' took shape in Western Europe and why; 4) Train your academic writing and speaking skills.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】
Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

Each class has three components: 1) The main component of the class is a series of lectures. 2) Each class will begin with a discussion part where students will pre-discuss the week's topic. 3) Lastly, at the end of the course, depending on the number of students, you will be asked to sit a final exam or give a brief presentation.

Feedback will be given to each individual student's graded work in writing.

History of Modern East Asia

Chris H Park

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 1~4
Day/Period : 木 3/Thu.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course employs two perspectives to understand the histories of modern China, Japan, Korea, and Taiwan in the context of tradition and globalization from the late 19th century to the present. It examines the struggles of these four countries to preserve or establish their boundaries, identities, and cultures in a rapidly emerging modern world order. The course also looks at how individuals respond to and are shaped by the variety of modernity(ies).

The main questions that will be asked and addressed are:

What and why does the history of East Asia matter where capitalism has reached into all corners of the world and the term 'globalization' has become a cliché?

What are the major transformations and lines of continuity in East Asian history?

What factors in the historical development of modern China, Japan, Korea, and Taiwan explain changes and continuity?

[Goal]

This course has some basic goals including: 1) To familiarize students with some fundamental concepts of reconciliation, peace, and coexistence in a range of historical contexts; 2) To encourage students the capacity to analyze and to interpret historical theories and case studies in the local and global context of East Asia (China, Japan, Korea(s), and Taiwan) to ensure a transnational perspective; and 3) To help students develop an in-depth understanding of national, regional, and global dimensions in the makings of modern East Asia and interactions by shedding particular lights on human agency, nongovernmental organization, and local dynamics in East Asia to think critically about historical narratives.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course highly encourages students to engage in discussion and debate, and the capacity to interpret historical theories and case studies in the local and global context.

In addition, it is possible that some comments from the reaction papers may be introduced in class to elaborate on each lecture and to facilitate discussions.

Comments for assignments and the final reports are given through email.

Please check your university email account and Hoppii regularly to keep yourself updated.

【Outline and objectives】

This course examines the history of art in Japan from the prehistoric era to the contemporary period. For each historical period, we will consider the social and political context of images, practices of art-making, and the role of art in society at the time.

【Goal】

Students will learn to critically analyze various forms of art. They will also learn the terminology for discussing works of art and visual culture in Japan. They will also be encouraged to view the subject of art and art-making in the context of their other academic interests, applying questions and issues raised by interdisciplinary viewpoints.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

We will proceed in chronological order, analyzing major works of painting, sculpture, and architecture in each art historical period. Emphasis is placed upon acquiring a fundamental knowledge of Japanese art history while developing skills of visual analysis and understanding works of art in historical, social, and global context. Regular assignments are also intended to relate art and art history to other topics of academic interest, and feedback will also be given in class in the form of discussion. Students will apply these skills in a final paper and presentation.

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

What is music, how is it made, and what does it mean to 'appreciate' it? In this course we will investigate these and other questions surrounding music-making and musical experiences. Each week students will participate in directed listening and music-making activities as we explore various genres of music with an emphasis on Western music traditions.

[Goal]

Students will be able to:

- (1) develop vocabulary to talk about music;
- (2) develop listening skills;
- (3) develop ability to interpret, appreciate, and critique music in a variety of forms and contexts.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The course is taught through a combination of lectures, guided listening sessions, musical activities, and group discussions. The course will facilitate self-learning through required weekly reading and listening assignments that will be assessed through short writing assignments, as well as collective learning through a final group presentation. Feedback will be given collectively in class or through the Learning Management System (Google Classroom), depending on the nature of the assignment.

[Outline and objectives]

This course is a practical, semester-long practice of nohgaku.
We will have hands on experience of the following:

1. Noh dance
2. Noh chant
3. Noh instruments
4. Kyogen style speech

[Goal]

By the end of this course, students will have:

1. Memorized the movement and chant for one shimai (short dance).
2. Be familiar with the flute, and hand drums of noh.
3. Be able to chant in a group of a short excerpt from a full noh.
4. Be able to differentiate between noh and kyogen.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

1. This course will use traditional teaching methods of hands on experiential practice.
2. Students will be using their voices and bodies to repeat the techniques learned in class and express themselves.
3. Traditional techniques of noh instruction will be utilized. For instance, students will be required to sit on the floor (seiza) (exemptions will be made for those with physical limitations).

[Outline and objectives]

The purpose of this course is to familiarize students with contemporary Australian society. With Australia as a case study, we also understand the diversity of cultures around the world and the significance of enhancing communication with people from other cultural backgrounds.

[Goal]

The course will examine key social issues such as reconciliation, immigration and Australia's cultural links to Europe, the United States and Asia. The course will also present an overview of Australian history in order to provide context for present-day cultural concerns.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Weekly lectures will focus on different aspects of Australian culture and will be followed by classroom discussion. Students are expected to participate in these discussions and share their thoughts on the material with the rest of the class. They are also required to give a class presentation based on their own research. Finally, students will write an essay to be turned in during the final class.

On completion of the course, students will have an understanding of the issues facing contemporary Australia, as well as an insight into its past. Students can also expect to improve critical thinking and presentation skills.

Comments on activities will be given in class. Submission of assignments and feedback will be on the Learning Management System.

[Outline and objectives]

This course will provide an introduction to the culture and society of contemporary Britain. Students will acquire knowledge about Britain: its geography, climate, history, traditional culture, religion, political system, society, Britishness, and so on. The course will survey British society following globalization after Thatcher's government. Britain in the 70's was a nightmare, economically crippled, politically in a quagmire, and yet culturally vibrant. Thatcher, as prime minister (1979-1990), changed Britain drastically in the 80's. She insisted on free enterprise and deregulation, employed monetarist policies, privatized nationalized industries, passed legislations to weaken trade unions' political power, and was tenaciously skeptical about the deepening of European integration. However, socially, she was conservative and put an emphasis on the importance of traditional family, a self-help work ethic and community. Whether her policies worked well or not is still in discussion, but she is commonly thought to have prepared the way for globalisation, economic success, and the rise of so-called Cool Britannia. Political issues are often related to nation, religion, immigration, ethnicity, class, globalisation, gender, youth culture, and so on.

With UK as a case theme, we also understand the diversity of cultures around the world and the significance of enhancing communication with people from other cultural backgrounds.

[Goal]

Students will (1) acquire the general knowledge of the society and people in contemporary Britain, (2) learn how one of the most globalized nations has gone through the changes, and (3) think about the new realities and the implications of the changes. By comparing the situations in Britain and Japan, students will gain clearer perspectives on complex issues common in the most advanced and affluent countries.

With UK as a case theme, we also understand the diversity of cultures around the world and the significance of enhancing communication with people from other cultural backgrounds.

[Goal]

Students will (1) acquire the general knowledge of the society and people in contemporary Britain, (2) learn how one of the most globalized nations has gone through the changes, and (3) think about the new realities and the implications of the changes. By comparing the situations in Britain and Japan, students will gain clearer perspectives on complex issues common in the most advanced and affluent countries.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Students will attend lectures, read related materials, write short essays, watch videos and films, and have two written examinations.

Feedback will be given through Hoppii.

Introduction to Media Theory

Stevie Suan

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 1~4
Day/Period : 木 2/Thu.2

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

We live in a media-saturated world, where every part of our lives is deeply interconnected with some type of media: smartphones with us at all times, the vastness of the internet, our regular media diets of films, series, videos, tweets, SNS, music, and more. Increasingly, living life is done mainly through media, but how do we go about analyzing this media-filled world around us? With this point of departure, this class will give an overview of the foundational concepts for contemporary media theory, examining some of the ideas from the most influential thinkers of media. These theories explore not just the technical operations of media, but how they function in society, how media work on us and how we work with and through them. In examining the theories about media, students will learn different methods to examine and analyze the media around us and the society we live in. By studying these theories, students will gain a general understanding of how to think about media, helping them to better navigate our media-saturated world.

【Goal】

In addition to teaching the students about media theory, this class aims to develop critical thinking and analytical skills. Throughout the semester students will: 1) learn various methodologies for approaching media; 2) examining the theories about various media; 3) explore how to apply these theories and concepts to other subjects; 4) learn how to conduct analyses of different media.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will be lecture-based, with visual material such as clips of films and images. Students will be asked to have group discussions and analyses on certain themes. Each week students will be provided with an academic reading relevant to the topic. These readings will be important background information and/or will be directly addressed as the topic of the lecture and discussion. Lectures will explain in detail and through examples the topic for that class. Discussions based on the lecture will be facilitated by questions from the instructor to help the students explore and develop their critical and analytical skills for that topic. Students will be assessed on their understanding of the lectures and readings through their presentations and papers. Students will receive feedback in class and in written form, based on a grading rubric.

Manga Studies

Stevie Suan

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 木 2/Thu.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This class will provide an introduction to the field of manga studies. Here we will explore how manga operates as a type of media, analyzing manga from a multidisciplinary perspective. This means that we will look at manga from a variety of different perspectives, including its modes of reading/viewing, economics, aesthetics, and political history while considering its place in Japanese society and abroad. We will learn what makes manga specific as a type of media and how that allows us to delve into its particularities. This includes examining how manga mediated different shifts in Japanese society, as we explore the differences in the major manga genres, and how they cover various topics, from gender to memory. Beyond the local, we will ask what manga made outside of Japan can tell us about global the spread of media. We will also ask what manga, a media form that developed from paper and print, can tell us about other issues regarding the digitalization of our world as it moves into new formats for the 21st century.

[Goal]

In addition to teaching the students information about manga, its surrounding cultures, and business practices, this class aims to develop critical thinking and analytical skills. Throughout the semester students will: 1) learn the specific history of manga; 2) how to analyze manga as media; 3) examine how manga interacts with other media and society; 4) explore how to critically engage with manga.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Classes will be lecture-based, with visual material such as clips of films and animation. Students will be asked to have group discussions and analyses on certain themes and specific manga. Each week students will be provided with an academic reading relevant to the topic. These readings will be important background information and/or will be directly addressed as the topic of the lecture and discussion. Lectures will explain in detail and through examples the topic for that class. Discussions based on the lecture will be facilitated by questions from the instructor to help the students explore and develop their critical and analytical skills for that topic. Students will be assessed on their understanding of the lectures and readings through their presentations and papers. Visual Arts

Aquiles Hadjis

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 水 3/Wed.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

The advent of digital photography and the present ubiquity of high speed internet and camera phones has sent most of us into a frenzy of image production and consumption. We simply recognize when a particular picture or video “hits the spot”, but how is that effect achieved? Is everyone a photographer now? Are our memes real art?

This course invites participants to answer those questions through a practice-based inquiry into image making in both “documentary” and “artistic” modalities.

【Goal】

What special conditions make an image get closer to being seen as “art” or at least “artistic”? Is the way we document our daily life on social media the same as a “real” documentary? How often do you look at the images you post online afterwards, and have you ever printed them?

This course aims to foster a critical eye towards camera use and the imagery it generates. Among other topics, it will explore basic techniques in image making which the participants will experience practically during the semester, including camera operation (full manual operation) and the basic handling of subjects and locations (lighting, composition, editing) gaining insight into what documentary or art photography is/isn’t. Students will learn the basics of ‘making’ photographs and gain practical experience in working with real-life subjects. Drawing upon these experiences, students will prepare a final project based on a theme and methodology to be decided in class.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course uses a practice-based learning approach centered around the production of still photography with some video. Workshops, assignments and supporting lectures are employed to develop students’ basic understanding of image making using examples from many eras and contexts. Students create an Instagram account for the course and post one photograph daily in response to a weekly class project. Final submission comprises a project portfolio, a written project statement, and evidence of participation (i.e., weekly assignments, class discussion).

13	Final Project Review and Submission	Reviewing final portfolios and technical challenges prior to submission.
14	Final Presentation and Wrap-up	Final students’ presentation on their projects and feedback session.

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Students must regularly take photographs and or videos, and concentrate on organizing them coherently in groups. Every week students are expected to participate in a camera-based assignment, which will be discussed in class. In order to track progress, students are expected to create a new Instagram account and post a single image taken daily (7 days x 12 weeks = 84 images). They are also expected to use the photobook resource in the library and do assigned readings. Preparatory study and review time for this class are about 2 hours each.

【Textbooks】

No textbook will be used. Handouts and reading materials will be distributed in class.

[Grading criteria]

Participation: this applies to daily posts (or multiple image posts for a project) to Instagram for weekly photo projects (minimum of 84 images total for projects). More than 2 unexcused absences will result in failure of this course.

Main Project: Each student must produce a portfolio (booklet) of 8-12 images selected from photographs made of one subject (or theme) during the course. Students are free to choose their subject but it must be discussed with the instructor and peers. A written project statement will be required. A template for the portfolio will be provided but students' proposals about using other templates or presenting video (or alternative printed formats) will be considered by the instructor on a case by case basis.

Presentation: each student must make short presentations (3-5 minutes) when they settle the plan for the project and when they conclude it. Additional casual presentations connected to assignments may be requested.

The final grade is based on: Participation 30%, Class Presentations 20%, Main Project 50%.

[Changes following student comments]

Changes have been made to help students to produce photographs of a higher conceptual and practical skill as well as design and present their projects.

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

Students will need a laptop, a camera (mobile-phone cameras are the minimum) and general stationary (e.g. pen, pencil, glue, tape, paperclips). Please note that the use of a smartphone camera is acceptable for this course. However, if you have regular access to a better camera, please bring it and the instructor will show you how to use it. For several of the assignments you will need to print out your images as contact sheets and booklets. Convenience store laser prints are acceptable.

[Others]

Students are expected to come to class on time, participate and show interest in class topics, and develop enthusiasm about the subject of their projects.

The instructor is a practicing artist and filmmaker whose work across disciplines (visual arts, music, installations, film and photography) has been shown at venues, publications and exhibitions around the world.

Topics in Arts: Fine Arts

Suzanne Mooney

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 1~4
Day/Period : 金 1/Fri.1

その他属性 : <優>

[Outline and objectives]

Drawing is at the root of expression and communication in fine art. Through this course, students gain a fundamental understanding of art, while also pushing the boundaries of drawing beyond a traditional understanding of the medium. The skills being taught start with traditional drawing methods, and throughout the course, the definition of drawing is expanded to include elements of photography, digital imaging, and computer code.

Fine art is often dismissed as purely subjective and beyond comprehension or academic interrogation. Through a structured, methodical approach to image-making, supported by a comprehensive introduction to basic theory, and examples of these methods in practice, students will gain the ability to hone in on an area of interest and apply drawing and image-making as a means of research or expression.

[Goal]

Learning how to 'look' is the biggest obstacle to successful drawing. Before even considering how to reproduce the appearance of an object or form, one must see beyond the obvious and the expected. Through active engagement in guided practical class activities and the production of an individual portfolio, students will gain an understanding of the potential of fine arts as a communicative tool, in addition to aesthetic experience and self-expression.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Students engage in weekly practical exercises supported by lectures introducing relevant artists and their works. Exercises take the form of drawing activities that ask students to visually explore an object/subject.

Working towards an individual approach, students produce a portfolio of drawings. In addition to a final portfolio of drawings, students are required to keep a weekly sketchbook and take part in presentations and discussions in class.

Students will receive direct feedback and critique in class, combined with regular written feedback or grades for assignments submitted online. For major assignments, a grading rubric will be provided and explained in detail.

[Outline and objectives]

Images seen on walls and in public spaces are rarely random. Most are designed to grab attention and make the viewer want to do something, whether it be desire a car, a drink, a movie, or to share in an idea such as a political message or charity. If images always carry messages, this course explores such message through the practice of making images.

[Goal]

During this course, we will learn how visual messages are conveyed through the acquisition of essential skills (e.g. use of grids, balance, rhythm, typography). We will also develop a working understanding of the impact that images have upon contemporary society. In doing so, the course aims to encourage students' critical awareness of surrounding visual environments.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Blending theory and practice to introduce the basics of Visual Communication Design, the first part of the course looks at how and why we "read" images in different ways. The second part looks at supporting students through the process of designing an advertisement. To develop a contextual understanding of the subject, students also create a dedicated Instagram account for collecting advertisements seen around Tokyo. Final submission comprises a final project (advertisement) and evidence of participation (Instagram posts). Attendance is recorded weekly using visual media (e.g. photograph). Feedback is given via dialogue and discussion of work in class.

Introduction to Linguistics

Yutai Watanabe

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 火 2/Tue.2

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

The aim of this course is to provide students with an essential understanding of linguistics, with examples drawn from the English language; the course begins by outlining diachronic, synchronic and contrastive perspectives, while illustrating the history and regional diversity of English. As an introduction to 200/300 level linguistics-related courses, subsequent lectures are dedicated to surveying phonetics, phonology, morphology and syntax, followed by semantics. The last part of the course deals with language typology and universals, and refers to some of the key topics in sociolinguistics.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) have an understanding of linguistics as a scientific study, distinguished from language learning for practical purposes,
- (2) understand key terminology, concepts and theories in the major fields of linguistics, and
- (3) acquire basic research skills needed in more advanced linguistics courses.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course is a combination of lectures and discussions about pre-assigned topics. Students have to address review and application questions given in advance. Submitted assignments and tests are reviewed in detail and commented on in the following week’s lecture.

Introduction to Linguistics

Nobumi Nakai

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 1~4
Day/Period : 金 2/Fri.2

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

The aim of this course is to provide students with an essential understanding of linguistics, with examples drawn from the English language; the course begins by outlining diachronic, synchronic and contrastive perspectives, while illustrating the history and regional diversity of English. As an introduction to 200/300 level linguistics-related courses, subsequent lectures are dedicated to surveying phonetics, phonology, morphology and syntax, followed by semantics. The last part of the course deals with language typology and universals, and refers to some of the key topics in sociolinguistics.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) have an understanding of linguistics as a scientific study, distinguished from language learning for practical purposes,
- (2) understand key terminology, concepts and theories in the major fields of linguistics, and
- (3) acquire basic research skills needed in more advanced linguistics courses.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course is a combination of lectures and discussions about pre-assigned topics. The lectures are delivered using PowerPoint slides and Internet sources. Students have to address review and application questions given in advance. Attendance at the first class is mandatory. Submitted assignments and tests are reviewed in detail and commented on in the following week’s lecture.

Contrastive Linguistics

Geraldo Faria

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 金 2/Fri.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

In this course, you will learn how Contrastive Linguistics is defined as an academic subject. By drawing on topics related to variations within a language (i.e. dialects) or between related languages, this course provides an accessible and engaging overview of Contrastive Linguistics.

[Goal]

The development of practical skills through the acquisition of a basic knowledge of Contrastive Linguistics. Three main skills are emphasized: 1) finding similarities and differences between dialects or related languages; 2) compiling data for documentation and analysis; and 3) gaining basic knowledge of under-documented and endangered languages.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

After an introduction to the topics in the form of mini-lectures, examples from target languages are presented for discussion and analysis. This course contains assignments and writings outside of class, which may be presented in class. Note that the suggested topics may vary slightly depending on the number of registered students and their interests. Finally, submissions of assignments and their feedback will be via Google.docs (unless students are notified previously).

【休講】 English Grammar: The Basics

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : | Year : 1~4

Day/Period :

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

The most important ingredients of the grammar of the English language.

【Goal】

A major step toward the ability to understand how sentences of English work.

For why you might want this ability, see the course description for English Grammar Extended, which you should consider taking after English Grammar: The Basics.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

We follow Huddleston, Pullum and Reynolds’ textbook, which is based on (but is very much smaller and simpler than) the earlier book The Cambridge Grammar of the English Language (CGEL). Both are descriptive grammar books, saying how sentences of English are constructed (and not how the authors imagine they should be constructed). As its publisher says, CGEL “is firmly based on research in modern linguistics and rejects many errors of the older tradition, supporting its departures from traditional grammar with reasoned argument”. So the textbook will almost certainly disagree with any grammar or other textbook that you’ve used in any previous English course.

The book and course are only theoretical where necessary. (There are very few tree diagrams.) So if other syntax books alarm you, don’t worry. Before each class, you have to read and digest ten or so pages of the textbook. We’ll discuss that part of the book, and related exercises, in the class. You are very welcome to come up with apparent counterexamples to what’s written in the book, and so forth.

Students both submit work for assignments and get comments on this work via “Hoppii”.

【References】

Rodney Huddleston and Geoffrey K Pullum, The Cambridge Grammar of the English Language (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2002). (Do not use any book intended for, or often used by, language learners or high-school students.)

【Grading criteria】

Evaluation will be based on two examinations (50% + 50%). Both examinations will be “open book”, and will test real understanding and ability to analyze (as opposed to mere memorization).

【Changes following student comments】

A further slight reduction in the quantity of what’s shown on screen during the class, a further slight increase in the quantity of annotations that can be examined outside the class.

TESOL I: Introduction

Machiko Kobori

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 木 3/Thu.3

その他属性 : 〈グ〉

【Outline and objectives】

The course is for students intending to teach English; it is an introduction to second language (L2) acquisition and pedagogy. It encourages students to raise their awareness as language teachers.

【Goal】

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to do the following:

1. Explain the core issues in L2 acquisition research.
2. Examine the connection between L2 research and pedagogy.
3. Conduct research on instructed L2 learning, and relate the findings to L2 learning and teaching in Japan.
4. Conduct research on L2 pedagogical approaches integrated with ICT
5. Understand what is needed to qualify as an English teacher.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】
Will be able to gain “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course focuses on the teaching and learning of English. Students will learn theories of first and second language acquisition and a range of opportunities to explore research studies and pedagogy on EFL/ESL education. The course will be highlighted by the students' individual performance: they are to choose one of the course topics and then make a presentation on it. They are required to practice their ICT pedagogical skills through the presentation as well as learning its content. Students are also required to take a final exam and submit a written assignment on a related issue.

Submission of the final requirements and feedback will be on the learning management systems.

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course will aim to teach students the current best practices in educational technology for language learning with reference to teaching professionals. As such, we will explore pedagogical approaches to using technology as well as the actual educational technology apps and eco systems that can be used.

[Goal]

By the end of the course students should be able to:

- 1 - understand the Google educational eco systems for teachers and students,
- 2 - be able to use the Google apps and approaches for their project work in (4) below,
- 3 - work collaboratively in teams using the apps and tools in (2) above to complete the work in (4) below,
- 4 - create and design an appropriate project website that hosts students' multimedia work,
- 5 - maintain a personal reflective blog for the duration of the course and share it with the class and teacher.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 2" and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Some classes will have a mini demonstration of various ed-tech tools by the teacher followed by time for students to repeat the same actions by themselves. Other classes will teach various research techniques using technology, followed by longer periods of research time for students to gather information. All classes will have homework - sometimes design work, sometimes research work, sometimes written work, and sometimes commenting on the work of others. At the beginning of class feedback for the previous classes homework will be given by the teacher. All assignments will be done on Google Docs/Slides/Sites/Blogs and checked online at the start of the next class.

【Outline and objectives】

This course is for students intending to explore second language learning (SLL) focusing on motivational issues within the context of comparative education. It provides a basic understanding of different conceptual frameworks of second language (L2) motivation and a historical overview of the development of L2 motivational studies focusing on social, cognitive and educational aspects of motivational psychology. Its purpose is to give an insight into the significant variables of L2 motivation as core elements in L2 education from a global perspective. It explains how they are affected by globalisation and local settings related to L2 learners, such as their ethnic background, age, language preferences, L2 learning conditions, etc., and especially by comparing the teaching of English to other foreign languages. This course also studies how to put related knowledge into practice: it gives an insight into collections of related research studies ranging worldwide, and it is expected to stimulate debate on how to deal with motivational aspects of learners, lessons, teaching materials, evaluation, etc. effectively in L2 education.

【Goal】

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to do the following:

- (1) Learn different concepts, perspectives, and theories in L2 motivation.
- (2) Explain various factors that influence building conceptual frameworks of L2 motivation.
- (3) Utilise the theoretical knowledge of L2 motivation to explain motivational issues of L2 education.
- (4) Discuss motivational approaches to deal with controversial issues of L2 education.

History of Philosophy

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 1~4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

Over 2,000 years ago in ancient Greece, Socrates introduced a new mode of general and abstract inquiry, which he described as "the love of wisdom" or "philosophy." This course focuses on two areas of the history of philosophical inquiry in ancient Greece and early modern Europe: metaphysics and epistemology. Metaphysics deals with the first principles of being, causation, and identity. Metaphysical questions covered in this course include: What is most fundamental about reality? What does it mean for one thing to cause another thing to happen? What does it mean for something to be the same thing over time? Epistemology deals with the nature and possibility of knowledge. Questions surveyed include: What is knowledge? Do we know anything? If so, what do we know? Philosophers surveyed in this course include Plato, Aristotle, René Descartes, John Locke, David Hume, and Immanuel Kant.

【Goal】

This course has four primary learning goals. First, students will learn about various and diverging views throughout the history of philosophy with a focus on metaphysics and epistemology. Second, students will improve critical thinking skills when engaging with abstract philosophical reasoning. Third, students will improve their reading skills when confronting nuanced and challenging text. Finally, students will improve their writing skills to communicate complex ideas clearly and confidently.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】
Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Roughly one hour of each meeting will consist of an interactive lecture with slides. Students will then write a short in-class reflective writing exercise. Finally, each class will conclude with an interactive debate or discussion. The mid-term and final exams will be a combination of short and long-form essay questions. These exams will be written in class during exam days. Students will receive feedback on their exams via the Learning Management System.

【Outline and objectives】

We make decisions every day, but some decisions are better than others. This raises some important questions: Which decisions should we make? And more generally, what kind of life is worth living? Ethics is the rational inquiry into these questions. In this course, we will explore two central dimensions of ethics. First, we will consider the nature of well-being or what it means for one's life to go well. However, we not only care about our own well-being. We should also consider other people's interests. Therefore, the second main topic we will explore in this class will be morality. Morality is concerned with making the right decisions regarding the interests and lives of others.

【Goal】

This course has four primary learning goals. First, students will learn about various and diverging views on the philosophy of well-being and moral philosophy. Second, students will improve critical thinking skills when engaging with abstract reasoning in ethically challenging scenarios. Third, students will improve their reading skills when confronting nuanced and challenging text. Finally, students will improve their writing skills to communicate complex ideas clearly and confidently.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

Classes will sometimes begin with a short quiz to assess comprehension of weekly readings. Then roughly one hour of each meeting will consist of an interactive lecture with slides. Students will then write a short in-class reflective writing exercise. Lastly, students will participate in a class discussion or debate. Before the semester's final meeting, students will write a critical and constructive report on a draft of the final essay of the course. In the final meeting, students will discuss these reports with each other and the instructor. Submissions and feedback for the peer-review report, peer-review report response, and the final paper will be provided via the Learning Management System. Quiz feedback will be provided at the beginning of each class.

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed for beginners (or more advanced students). The aim of this course is to help students acquire basic skills of communication. In our epoch of "globalization", knowledge of only one foreign language (for example, English) is far from sufficient. By learning French, students will have more opportunities to work on the world stage.

[Goal]

The goal of this course is to develop basic daily communication skills: asking for information, answering questions, speaking about oneself, and understanding simple texts.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain "DP 3".

[Method(s)]

Mr.Okamura (French BI) and I will use the same textbook (see below) and conduct the class in relay. The students will learn all basic skills - speaking, listening, reading and writing although learning of practical skills takes precedence in this course. (Mr. Okamura will rather focus on learning the grammar. It is therefore required that the students attend both of the courses). Active participation is necessary not only for the acquisition of communicative skills through various means (e.g., role-playing), but for an understanding of French culture or that of other French-speaking countries.

The students will get information about the course by way of Learning Management System (LMS).

During the semester, the students are required to submit several assignments through LMS. They will get them back equally through LMS.

Active participation in role-playing is important.

[Changes following student comments]

The covid 19 situation has caused some problems on a larger or smaller scale: confusion of schedule because of the alternation of online classes and face-to-face classes, awkwardness of class activities especially on oral level because of distance between students in the classroom, etc. I will try to create an optimum situation which can facilitate students' class performance.

[Outline and objectives]

Basic Spanish grammar and conversation.

[Goal]

By the end of the semester, students should be able to write, speak, and understand basic Spanish, in the simple present and past tense.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 3".

[Method(s)]

This course begins with the Spanish alphabet. Basic Spanish grammar will be explained during each weekly lesson. After an explanation of grammatical principles, students will be asked some practical questions. This class advances slowly. In order to prepare, students should do the review exercises at home and bring their textbook and a Spanish-Japanese dictionary to class (see below). To foster a deeper appreciation of Spanish and Latin American cultures, some Spanish songs and movies will be shared, time permitting.

The feedback for homework will be given through Hoppii Learning Assistant System.

Please note that the first week will be offered online to avoid overcrowding the classroom. The Zoom URL for the first class will be announced on Hoppii Learning Assistant System before the semester begins.

【Outline and objectives】

Basic Spanish grammar and conversation.

【Goal】

By the end of the semester, students should be able to write, speak, and understand basic Spanish, in the simple present and past tense.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 3”.

【Method(s)】

This course begins where “Spanish AI” and “Spanish BI” ended. Basic Spanish grammar will be explained during each weekly lesson. After an explanation of grammatical principles, students will be asked some practical questions. This class advances slowly. In order to prepare, students should do the review exercises at home and bring their textbook and a Spanish-Japanese dictionary to class (see below). To foster a deeper appreciation of Spanish and Latin American cultures, some Spanish songs and movies will be shared, time permitting. The feedback for homework will be given through Hoppii Learning Assistant System.

Day/Period :

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

Movies are not just a source of entertainment, but can also serve as a great resource to raise awareness about language as well as its sociocultural contexts. In this course, you will be introduced to various aspects of language through movies, drawing examples primarily from English. Some topics include: language and society, regional dialects, accent stereotypes, language and gender, and language play, etc.

【Goal】

Upon completion of this course, students will:

- 1) Be familiar with some basic (socio) linguistic aspects of English and other languages
- 2) Become aware of various dialects of English and how they are used in movies
- 3) Have a more analytical perspective on language presented in movies

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 3” and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

You will be assigned a set of reading materials in advance, which will provide some background information about the topic in focus. A comprehension quiz based on the reading will be given at the beginning of the class to make sure you have a basic understanding of the topic. Then the topic is explored with an additional lecture and presentations of selected movie clips, accompanied by pair/group work and discussions to promote further understanding. Toward the end of the semester, students will analyze a movie of their choice and present it in class. Feedback for assignments will be given either individually (paper/LMS) or shared during the class. Actual lesson plans and contents may be modified based on the number of students enrolled and their preferences/progress.

Introduction to Sociology

Daiki Hiramori

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 月 1/Mon.1

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

This course provides an overview of sociology as the scientific study of society, and in particular, the distinctiveness of the sociological perspective. This course begins by introducing the concept of “sociological imagination,” one of the core sociological tools to analyze society. Next, the course touches on sociological theory and social research methods to understand the distinctiveness of the sociological perspective in more detail. Then, topics, such as socialization and the life course, social interaction, networks and groups, organizations, families and intimate relationships, education, social stratification and inequality, race and ethnicity, gender, and sexuality, are covered as examples of how the sociological imagination can be applied to different areas of society. Through this course, students will acquire the basic sociological tools to analyze society by learning the key theories and methods used in sociology and applying them to a variety of areas of society in written assignments and in-class discussions. More details of social research methods will be covered in the course “Introduction to Social Research Methods.”

【Goal】

By the end of this course, students will be able to: (1) describe the key theories and methods used in sociology, (2) explain major substantive issues discussed in sociology (remembering/understanding), (3) apply the sociological imagination to analyze social issues (applying), and (4) compare and contrast various sociological tools to examine the association between individuals' daily lives and social institutions (analyzing).

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course is taught primarily through interactive lectures. A variety of active learning techniques, such as in-class writing assignments (one-minute papers), neighbor discussions (think-pair-share), and comment sheets, are used to accommodate the diversity in student learning styles. In-class quizzes are held occasionally so that students understand their own level of understanding of the course materials at the moment. Verbal and written feedback on assignments is given during class discussions and through using other tools as appropriate. Also, feedback for the previous class is given at the beginning of each class. Students are encouraged to visit the instructor during office hours for more personalized feedback.

Cultural and Ethnic Diversity in Japan

Keiko Nishimura

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 水 4/Wed.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This course discusses and examines cultural and ethnic diversity in Japan as institutional, interpersonal and internalized experiences.

【Goal】

At the end of this course, you should be able to:

- Explain such concepts as race/ethnicity, nationalism, minority and diversity
- Think cross-culturally, critically, and collaboratively about cultures and practices of “Japan” in specific and changing sociocultural contexts.
- Analyze, apply, and extend conceptual material both informally and formally through discussion and writing.
- Think critically about the relationship among cultural difference, personal experiences, and power dynamics.
- Understand and analyze a complex set of privileges we live with and how differently we are situated in the society accordingly
- Converse civilly with people whose backgrounds, social position, and beliefs are different from yours.
- Envision different ways to realize equality and equity

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Although the instructor will provide the basic framework in a lecture format, students are expected to actively participate in and contribute to class discussion. This includes asking questions, seeking clarification and offering your critical ideas and interpretation. In addition, a small group of 3-5 individuals will work on 1 presentation on weekly readings. Further directions will be given in class. Verbal and written feedback will be given on assignments.

Introduction to Cultural Anthropology

Simon Robert Glynn Petre

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 1~4
Day/Period : 木 5/Thu.5

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

Cultural anthropology examines the variety of ways humans exist in the world as cultural beings; the way they use symbols to interpret themselves and others; the way they organize political and economic systems; the way they think, imagine, feel, and communicate. Analyzing a number of case studies from around the globe, you will learn to think through the lens of "culture" as a way to interpret patterns of human life, sometimes surprisingly similar to, and other times vastly different from, each other. We will explore how anthropological thinking has contributed key concepts such as 'society,' 'politics,' 'nature,' 'communication,' etc. to an understanding of our contemporary world.

[Goal]

This course discusses and examines various issues in cultural anthropology as a discipline. At the end of this course, you will gain an understanding of:

- Historical origin and current issues in cultural anthropology
- The concept of culture and human diversity
- Participant observation and other methods of anthropological fieldwork
- Ethics of research in cultural anthropology

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

In this course, we will explore a variety of concepts and theories that help us understand the similarities, differences, connections and disconnections experienced by world communities. In particular, this course will focus on 'Cultural Anthropology' as a broad "field" to better understand how our culture is constructed, (mis)understood, maintained and challenged. In doing so, we will collectively deepen our understanding of society -hopefully in a different way than we are used to - and recognize and appreciate its diversity. Verbal and written feedback will be given on assignments.

Introduction to Psychology I

Takafumi Sawaumi

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 金 2/Fri.2

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

This is an introductory course in psychology. Students will learn the basic theories, research methods, and important findings from various sub-fields of psychology, and will develop a scientific understanding of how we think, feel, and act. Contemporary psychology is a very broad and diverse area. By necessity, then, the course will not be able to pursue all the topics in great depth. Introduction to Psychology I will focus primarily on the cognitive aspects of psychology, including brain functions, cognitive and sensory processes, state of consciousness, learning, and memory. Introduction to Psychology II will focus on the question of genes and environment, intelligence, personality, and psychological disorders. These two classes will complement each other to provide the basic knowledge for more specialized courses in psychology (e.g., social psychology, educational psychology, clinical psychology).

[Goal]

This course aims at providing an overview of the history, concepts, research methods, and empirical findings in the field of psychology, focusing on how people perceive and construct their surrounding “realities.” Students will acquire the ability to analyze human thoughts and behaviors through a scientific mindset. At the end of this course, students will be able to answer the following questions: How do our brains affect our behavior? How do we get to see and understand the world around us? Why do we sleep? How do we learn? How does memory work and how reliable is it?

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Methods of instruction include lectures, films, small group activities, and discussions. Students will engage in various hands-on activities to experience the concepts they learn in class. In these activities, students will also be asked to reflect on their daily experiences and share examples that illustrate these concepts. Quizzes are held occasionally and returned in the next class so that students understand their own level of understanding of the course materials at the moment. At the beginning of class, feedback for the previous class is given using some comments from submitted slips.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Before each class, students are expected to review their notes from previous classes and do the assigned readings. They must also download and print out handouts prior to each class and bring them to class to take notes. Occasionally, students will also be assigned homework (worksheets, questionnaires, etc). Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Textbooks]

Handouts and reading materials will be provided by lecturer.

[Grading criteria]

Students are evaluated based on midterm and final exams (35% each), in-class activities and quizzes (20%), and class participation (10%).

[Changes following student comments]

Students usually find this course interesting and eye-opening. I hope to continue engaging students with materials through various hands-on activities and discussions.

[Others]

Introduction to Psychology I and II can be taken in reverse order (II and then I), simultaneously, or independently (just I or just II). Students are strongly encouraged to take this class if they intend to enroll in 200 and 300 level courses in psychology. Students who have taken and passed Introduction to Psychology I or II may be given priority in the selection for Social Psychology I and II.

【Outline and objectives】

This is an introductory course in psychology. Students will be introduced to the basic theories, research methods, and important findings from developmental, personality, and clinical psychology.

【Goal】

This course aims at 1) providing an overview of the concepts, research methods, and empirical findings in the field of psychology and 2) developing a scientific understanding of how the human mind works. Students are expected to acquire a dynamic perspective of the human mind, i.e., learn how we constantly react and adapt to the external world. Through this course, students' employability skills in assessing and adapting to new situations are also expected to be improved.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

This course will focus on how nature and nurture interact to shape individuals and how people respond and adapt to their environment. Topics covered include human development, personality, intelligence, emotion, psychological disorders and their treatment. Instructional methods include assigned readings, lectures, videos, small group activities, and discussions. Occasionally, students are asked to take a quiz, which is graded and returned with comments in the next week. Feedback to students will be provided mainly by Reflection Papers at the end of each class.

【Outline and objectives】

This course introduces basic topics/theories of developmental psychology, specifically focusing on how “typical” individuals develop from infancy to adolescence as well as sharing characteristics of individuals following “atypical” development. Students will also develop skills for analyzing social phenomena and reflecting their own personal experiences from the perspective of developmental psychology.

【Goal】

Through this course, students are expected to:

- understand how “typical” individuals develop from infancy to adolescence, in different aspects (cognitive and social/emotional)
- learn some fundamental theories proposed by developmental psychologists, such as Piaget and Bowlby
- acquire some knowledge about developmental disorders and childhood mental disorders, including autistic spectrum disorders, attention deficit and hyperactivity disorder (ADHD), learning disorders, Down's syndrome, etc.
- develop skills of analyzing social and personal experiences from perspectives of developmental psychology
- build abilities to apply what one learned in classrooms to understand real-world psychological phenomena
- increase skills for expressing ideas about human behavior in English, through oral discussions and reflection papers

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Each week, students will learn concepts/theories of developmental psychology through a lecture and an oral discussion. When sharing ideas during oral discussions, students are expected to integrate knowledge acquired through the lecture as well as their own insight from daily life experiences. At the end of each class, students are asked to write a brief reflection paper, which is graded and returned by the beginning of the next class, with a comment from the lecturer. In the reflection paper, students are also encouraged to ask questions, which are shared anonymously and answered in the next class. Exams are held in the middle and at the end of the semester.

[Outline and objectives]

What are the effects of computers, cell phones, and television in our lives? Does the way we receive news or other information alter our perceptions of current events? Do our relationships with friends change depending on how we communicate with them?

The way we interact is mediated by communication technologies. This class is an introduction to media studies focused on how media has evolved and how it has come to shape and transform the way we communicate.

[Goal]

1. Introduce the history of major media and communication technologies.
2. Provide students with theoretical frameworks to understand and interpret media effects.
3. Build fundamental skills of media literacy.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Each course begins with a historical introduction for a better understanding of mass communication and its evolution.

We will discuss a variety of media forms such as print, sound, film, internet, as well as their evolution, and their impact on culture.

The last few weeks will focus on changing trends in media culture by looking at topics such as advertising, online gaming, and virtual reality. Students are always encouraged to share their views and interesting media content during class or through the Google Classroom stream.

Students are always welcome to send in questions by e-mail, these will be addressed at the beginning of each class.

Individual feedback on assignments and examinations will be provided through Google Classroom.

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed to provide an introduction to the study of International Relations (IR). It mainly examines the major theories of IR and IPE, including as realism, liberalism, constructivism, economic liberalism, mercantilism, and (neo)marxism (dependency theory).

[Goal]

The course objectives are: (1) To enable students to develop a broad understanding of the concepts and theories of IR; (2) To enable students to utilize the concepts and theories of IR for analyzing enduring questions in IR, such as war and peace, conflict, the rise of non-state actors, the role of international laws and organizations, economic interdependence and globalization, and development and underdevelopment in the Third World; (3) To enable students to acquire the ability to form their own answers to enduring and contemporary questions in international relations.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

In terms of the topics covered, this course provides the foundation for all other IR related courses, such as World Politics, International Security, the International Relations of the Asia-Pacific, and Seminar (International Relations B). This course will focus on major concepts and theories of IR, such as realism, liberalism, constructivism, economic liberalism, economic nationalism, and dependency theory. In order to enhance our knowledge and understanding of the dynamic mechanisms of international politics, it is necessary to master the key concepts and theories of IR. This is because IR theories, which are built on the accumulated knowledge of scholars over many years, offer us a tool to simplify complicated international phenomena.

[Outline and objectives]

This course introduces the structure and dynamics of politics in Japan, in the United States, and in the world. Throughout this course, we ask a variety of research questions: What is the purpose of government? Who is more powerful, a president or a prime minister? How do we count votes in a democracy? How does media affect politics? What did Trump do? Does democratization facilitate economic liberalization? How will global climate change impact international politics? Capitalism is compatible with democracy, isn't it? What do bureaucrats do? To answer these questions, students are expected to learn various theories and models in political science.

[Goal]

What you learn in this course will allow you to become an informed participant in political discussions and debates in your life.

Students can be expected to learn the following by the end of the course:

- to use and critique alternative explanatory systems of theories of political science.
- to analyze the effects of historical, social, political, economic, cultural, and global forces on the area under study.
- to recognize and assume one's responsibility as a citizen in a democratic society by learning to think for oneself, by engaging in public discourse, and obtaining information through the news media and other appropriate information sources about politics and public policy.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The course will consist mainly of lectures. Any and all comments and questions are welcome throughout the course. Common questions will be answered in class. We will be using Google Classroom for assignments, readings, and other class information.

【休講】 Introduction to Political Science

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : | Year : 1~4

Day/Period :

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

Politics can be viewed in various ways. For many, it deals with the government or governing of an entity such as a country. Others would say it has to do with the nature, distribution and dynamics of power. The authors of the course's textbook define politics as essentially a mechanism for deciding, in Harold Laswell's words, "who gets what, when, how." Political science is the study of the theory and practice of politics.

The course "Introduction to Political Science" provides a comprehensive overview of the study of politics. It explores the various meanings of politics, as well as political ideas and ideologies. It analyzes the state, different types of political regimes, and such political concepts as power, authority, freedom and justice. In introducing comparative politics, it examines political institutions, constitutions and law, the executive, legislative and judicial branches or dimensions of government. It delves into elections and voting, political parties and party systems, civil society, interest groups and the media. In introducing global politics, it presents traditional theories as well as critical approaches in global politics, security, diplomacy and foreign policy, international organizations and global political economy.

【Goal】

The course seeks:

- To introduce students to political science as an academic field of study.
- To acquaint students with the fundamental concepts, theories and approaches used by political scientists in studying political issues, processes and outcomes in different countries.
- To help students develop a critical awareness of Japanese and world politics and enhance their ability to analyze and discuss important political issues and events.

At the end of the course, a student

- Should have gained a good grasp of the fundamental themes, concepts, theories and approaches of political science.
- Should have improved her/his skills in analyzing important political events and developments in Japan and in the world.
- Should have acquired a strong foundation for pursuing further studies in political science and its various subfields.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

The course will consist mainly of lectures and open discussion. Students will be asked - and encouraged - to express their views on topics being discussed. Audio-visual aids (video clips, photos, maps illustrations) will be used to help make issues and events much more concrete and vivid to students, and to help stimulate discussion and debate. Feedback on assignments will be provided during class discussions, by email or through individual consultations.

【休講】 Introduction to Comparative Politics

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : | Year : 1~4

Day/Period :

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

This course introduces students to comparative politics, the study and comparison of politics across countries. One of the major subfields of political science, comparative politics focuses on power and decision-making within national boundaries, comparing these across countries. Taking a thematic approach, the course investigates the central ideas and questions in comparative politics.

The course starts off with discussions on key concepts and theoretical approaches in comparative politics and different comparative methods. It then examines the state, political regimes and political economy, going into deeper discussions of democracy and authoritarianism, regimes in developed, communist/postcommunist and developing countries. The course delves into executives, legislatures, judiciaries, bureaucracies, public policy, and subnational governments. It also explores political culture, political participation and political communication. The last sessions deal with important political processes, organizations and actors (elections, political parties, voters, interest groups, etc.)

【Goal】

The course seeks to acquaint students with comparative politics as an academic sub-discipline; to introduce students to key concepts and theoretical approaches used in studying politics in different countries; and to help students analyze political developments with a more critical eye and through a more comparative lens.

Introduction to Development Studies

Norio Usui

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 月 4/Mon.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

Why do we need to extend aid to developing countries? If needed, how can we support growth and development of recipient countries? Do we really know what prevents growth and development (poverty reduction) in developing countries? If not, how can we know them, and then how to develop aid strategy based on the identified constraints? If development aid contains lending, how can we assess debt repayment capacity of a recipient country? Can projects financed by our aid attain expected goals? How can we measure the impact of an aid-funded project that can be attributed to the project? The course aims to answer these critical questions in development aid policy. After reviewing the traditional development paradigms — Structural adjustments and Washington consensus (confusion), the course focuses on the emerging 3rd generation of development paradigm, which emphasizes “diagnostics” and “evaluation” in formulating an effective development aid policy. A unique feature of the course is its intensive uses of case studies to deepen students’ understanding.

[Goal]

Students who have taken this course should be able to:

- (1) understand how development aid is designed to resolve challenges in developing countries;
- (2) understand how development paradigms have been evolving and how the changes in development paradigms have affected development organizations’ operational strategies;
- (2) develop analytical skills to analyze development challenges and formulate an effective aid (and development) strategy.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?] Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The intent of this course is to expose the student to a range of ideas and issues in aid and development policy through an interactive learning process. Students will be provided an opportunity to learn, think and discuss broadly and deeply about aid and development issues through lectures, discussions, group work, presentations and homework. Comments will be provided to assignments. Good works will be presented in class.

【休講】 Introduction to Environmental Science

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 金 3/Fri.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This is an introductory course in environmental studies: the course introduces students to the basic knowledge of environmental science and environmental policy. Students will learn basic principles around natural scientific mechanism of specific environmental problems, such as water, waste, energy, climate change, and biodiversity, that are considered as most pressing of our time. The lectures will also emphasize the socio-economic mechanism that are often at the root of the environmental problems. Through the case studies, the course also aims to introduce students to the UN 2030 Agenda for sustainable development on these issues. Mini tours on environmental facilities on/off campus will be arranged to help students connect the theories with the reality, if the situation allows.

【Goal】

Students will be able to

- explain basic scientific mechanisms of major environmental problems;
- explain the root mechanism why such environmental problems occurs; and
- gain perspectives needed to critically think about and seek solutions for these problems and bring sustainable society.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course will be conducted in mixture of lecture-based learning and more active involvement of students in class discussions etc. Mini discussions, mainly based on the assignments, are conducted in lectures throughout the course. Feedback on students’ work (on assignments and reflections, etc.) is given in class and/or through the Hosei Learning Management System. Field work and/or a tour of environmental facilities is planned, although this may be changed depending on the situation around Covid-19. Please note that the teaching approach may vary according to the university/GIS policy.

Introduction to Social Research Methods

Daiki Hiramori

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 月 3/Mon.3

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed to provide an introductory overview of social research methods. This course begins with conceptual issues in research, such as how theory is used in the research process and ethical issues in social science research. Then, building blocks of empirical research, such as hypotheses, measurement, reliability, validity, and sampling, are covered. The course also touches on a variety of research approaches, such as survey research, experimental research, content analysis, ethnography, in-depth interviewing, and cognitive interviews. In this course, students will learn how social scientists design social research, collect the data, and conduct the analysis. Details of specific research methods will be covered in more advanced courses, such as “Qualitative Research Methods” and “Quantitative Research Methods.”

[Goal]

By the end of this course, students will be able to: (1) identify and describe the key concepts of social research methods (remembering/understanding), (2) apply those concepts to a context different from one in which it was learned (applying), (3) compare and contrast various approaches to social research (analyzing), and (4) choose appropriate research methods to propose a research project of their own (evaluating/creating).

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course is taught primarily through interactive lectures. A variety of active learning techniques, such as in-class writing assignments (one-minute papers), neighbor discussions (think-pair-share), and comment sheets, are used to accommodate the diversity in student learning styles. In-class quizzes are held occasionally so that students understand their own level of understanding of the course materials at the moment. Verbal and written feedback on assignments is given during class discussions and through using other tools as appropriate. Also, feedback for the previous class is given at the beginning of each class. Students are encouraged to visit the instructor during office hours for more personalized feedback.

【Outline and objectives】

People, goods, money, and information are now crossing national borders in various industries thanks to the rapid development of technology. Employees working for multinational companies have more opportunities to communicate with people from different cultures. The lingua franca is, unsurprisingly, English, which has become the de facto standard language in business.

This course is aimed at students who may someday engage in global business, using their language skills and overseas experience. This class focuses on students acquiring basic knowledge and global business skills for the real world.

【Goal】

This course teaches the basics of international business and the skills required to compete in a competitive global marketplace.

Introduction to Tourism Studies

John Melvin

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 月 1/Mon.1

その他属性 : 〈優〉〈実〉

[Outline and objectives]

The purpose of this course is to provide students with an introduction to the field of tourism. You will gain an overview of the scale, scope and organization of the tourism sector and consider both the positive and negative impacts of tourism on destinations. Through a range of international case studies, we will learn about the development of destinations' natural, built and cultural resources and how these can be managed and enjoyed sustainably. Students will engage in additional learning opportunities such as in-class discussions and a group project, focusing on tourism-related issues at a particular destination. This includes consideration of how tourism may recover from the coronavirus pandemic in 2023 and beyond. As an introductory 100-level class, students will encounter some of the fundamental issues and theories relating to the study of tourism.

[Goal]

At the completion of this course, students should be able to:

1. Describe the structure and organisation of the tourism sector and the interrelationships between the various stakeholders (governments, local communities, companies, NGOs, etc.)
2. Identify processes to enable the sustainable development of a destination's natural, built and cultural resources
3. Identify factors facilitating the growth of travel and tourism at the global, national and local level
4. Discuss changes in consumer behaviour and the implications for tourism managers
5. Describe the impact of technology, particularly social media, on both tourism organizations and tourists

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The course is designed to facilitate a free exchange of ideas and information. Lectures will take place in an interactive environment, with students contributing through discussions and a group presentation. These are important elements of the course and will aid in your learning. The group project on a given case study will provide you with in-depth understanding of the unique challenges facing your group's destination. You will be required to analyze this and present your solutions and recommendations via a report and presentation. Assignments will be submitted via Hoppii; insightful answers will be shared in class to facilitate discussion.

【Outline and objectives】

Information study is an interdisciplinary science with a wide range of interests and goals. A major element in the field is concerned with fundamental information processes such as the acquisition and collection of information, the classification and storage of information, the manipulation and retrieval of information, as well as the analysis, dissemination, usage, and maintenance of information. Although information has attained a very important role in the world around us, it is a concept that is very difficult to define. This course tries to familiarize students with the history and evolution of the field of information study. Students completing the course will recognize the aims and goals of fundamental information processes. They will learn to analyze, evaluate, and appreciate the value information study provides, and they will understand today's information society and modern technology from an information perspective.

【Goal】

By the end of the semester, students should: (i) be familiar with the history and evolution of the field of information study, (ii) understand fundamental information processes, (iii) have acquired an understanding about the notion of information from various points of view, and (iv) be able to reason about modern society and modern technology from an information perspective.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

The main elements of the course are lectures, assignments, and in-class discussions. The lectures relate to the topics mentioned in the course schedule below. A class typically provides feedback and guidance on assignments. In addition, each class provides an opportunity for students to engage actively in a discussion related to current issues in information studies.

Information and Society

May Kristine Jonson Carlon

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 土 2/Sat.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

Information is now a fundamental feature of the human experience: we consume, produce, and use it to make important decisions. In this course, we will be approaching information studies from the lens of human-computer interaction, data visualization, and analytics. We will be introducing the students to various aspects of information and society: our changing views, how we utilize it, the effects of technological advancements, and our responsibility.

[Goal]

At the end of this course, the students are expected to apply critical thinking to exercise responsible digital citizenship. They should be able to discuss how information affects them as individuals and as a society, evaluate information credibility, and exercise caution in presenting information.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Course materials will be provided at least a week in advance via the learning management system. Each class will be kicked off with a short review from the previous week. This will be followed by lectures, discussions, and activities covering the topics given in the weekly schedule. Each class will close with a short retention quiz that students can choose to work on individually or collaboratively. A reminder of the assigned study materials and other announcements for the following week will also be given.

[Active learning in class (Group discussion, Debate.etc.)]

1	Introduction	Introduction: briefing on the course coverage and setting expectations.
2	Evolution of Information	A historical overview of the evolution of information will be presented: how was it disseminated and how has it grown through time.
3	Information Stakeholders	Custodianship, ownership, and access will be discussed.
4	Argumentation and Information	Critical thinking concepts such as fallacies will be reviewed. Examples where information was used for faulty argumentation will be presented.
5	Human Factors of Information Consumption	Cognitive biases will be reviewed and methods on how these biases were used to influence information consumption will be presented.
6	Information and Public Opinion	Landmark cases where information has swayed public opinion, both for the good and for the bad, will be discussed.
7	Midterm Reflection	Students will write a short reflection paper in advance on the lessons learned thus far and will be given a few minutes to explain portions of their reflections in a guided discussion manner.
8	Big Data and AI	Big data in key sectors such as healthcare, education, and national security will be introduced. Enablers of big data (e.g., increased computing power, internet) will also be discussed.
9	Data and AI Ethics	Examples of algorithms and practices used with information and how they can potentially threaten the society will be presented.

10	Information Security	Information security (confidentiality, integrity, and accessibility) along with its related concepts (cybersecurity, cryptography) will be introduced.
11	Digital Footprint	Landmark cases where digital footprints were used, both for the good and for the bad, will be discussed.
12	Future of Information	Expert predictions on how the future will change as we advance in the knowledge economy will be explored.
13	Responsible Digital Citizenship	Protective and ethical measures to prevent misinformation and promote healthy information activism will be debated.
14	Final Examination and Wrap-up	An open-book closed-response timed exam will be administered.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students are expected to read the relevant material for the week prior to class to promote lively discussion. Students may optionally prepare short reports for knowledge sharing in advance. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

【Outline and objectives】

What is world literature? Why do some books become global bestsellers while others are deemed untranslatable? How does literature relate to other forms of art such as movies or music? This course will introduce the fundamental issues of modern comparative literary studies, including national canons, world literature, translation, and adaptation. We will discuss how comparing works with other texts across genres, languages, time periods, or forms of media can give us a fuller understanding of not only the text itself, but also how systems of literature combine to influence our impression of the text.

【Goal】

Students will practice critical reading and writing while learning the basic approaches used in comparative literary studies. Students will examine the historical development of comparative literature as a field while utilizing comparative methodology to read and respond to selected texts.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will be divided roughly evenly between lectures and guided discussions. Short quizzes will occasionally be given to assess comprehension of weekly readings. Students will also be evaluated through a midterm examination and final paper. In-class feedback will be given for daily reaction papers and written assignments.

Studies in Poetry

Christopher Edward John Simons

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 水 3/Wed.3

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

A general introduction to poetry, focusing on the works of a variety of poets from different countries, cultures and eras.

【Goal】

The primary goal of this course is to teach the students an appreciation of poetry, doing so through a close reading of the texts. Additionally, the study of poetry will deepen student knowledge and understanding of English and English-speaking cultures.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Students will learn to analyze poetry, studying its formal elements: rhyme and meter, lineation, tone, voice, figurative language, and so on. By studying how poets see, think, and write about themselves and the world, students will improve their critical thinking, reading, speaking and writing skills. Discussion, comprehension and vocabulary activities, essay writing, and a poetry recitation are all part of the course. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

【Outline and objectives】

This course examines the social, political, and cultural forces that shape the canon of Japanese literature available in English translation. In particular, we will focus on translations published in the United States in the postwar period. How did publishers determine which authors to introduce to an American audience, and how did those choices influence our images of Japanese literature in Japan, the US, and globally?

【Goal】

Students will think critically about the discourses of translation, publication, and world literature. Students will also develop critical reading and writing skills through class assignments.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will consist of lectures followed by group discussions. Quizzes will be used to check reading comprehension, and students will complete two papers for midterm and final evaluations. In-class feedback will be given for daily reaction papers, and students will receive personal feedback on written assignments.

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 月 4/Mon.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course will introduce students to the culture and society of the United States, focusing primarily on events of the 20th and 21st century. A central theme will be the idea of America as a place of unlimited possibility and opportunity. This idea presents the United States as a new type of social experiment, where true freedom is available and where everyone can look to a better future. As we examine this perspective on America, we will further explore the conflict between American ideals and social reality as seen in the tensions between continuity and change, individualism and community, consensus and diversity.

[Goal]

Students will acquire knowledge about various aspects of America and American life, including its history, geography and political system, as well as its economic, educational, social and foreign policy. Students can then expect to (1) acquire general knowledge of the society and people in contemporary America, (2) learn how America developed from a small British colony into a major superpower, and (3) examine the new realities facing America and its global influence.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Students will attend lectures, read related material and have two written examinations. Concerning assignments, students will receive feedback in class.

[Outline and objectives]

As the world becomes an increasingly globalized place, the study of history is more relevant than ever to understand the forces that have shaped our society. This course will chart some of the major political, social, and economic changes that took place in Europe from the fourteenth to the nineteenth century and assess their impact upon the rest of the world. It will adopt a thematic and broadly chronological approach.

[Goal]

The aim of this course is to enable students to reach a deeper understanding of the key events in European History from the fourteenth to the nineteenth century. In doing so they will enhance their ability to think critically about historical events. Students will also develop their interpersonal skills through group discussions in the classroom.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
 Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Classes will be held in both lecture and seminar style. PowerPoint lectures will be followed by small group discussions in which students will compare their answers (written in note form, and submitted to the lecturer on Hoppii, before class) to questions on the assigned readings for each lecture. The discussion findings will then be reported by a member of each group and students from the other groups will be encouraged to contribute to the class discussion. Finally, feedback will be given by the lecturer to each group. Students will also receive individual feedback on Hoppii. Please note that the teaching approach may vary according to which covid threat level we are at.

1	The Catholic Church, State Building, and Economic Recovery after the Black Death	The Catholic Church, State Building, and Economic Recovery after the Black Death
2	The Renaissance	As Europeans rebuilt after the devastation of the plague, a movement called the Renaissance revived Europe's connections with its Greek and Roman past and produced masterpieces of art, architecture, and other forms of thought.
3	Interpreting Visual Evidence: Marking Boundaries, Inspiring Loyalty	The fourteenth century witnessed the emergence of dynastic states across Afro-Eurasia that endured for centuries. Rulers used a careful mixture of privilege and punishment to create a sense of unity among their subjects while at the same time justifying their own right to rule and reinforcing traditional social hierarchies.
4	European Exploration and Expansion	By opening new sea-lanes in the Atlantic, European explorers set the stage for a major transformation in world history: the establishment of overseas colonies for the purpose of enriching themselves and their monarchs.
5	The Reformation	In sixteenth century Europe frequent warfare centered on purely European concerns, above all on a religious split within the Roman Catholic Church, known as the Reformation.

6	Interpreting Visual Evidence seminar: Conflict and Consent	In the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, European overseas empires came into conflict with indigenous societies, decimating the Amerindian population and drafting African slaves to perform labor the remaining Amerindians refused. This resulted in societies in the Americas that initially had extremely pronounced cultural differences.
7	Exchanges and Expansions in North America	Although the search for precious metals or water routes to Asia had initially spurred British, French, and Dutch efforts to establish New World colonies, colonizers soon learned that only by exploiting other resources could they generate profits.
8	The Slave Trade and Africa	Although the slave trade began in the mid-fifteenth century, only in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries did the numbers of human exports from Africa begin to soar. By 1820, four slaves had crossed the Atlantic for every European. Those numbers were essential to the prosperity of Europe's American colonies.
9	Interpreting Visual Evidence seminar: A World of Goods	As overseas trade generated new wealth, elites displayed this wealth in diverse ways. Ranging from the purely ornamental to the modest and practical, material objects reflected the identities of the people who bought and displayed them, as well as the identities of the producers who made them.
10	The Enlightenment in Europe	The Enlightenment was an extraordinary cultural flowering, driven by trade and internal commerce, which blossomed in Europe during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. This era encompassed broader developments, such as the expansion of literacy, the spread of critical thinking and the decline of religious persecution.
11	Consequences of the Enlightenment	The Enlightenment - or, more properly, Enlightenments, as there was much variation across Europe - was a movement with numerous ambivalent consequences, both for religious and political institutions and for Europe's relationship with the rest of the world.
12	Interpreting Visual Evidence seminar: Envisioning the World	Although maps give the impression of objectivity and geographic precision, the arrangement of names and locations, as well as the areas placed at the center and the margins, reveal the mapmakers' views of the world. In most cultures, official maps located their own major administrative and religious sites at the center of the universe and reflected local elites' ideas about how the world was organized.
13	Revolutionary Transformations and the New Language of Freedom	Late in the eighteenth century, revolutionary ideas spread across the Atlantic world following the trail of Enlightenment ideas about political freedom and reason. The slogans of independence, freedom, liberty, and equality seemed to promise an end to oppression, hardship, and inequities.
14	Interpreting Visual Evidence seminar: Framing the Subject	Important currents of Enlightenment thought stressed the autonomy of the individual. Painters sought to capture and reflect an independent, external, stable reality - this in a period before photography. It was a confident but also a self-centered view of the world.

【休講】 History of English Studies in Japan

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : | Year : 2~4

Day/Period :

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

The objective of this course is an introduction of the history of English Studies in Japan in relation to culture, politics and society.

【Goal】

This course will introduce (1) why and how the Japanese have learned English in several historical case studies, and (2) how Japan and the English-speaking world have come to share common values, ideas, and thoughts. (3) While the Japanese forerunners' attitudes to, purposes, and methods of English studies are examined, students will rethink of and have his/her own reasoning and philosophy.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Students will study how and why the Japanese has learned and used the English language, and measure the extent of the Anglo-American influence on Japan, since the first full encounter with the Western civilization in the middle of the nineteenth century. This course centres on the English language learning and education in this country, and covers topics such as diplomacy, imperialism, enlightenment, translation, nationalism, war, literature, globalisation, and so on. At the same time, it is necessary for students to explore why despite the thorough modernisation and westernisation on the surface Japan has not lost the identity, and remained independent at the bottom of our civilization. Feedback is given mainly by Hoppii.

[Outline and objectives]

Cultural studies analyzes the relationship between representation and power. It provides a variety of theoretical perspectives to understand how culture in the form of movies, advertising, fashion, music, everyday commodities, and other mediums combines with institutions of power in shaping how we communicate with others, interpret our social world, and formulate our identities.

In this class we will analyze things such as how music becomes a communication tool; how the clothes you wear communicate your social status to others; and how discourse and ideologies formulate your ideas of race, gender, and beauty.

[Goal]

Equip students with a variety of theories through which to interpret and critique the language, symbols, and visual images that we encounter and unconsciously internalize in our everyday lives.

To examine how economics, politics, and culture exert power over what and how we think.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Classes consist of lectures and discussion. Much of class time is devoted to examining visual images, sound, and other media forms. Each class will introduce a major theory from cultural studies, which students will apply both individually and in groups to a particular cultural case study.

【Outline and objectives】

This course will look at some of the major issues raised during the United Nations' "Year of Dialogue Among Civilizations." Special attention will be given to the role that culture plays in what Samuel P. Huntington has referred to as the "clash of civilizations." The course will begin with several contemporary case studies for analysis, and then move on to theoretical issues, such as theories of globalization and the role of intercultural communication, education, science/technology, the media, and ethics in cross-cultural dialogue. Finally, the course will consider how normative solutions to cross-cultural conflicts can be arrived at.

【Goal】

The course will seek to answer the following questions: What are the causes of cross-cultural conflicts? How can dialogue help to resolve such conflicts? How should dialogue across cultures be conducted? The course will also look at how culture interacts with other social systems in international society, including political and economic systems.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】
Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Outline and objectives]

Humans are deeply social creatures. Unlike other social creatures, humans create and exist within complex and dynamic political arrangements with laws, customs, institutions, and designated sources of authority. This situation presents us with the question of how we should arrange ourselves politically. The rational inquiry into this question is the primary task of political philosophy. In this course, we will explore a variety of topics in political philosophy with an emphasis on the social contract tradition and theories of justice. Philosophers surveyed in this course include Thomas Hobbes, John Locke, Jean-Jacques Rousseau, John Stuart Mill, Emma Goldman, and Karl Marx.

[Goal]

This course has four primary learning goals. First, students will acquire knowledge about the various and diverging views on political philosophy. Second, students will improve critical thinking skills when engaging with abstract reasoning about political philosophy. Third, students will improve their reading skills when confronting nuanced and challenging text. Finally, students will improve their writing skills to communicate complex ideas clearly and confidently.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Classes will begin with a one-hour lecture with interactive slides. In many meetings, an in-class activity will accompany the lecture. These activities are interactive and require active participation. Finally, each class will end either (1) with a discussion or debate about the course content or (2) an open discussion about the in-class activity for that day. There are two in-class exams. These exams will include multiple choice, short answer, and essay questions.

【Outline and objectives】

Philosophy & Aesthetics

Whether in nature or art, humans love beauty. In fact, appreciating and taking pleasure in beautiful things seems central to what it means to be a human. But what is beauty? What is art? Does art need to be beautiful? What is the value of art and beauty? What's the relation between the value of beauty and other values, like moral value? Why is art so important to us? These questions are the primary concern for the branch of philosophy called "aesthetics." In this course, we will investigate these questions in depth by exploring various texts on aesthetics from the history of philosophy. Philosophers surveyed in this course include Plato, Aristotle, Francis Hutcheson, David Hume, Immanuel Kant, G.W.F. Hegel, Arthur Schopenhauer, Friedrich Nietzsche, Leo Tolstoy, and Clive Bell.

【Goal】

This course has four primary learning goals. First, students will learn about various and diverging views on aesthetics. Second, students will improve critical thinking skills when engaging with abstract reasoning. Third, students will improve their reading skills when confronting nuanced and challenging text. Finally, students will improve their communication skills to present complex ideas clearly and confidently in written and spoken forms.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

Classes will begin with a one-hour lecture with interactive slides. For the first four meetings, a class discussion will follow the lecture. For meetings 5-13, student presentations will follow the lecture. Each student must present once throughout the semester. Student presentations apply the course's various theoretical topics and ideas to analyze the students' choice of some piece(s) of art. The instructor will provide more detailed instructions on the online learning management system. In addition to presentations, there will be a final exam in the last meeting. The final exam will consist of short and long essay questions. Students will receive written feedback on the presentation and exam.

Sociology of Work and Employment

Allen Kim

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 金 4/Fri.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course is broadly concerned with the sociological analysis of work and society. Frequently, the first question we ask when we meet someone is “What do you do?” For many, the routine cycle of getting up, getting dressed, going to work and returning home to repeat the cycle the following day is common in contemporary industrialized economies. We devote many hours on the job. Work has powerful effects on both economic and social wellbeing. This course explores the sociological study of both the structure and nature of work, major economic changes including globalization, and concerns of workers such as earnings, promotions, personal finance, the “gigged” society, unemployment and the balance between work and family. We will examine broad topics including: education, the social organization of work, employment trends, inequalities at work, and the purpose of work as it relates to opportunity and rewards. Critical reading of texts, cogent writings, articulate oral presentations, and full participation in dialogue are all mandatory. Class assignments will measure your ability to grasp and apply the sociological perspective from readings and from information emerging from class discussions. Analytical projects provide opportunities to pursue interests in greater depth.

[Goal]

Through this course, students will acquire the basic sociological tools to analyze the development and impact of work and employment by learning the key concepts and theories used in social analysis and applying them in written assignments and discussions. Through the various assignments in this class, students will develop critical thinking, writing, discussion, and research skills.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Lectures are conducted weekly to introduce students to key concepts, theories, and research related to each topic. Students will interview professionals outside of the classroom setting. Short discussions are also integrated into the lectures to help students learn and apply the concepts and theories. In addition, there are also formal small group discussions for which students have to prepare in advance. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System

Sociology of Law

Kelesha Nevers

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 月 6/Mon.6

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

Every aspect of our lives is directly or indirectly regulated by various laws. In this course, students are introduced to the study of law and society from a multidisciplinary and comparative perspective. We will discuss why people (and corporations and other institutions) obey or do not obey laws, and how they act when resolving disputes. We will also study in-depth the ways in which law shapes society, how society influences law, and effectively bringing about social changes.

[Goal]

Upon completion of this course, students should have a better understanding of the role of law in society, and its impact (or lack of it) on individuals as well as society as a whole. Students will learn to analyze and apply abstract principles, and organize new information and their thoughts. Through group discussion and student presentations, students will develop their skills of communication and cooperation, as well as experience the importance of peer-learning.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?] Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Throughout the semester, we will discuss specific topics related to law and social change, and the impact of law on society. Students will be expected to read materials concerning the basic concepts and ideas in sociology of law, attend and participate in classroom discussions, and complete assignments based on the readings. Students will also be required to make presentations, and engage actively in class discussion. Students also demonstrate their acquisition and mastery of the course content upon completion of the assessments. For assignments, discussions, and exams feedback is given in the form of comments which is available on the classroom online dashboard; during the lectures, students will also receive feedback to further clarify and develop conversations that arise from the lectures.

【休講】 Sociology of Violence

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 金 4/Fri.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

In theory and in practice, it is necessary to understand violence to grasp the essential aspects of how individuals and societies work. Violence will be presented as social phenomena to explain the structural and individual aspects of it. The course will examine the different levels of violence through the theories of Zygmunt Bauman, Norbert Elias, Michel Foucault and Johan Galtung among others. It will focus on classical and contemporary sociological theories to familiarize students with traditional topics of concern as well as contemporary key issues.

【Goal】

Students will learn how to connect the methodologies and theories introduced in class by connecting them to current political issues and topics. As members of society, it is indispensable for students to understand themselves and their surroundings. Therefore, the main aim of the course will be to develop in students what C. Wright Mills called the “sociological imagination.”

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】
Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Each class will be divided into two parts: the introduction of the topic and the active learning section. By the end of the course, students will have developed the ability to connect social theories with real world problems. Feedback will be given directly to every student after each task in verbal and/or written form.

[Outline and objectives]

The course will help students develop an understanding of the relationship between crime and society. The course explores how crimes are defined, explained, and controlled in society. An overview of the components of justice systems, their development, and processes are explored to offer a comparative approach. The topics in this course include crime trends, theories of crime and behavior, law enforcement, courts, corrections, and crime policy and prevention.

[Goal]

After completing this course students will be able to: Understand the relationships between crime and society; Identify significant crime and victimization patterns; demonstrate the role of theory in understanding crime; explore theoretical hypotheses and research support; Identify and define the roles and functions of law enforcement, the effectiveness of law enforcement strategies and challenges; Demonstrate an understanding of the importance of court systems, including the organization and processes of courts, and the participants in courtroom matters; Describe methods of sentencing and the goals of punishment and rehabilitation; describe the nature of incarceration and community corrections; Discuss the extent of juvenile crimes; describe the treatment of juveniles in the justice system; Comprehend crime policies and prevention initiatives and challenges.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This is a lecture-based course that integrates activities to elicit student interaction. Throughout the semester, participation and discussion activities are also used to actively engage students. Students also demonstrate their knowledge of the content of the course upon completion of the assessments. Each assignment will receive graded feedback and comments on strengths and weaknesses of the submission (this will be available on the classroom online dashboard). During lectures, comments are given on students’ insights to further clarify and develop our conversations.

Race, Class and Gender I: Concepts & Issues

Daiki Hiramori

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 火 1/Tue.1

その他属性 : 〈グ〉〈S〉〈未〉

[Outline and objectives]

This class sees our society through the lens of race, class and gender to understand how privilege and inequality are produced, maintained, naturalized and challenged. The course will look at how various inequalities are connected to one another through examining global, national and local issues. Students will learn to analyze how race, class, gender, and sexuality are connected to each other as intersecting inequalities in a society and the world, and on that basis, consider the possibility of an equal but diverse world.

[Goal]

Through lectures, discussion and written assignments, students will learn concepts and theories to analyze how race, class, gender and sexuality affect individuals and society. They will learn to apply these analytical tools and knowledge to form critical opinions on current issues related to various bases of inequalities. Students will acquire skills in critical thinking, analysis and writing that can be applied in other academic fields as well as future careers.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course will be based on a combination of short lectures by the instructor and student-led class discussions. Verbal and written feedback on assignments is given during class discussions and through using other tools as appropriate. Students are encouraged to visit the instructor during office hours for more personalized feedback.

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 金 1/Fri.1

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This course serves as an introduction to the sociology of gender and sexuality. The first half of the course covers the sociology of gender, and the second half of the course covers the sociology of sexuality. While a range of issues relevant to gender and sexuality will be taken up, this course focuses on the perspectives offered by relevant social science theories and concepts to interpret findings from social science research. In this course, students will learn to look at gender and sexuality issues critically and understand the subtle social processes through which taken-for-granted ideas and practices about gender and sexuality are created.

【Goal】

By the end of this course, students will be able to: (1) identify the difference between sex, gender, and sexuality, (2) define the key theories and concepts of gender and sexuality (remembering/understanding), (3) apply those concepts to understand how gender and sexuality affect individuals' experiences embedded in structures of power (applying), and (4) analyze the ways in which sex, gender, and sexuality are socially constructed (analyzing).

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3" and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

This course is taught primarily through interactive lectures. A variety of active learning techniques, such as in-class writing assignments (one-minute papers), neighbor discussions (think-pair-share), and comment sheets, are used to accommodate the diversity in student learning styles. In-class quizzes are held occasionally so that students understand their own level of understanding of the course materials at the moment. Verbal and written feedback on assignments is given during class discussions and through using other tools as appropriate. Also, feedback for the previous class is given at the beginning of each class. Students are encouraged to visit the instructor during office hours for more personalized feedback.

Day/Period : 火 5/Tue.5

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

This course looks at Asian Americans and their experiences in the USA beyond the image of the economically successful "model minority". Focusing on the two oldest Asian minority groups, Japanese and Chinese Americans, but paying attention also to the many other groups included in the category "Asian Americans," students will study the history of Asian immigration to the United States and trace the process and extent of integration of Asian Americans into mainstream society by exploring a range of topics, including the history of immigration and exclusion, the "model minority" thesis, discrimination at work and in education, media images, gender and sexuality, hate crime and violence, relations with other minority groups, and social activism. Through these topics, students will consider critically the meaning of assimilation, citizenship, and "American" as an identity and a classificatory category.

[Goal]

Students will learn the multifaceted history and current situations of Asian Americans, and as a result acquire a deeper and more nuanced understanding of American society. Students can expect to develop skills of written communication and reading comprehension through engaging in critical thinking, analysis, writing, and discussion in this course.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course is taught through a combination of lectures interwoven with short discussions, presentations and post-presentation discussions.

[Grading criteria]

The grade is calculated on the basis of two reflection presentations (20%), one final presentation (20%), one take-home examination (50%), and participation (10%).

Clear instructions and goals are set for each of the tasks to be completed. To excel, students need to meet the goals as well as maintain excellent records of attendance and punctuality.

[Changes following student comments]

Students evaluated the course very positively. Reflecting on the course, the instructor realized that it's necessary to have stricter control over the length of the presentation and leave more time for discussion afterwards, and will endeavor to do so this year.

[Prerequisite]

The usual prerequisite is any 100-level or 200-level sociology course. This prerequisite may be waived if a student has the equivalent academic background. All students who intend to take this course must attend the first class.

[Outline and objectives]

Media such as news, movies, and the Internet affect us both individually and socially. On the one hand media shapes our everyday lives at the individual level through our inspirations, career goals, and consumption patterns. On the other hand, at the social level, media can influence our perceptions on political decisions, leaders, economic performance, our global allies and/or enemies.

This course examines both of these individual and social effects of media, offering students a toolbox of terms and theories in order to recognize, analyze, and personally manage the pervasive effects of media in our lives.

[Goal]

- 1) Introduce basic terms and theories of media effects research.
- 2) Provide case studies on major topics in media effects research such as violence, consumer desire, nationalism, gender, and culture industries.
- 3) Equip students with basic skills to recognize and manage media effects on a personal level.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course focuses on the impact of the mass media on individuals and society. An overview of the history of media effects research will be presented and dominant theories in the field will be introduced.

Classes will also often include the textual reading of a particular media such as advertisements, TV shows, films, or web pages.

Students should be eager to participate in class discussion and share their ideas and experiences.

Students are required to submit three assignments and to participate in a group presentation.

Feedback will be provided through Google Classroom.

【Outline and objectives】

This class will examine popular culture across Asia, focusing on the region of East Asia, specifically media and cultural practices in South Korea, China, Taiwan, and Japan. Over this semester we will examine how various media — music, film, TV dramas, and internet videos — are part of local cultural practices in each place. This will include an examination of their histories in the area, their connections to society, and what cultural practices they accompany. However, instead of focusing exclusively on different countries, we will concentrate on how these cultural products work across borders, operating transnationally. By close examination of the production, distribution, and consumption of these media across East Asia, students will gain insight into connections beyond the countries they are usually associated with. In other words, this class will analyze the links between these countries that are facilitated by the media. With this in mind, this class will ultimately consider how media flows across national boundaries and engages with cultural regionalism.

【Goal】

In addition to teaching the students about contemporary East Asian societies and media, this class aims to develop critical thinking and analytical skills. Throughout the semester students will: 1) learn methodologies to examine popular culture from Asia; 2) explore the histories of various popular cultural products from Asia; 3) examine how cultural practices cross national boundaries and interact; 4) consider how these cultural products engage with regionalization in Asia.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will be discussion-based, with visual material such as clips of films and animation. Each week students will be provided with an academic reading relevant to the topic. These readings will be important background information and/or will be directly addressed as the topic of the class content and discussion. Discussions based off of the reading material will be facilitated by questions from the instructor to help the students explore and develop their critical and analytical skills for that topic. Feedback will be given throughout the course via discussion topics. Students will be assessed on their understanding of the readings and discussions through their presentations and exam.

Japanese Popular Culture

Jason Cody Douglass

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

When asked to speak about Japan, individuals often turn to pop-cultural phenomena, such as manga, anime, or cosplay. This implies a link between culture and nation that is vital, yet ambiguous. What do folks mean when they say they like Japanese culture? Why has Japan become so popular?

Drawing on cultural and media studies, this course will explore the historical and theoretical study of Japanese popular culture. Lectures and discussions will engage with media forms and case studies from many eras, covering topics ranging from Takarazuka theater and pre-war radio culture to anime fandom and the so-called “golden age of Japanese cinema.” The course culminates with students delivering a presentation and submitting an essay on a pop-cultural phenomenon not covered in depth during a class session.

【Goal】

Students will learn many of the key theories, terms, and arguments of cultural studies, especially as those ideas relate to Japan. Students will practice analyzing, historically contextualizing, and writing about specific pop-cultural phenomena. Students should leave the course with a refined ability to define and discuss abstract concepts such as nation, culture, and what it means for something to be “Japanese.”

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will combine lectures, discussions, and student presentations. In addition to reading critical and theoretical texts, students are expected to experience, or refer back to their past experiences with, cultural objects and practices in question, and analyze them in a global context in their final papers. Students will also conduct research for the final paper. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System. In-class oral feedback will be provided for presentation assignments.

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 水 5/Wed.5

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

What is the relationship between music and culture? How does culture shape music? How does music express culture? In this course we will investigate these and other questions surrounding music as a culturally defined phenomenon. Each week students will participate in directed listening or music-making activities related to a specific topic, drawing on examples from various musical traditions and practices from around the world.

【Goal】

Students will be able to:

- (1) develop vocabulary to talk about music;
- (2) develop an awareness and appreciation of various musics of the world;
- (3) develop an ability to recognize the role of music in their own cultural identity;
- (4) think critically about the complex cultural workings within a piece of music or musical practice.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course is taught through a combination of lectures, documentary-viewings and group discussions. The course will facilitate self-learning through required weekly reading and listening assignments that will be assessed through short writing assignments, as well as collective learning through a final group presentation. Feedback will be given collectively in class or through the Learning Management System (Google Classroom), depending on the nature of the assignment.

Performance Studies

Stevie Suan

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 木 3/Thu.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This class will explore performance studies, an interdisciplinary field which uses various conceptions of performance to analyze the world around us. To perform can mean many things: to execute (to perform an action), to bring about (to perform a ritual: "I hereby pronounce the official beginning of the Olympics"), to judge ("how well did she perform at the Olympics?"). This includes performance in the traditional sense, such as in the theater, but also in everyday life, in our societies and daily practices of living, how we think about ourselves and our relationship to society: how are we performing when we use SNS or when we change our behavior with friends or family? How can thinking about the world as a series of performances allow us to analyze the news, public elections, gender, branding, and technology. Throughout the class we will be using Richard Schechner's textbook, developed to introduce Performance Studies, to guide the course. We will look at an overview of the major approaches used in the field, examine their theories, and explore how they can reveal important insights about our world.

【Goal】

In addition to teaching the students about the fundamentals to performance studies, this class aims to develop critical thinking and analytical skills. Throughout the semester students will: 1) learn various methodologies and theories about performance; 2) explore how to apply these concepts to other subject matter beyond the theater; 3) to learn how to articulate what, where, how, and why we are performing; 4) learn how to conduct analyses on various topics by applying the concepts from performance studies.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

Classes will be lecture-based, with visual material such as video clips and images. Students will be asked to have group discussions on certain themes. Students will be asked to have group discussions on certain themes. Each week students will be assigned a section from Schechner's book. This reading will be important background information and/or will be directly addressed as the topic of the lecture and discussion. Lectures will explain in detail and through examples the topic for that class. Discussions based on the lecture will be facilitated by questions from the instructor to help the students explore and develop their critical and analytical skills for that topic. Students will be assessed on their understanding of the lectures and readings through their presentations and papers. Students will receive feedback in class and in written form, based on a grading rubric.

History of Photography

Aquiles Hadjis

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 水 4/Wed.4

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

How old is photography? Can you imagine visually recording your lunch without a mobile-phone camera? Will you do it even if each shot cost you serious money? How can you share a photograph without Instagram, Twitter, or LINE? Photography was born out of a desire to capture moments, people and landscapes, but to many people, the details of the process are still 'magic' that happens behind a lens. This course looks at the history of photography to help us re-evaluate how digital images evolved and came to be an integral part of our lives.

【Goal】

Photography was developed through a process of scientific study and creative experimentation. This course will give students an insight into the problems that a large number of photographers overcame to make images. Knowledge gained of methods and approaches during the course will also help students better understand the production of images today, helping them to become more informed consumers/producers.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course uses a practice-led learning approach to guide students through a history of photographic processes and their effect in modern societies. Each week, a workshop is conducted that evokes technological and sociological developments in the medium. These are supported with periodic lectures relating to examples of past and contemporary photographers. Students document class activities and self-directed research projects using a workbook. Working towards an individual approach, students are required to make their own photographic projects, and to present them in the form of portfolio books (booklets). To create a portfolio book, students are expected to use an online book printing service(suggestions will be given). To evidence the creative process, students are also expected to document the classes and activities in a workbook.

Submission of assignments and mutual feedback are expected to be part of a continuous offline/online dialogue. Feedback regarding student work progress will be provided in two ways: direct guidance from the instructor, and peer-review sessions including classmates.

4	DIY Cameras-1	Making pinhole cameras / camera obscura at home.
5	DIY Cameras-2	Making pinhole cameras / camera obscura at home.
6	Painting with Light	Discussing the history of photography as a recognized fine art medium.
7	Consumer Cameras and the Democratization of Photography	Learning about 35mm and 120mm film processes, as well as instant photography.
8	Objects of Remembrance, Evidences of Identities	Discussing the cultural history of photography.
9	The End of Blind Faith	Exploring a notion of post-truth and a history of 'fake' imagery
10	Photo Project: Research	Conducting research for photo projects.
11	Photo Project: Proposal	Reviewing proposals for photo projects.

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Students are expected to prepare required materials for class (instructions will be given each week), as well as download and do assigned readings. The final project (photo project) and most assignments will require students to make photographs outside of class hours. In addition, students must maintain a workbook that keeps track of questions for self-directed research assignments and describes/reflects upon their creative activities across the semester (no strict format will be enforced, but seriousness is expected and will be rewarded). Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

【Textbooks】

No textbook will be used. Handouts and reading materials will be distributed in class.

【Grading criteria】

Participation: This applies to taking part in the weekly activities, as well as weekly assignments at class. More than 2 unexcused absences will result in failure of this course.

Workbook: Weekly contribution to their workbooks will start at a minimum of 2 pages per week including documentation of class activities and self-directed research works.

Final Project: Each student must produce a personal photo project (min. of 10 solid (self-curated) images). Please note that each student will be asked to pay for an online book printing service to produce his/her portfolio book. Printing may cost around 4,000 yen according to size, number of pages, and print quality. Further details will be explained in class.

The final grade is based on: Participation 20%, Workbook 30%, and Final Photo Essay Project 50%.

[Changes following student comments]

The course has been modified to encourage more practical engagement with the history of photography.

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

Students will need a laptop, a smartphone, a camera (mobile-phone camera will do), a workbook (e.g. blank sketchbook/notebook), and general stationary (e.g. pen, pencil, glue, tape, scissors). Students will also need access to a printer (either at home, on campus, or at a convenience store). Details of other items required will be given each week.

[Others]

Students are expected to come to class on time, participate and show interest.

The instructor is a practicing artist and filmmaker whose work across different disciplines (starting with photography) has been shown at international exhibitions and media.

Film Theory and Analysis

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

Cinema and its study stand at a crossroads. According to those skeptical about the future viability of theatrical exhibition, cinema is nearing the end of its lifecycle as an artform. Enthusiasts retort that we have only just begun to uncover film's many forgotten histories, hidden archives, and possible futures. Some critics suggest that the very category of "film" has become obsolete; cinema has blended with other audiovisual media such as television, games, and advertisements so as to enclose us, becoming omnipresent within our lived environments. Yet, many continue to watch movies on a regular basis, either in a theater or on any manner of screen. With so many conflicting theories, how might we begin to make sense of the impact of film upon us and our societies? This course introduces students to the terms and theories they need to know in order to think critically and write analytically about film. Lectures, in-class discussions, and assignments are designed to help students grapple with pressing questions within film studies, and make sense of the films they encounter in their everyday lives. Each week will focus upon a different critical concept within film studies and instruct students on how to apply that topic to individual texts. Along the way, students will familiarize themselves with crucial films, filmmakers, filmic technologies, and filmmaking traditions by studying cinema from various eras, genres, and industries.

[Goal]

Students will learn many of the key theories, terms, and arguments of film studies; will practice closely viewing, discussing, researching, and writing about films; and will utilize films to think through issues such as class, race, gender, sexuality, disability, the body, and mediality.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Classes combine lectures, film clips, discussions, analytical exercises, and student presentations. In addition, students will conduct research projects. As the history of cinema covers approximately 130 years and involves many regions, the list of the films examined in this course is eclectic. Some examples are as follows: Pauvre Pierrot (1892), A Trip to the Moon (1902), Paprika (2006), Shoes (1916), The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari (1920), Battleship Potemkin (1925), Daises (1966), Boy and the World (2013), The Battle of Algiers (1966), Enter the Dragon (1973), Black Girl (1966), Rashomon (1950), and Spider-Man: Into the Spider-Verse (2018). Digital Writing and Publication

Mark Birtles

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 金 3/Fri.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

Technological advances have pushed society toward an ever-more participatory global culture; we both consume and create vast quantities of the written word on our phones, laptops and tablets. These digital texts have expanded the definition of what we call writing and what we can do with it. This course will look more closely at how this kind of digital copy is produced and the way it impacts our daily life. Together, we will examine the planning, writing and publication stages of digital content creation, as well as the practical and ethical issues that are involved.

[Goal]

Frederich Nietzsche once said, “it is my ambition to say in 10 sentences what others say in a whole book,” and that is what we will aim to do: produce clear and concise written communication. As part of this process, we will:

- Examine how technology has profoundly altered traditional writing practices
- Learn how to deliver content to a brief, within set style guidelines
- Be engaged in the analysis and production of digital writing, both individually and as part of a team
- Consider the fundamentally new set of ethical issues the online world has created.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Digital Writing and Publication has a focus on quality rather than quantity; in today's digital world, information must be conveyed quickly and attractively. An assignment may be as short as 50 words, but students will learn how to make those 50 words count. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System. We will look at practices that promote a collaborative approach toward a common goal via technology. Students will also learn industry-standard practices, such as writing to a specific style guide and for a specific audience.

[Outline and objectives]

Technological advances have pushed society toward an ever-more participatory global culture; we both consume and create vast quantities of the written word on our phones, laptops and tablets. These digital texts have expanded the definition of what we call writing and what we can do with it. This course will look more closely at how this kind of digital copy is produced and the way it impacts our daily life. Together, we will examine the planning, writing and publication stages of digital content creation, as well as the practical and ethical issues that are involved.

[Goal]

Frederich Nietzsche once said, “it is my ambition to say in 10 sentences what others say in a whole book,” and that is what we will aim to do: produce clear and concise written communication. As part of this process, we will:

- Examine how technology has profoundly altered traditional writing practices
- Learn how to deliver content to a brief, within set style guidelines
- Be engaged in the analysis and production of digital writing, both individually and as part of a team
- Consider the fundamentally new set of ethical issues the online world has created.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Digital Writing and Publication has a focus on quality rather than quantity; in today’s digital world, information must be conveyed quickly and attractively. An assignment may be as short as 50 words, but students will learn how to make those 50 words count. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System. We will look at practices that promote a collaborative approach toward a common goal via technology. Students will also learn industry-standard practices, such as writing to a specific style guide and for a specific audience.

【Outline and objectives】

The world of social media has led to a revolution in how we express ourselves and interact with others; the way we consume and disseminate information grows ever more complex. This increased use of computer-mediated communication means that analysis is now more critical than ever. This course aims to make sense of our digital lives by joining the dots between language, the parts of the web we use in daily life and its impact on our world.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students will be able to:

- Understand the use of social media from an academic perspective
- Engage in scholarly discussion about social media, using appropriate ideas and terminology
- Interpret linguistic analysis on social media discourse
- Consider the wider social implications of the lives we lead online

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The classes will be a mixture of lecture-based teaching and discussion, with students invited to share their own experiences. Each week we will actively engage with a social, political or ethical question regarding social media use and how it shapes our world. We will also look at the theoretical approaches scholars use to investigate the impact of the language we use on the web. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

Science and Technology Studies

Youyung Hyun

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 火 2/Tue.2

その他属性 : <優>

[Outline and objectives]

This course aims at helping students to learn the confluence of major technological forces—cloud computing, big data, artificial intelligence, and the Internet of Things—in driving a new digital society. In doing so, students will understand how digital-age companies such as Amazon, Google, Netflix, and Spotify are creating whole new industries and business models.

[Goal]

Students will understand the role of digital technologies in determining the capabilities of both incumbents and digital-born companies. To do so, students will learn how companies have transformed their business models and how they have embedded new technologies in their organizational fabric. This will be covered from the era of post-industrial society to the digital society.

Also, using multiple case studies, students will be able to explore and analyze how specific organizations have led their own digital transformation.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 2”, “DP 3” and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course will proceed with lectures, readings, group presentations, and group discussion. Students are required to read each chapter of a textbook in advance that will be covered during the class and submit a summary of it. After partial lectures from an instructor, students will participate in group presentations and subsequent discussions. The subject of group presentations will be divided into two types – (1) the content of each chapter based on rigorous understanding, (2) case studies of the modern companies that can deepen understandings of each chapter and develop students’ own critical perspective on the cases. At the beginning of class, feedback for the previous class is given using some comments from submitted weekly papers.

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

Art and design play important roles in society. This is true not only for the 21st century, as art and design have been formative in the shaping of the history of societies throughout the world for centuries. This course introduces students to the fields of art and design, identifying and exploring the differences and the overlaps between them.

【Goal】

Through this course, students will learn about the relationship between art and design and society, while also gaining an understanding of concepts relating to aesthetics, media studies, art history and contemporary art and design. Through the ideas introduced in this course, students will become more aware of the impact of art and design in the world around them, and equip them with the knowledge and vocabulary to engage in discussions related to the topics raised.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3” and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

In addition to attending lectures on art and design, students will engage in weekly tasks in response to the subjects of the lectures. As the first half of the course concludes, the students are expected to choose a topic for their final presentation.

The presentation of the project will be a combination of oral presentation, slides(optional) and presentation of preparatory notebook work.

Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

Feedback on presentations will be given in class. Separate feedback will be given via email or the Learning Management System if required.

【Grading criteria】

Participation:

Includes classroom activities, assigned readings, weekly submitted tasks/response.

Final Presentation: Students choose examples of "innovative" art or design they have experienced or engaged with directly. The presentation should include key points such as innovation, value, authorship, the user/viewer experience, and also logically reason the work's appeal to them and to the general public. In addition to the presentation itself, preparatory work in a notebook will be assessed to form the final grade. Students are free to choose their topic, but must present the chosen topic in class during the first half of the semester.

Final assessment is based on:

Active participation 60% (including weekly tasks submitted through Google Classroom = 50% and mid-term presentation/discussion = 10%), Final Project 40% (Presentation = 30% preparatory notebook work = 10%)

【Changes following student comments】

Not applicable.

【Equipment student needs to prepare】

Students will need a computer, a notebook (e.g. sketchbook/notebook), and general stationary (e.g. pen, pencil, glue, tape). A digital notebook/tablet is also acceptable.

Students will need access to a camera or scanner to submit digital images of their notebook work online.

Social Psychology I

Yu Niiya

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 木 1/Thu.1

その他属性 : 〈グ〉

[Outline and objectives]

This is an introductory course in social psychology, the scientific study of how we view and influence one another. Students are introduced to the theories, research methods, and seminal findings of social psychology. Social Psychology I will primarily focus on how we think about the social world, how we come to understand others, and how we exert influence on others' thoughts, feelings, and behaviors. Topics include perceptions of others and the self, attitudes, conformity, obedience, and persuasion. Social Psychology II will focus on social relations and intergroup dynamics, covering topics such as helping and aggression, group influence, self, emotion, and prejudice. These two courses will complement each other to provide an overview of the main content areas of social psychology.

[Goal]

This course will introduce students to the perspectives, research methods, and empirical findings in the field of social psychology and cultivate skills in analyzing the social situations and events that we encounter in our everyday lives. By the end of the course, students will be able to (1) identify and understand major theories, principles, and research findings in the field of social psychology, (2) apply social psychological theories and principles to real life experiences, and (3) critically evaluate social psychological theories and research. In Social Psychology I, students will be able to answer the following questions: How are we influenced by our environment and by other people? How do we explain others' behavior? What are attitudes and how do they affect us? What leads to conformity and obedience? When are people persuaded by differing opinions and when are they not?

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Methods of instruction include lectures, films, individual and small group activities, and discussions. Students will engage in various hands-on activities and experiments to experience the concepts they learn in class. Students will be asked to reflect on their daily experiences and share examples that illustrate these concepts. Feedback for the quizzes and midterm exams will be given in class. Students are also encouraged to take advantage of the office hours should they wish to get more personalized feedback on how to improve their performance.

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

This course will introduce students to important ideas, basic theories, classic and current research studies in key areas in the field of educational psychology, such as learning, memory, motivation and human development. It also will help students to connect these theories and research findings to their daily lives now as students and in their futures as life-long learners.

[Goal]

This course aims at developing students' 1) basic knowledge of educational psychological concepts, theories and important research findings, 2) understanding of their own learning histories, including how they know what they know, and 3) psychological literacy skills to apply the knowledge learnt in their own current and future lives. Students will become better able to develop their own learning skills, and to help others learn in a wide variety of situational roles, such as teachers, trainers, group leaders, or parents.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course will focus on human learning, and will include important areas related to learning, such as intelligence, memory, motivation, and self-concept. Methods of instruction include lectures, audio-visual materials, such as videos, TED Talks, student presentations, small group activities, reflection and discussions.

I respond to students' questions, comments, concerns, ideas they write on the Reflection Papers weekly / regularly.

I see quizzes and mid-term exams as learning opportunities for students, so ask students for input and for their reactions afterwards.

【Outline and objectives】

This course focuses on how psychology is applicable to our own life. Students will acquire new perspectives to analyze and conceptualize themselves and world. They will also acquire various psychological skills that can be useful to improve the quality of their daily life.

【Goal】

Upon completion of this course, students will have

- (1) learned some psychological concepts and theories that are applied to tackle the issues in various settings in our life, including schools and workplaces
- (2) acquired a basic knowledge about how one's psychological characteristics are assessed and mental and behavioral problems are treated, and
- (3) developed an array of skills that can be used to understand one's psychological characteristics and handle mental and behavioral problems in daily life

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course is taught primarily through lectures and in-class activities students are expected to be engaged in. At the end of each class, students complete a brief reflection paper, which will be graded and returned with feedback comments from the lecturer by the beginning of the next class. In the middle of the course, students are also asked to work on a small project, which is directly related to the contents of the final exam.

Quantitative Research Methods

Yu Niiya

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 木 2/Thu.2

その他属性 : 〈グ〉〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

The goal of this course is to introduce the students to various quantitative research methods used in the social sciences. When making important decisions, be it choosing a strategy to increase the sales of a product, implementing an intervention program to boost people's well-being, or selecting a school program to increase students' learning, people can rely on their intuition and experience, or they can base their decisions on facts: data. In this course, students will develop skills to obtain valid and reliable data through experimental and survey methods. The course will also cover topics related to research ethics, some basic statistics, and APA-style writing.

[Goal]

This course provides an overview of the 'how's and 'why's of quantitative research in social sciences, and it covers such topics as design, ethics, and APA-style writing and such strategies as field experiments and surveys. Students will develop the ability to design, conduct, evaluate, and report empirical studies. By developing hypotheses and critically assessing information, students will improve on their critical thinking skills.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The course consists of lectures, in which general ideas and methods of research will be presented, and hands-on applications of the methods, in which student's research projects will be planned and presented. Although some of the class time will be set aside for planning students' research, the majority of it will be done as assignments to be completed outside class. Feedback for research will be given during class time. Comments for papers will be given via the Learning Management System.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students will have to complete the assigned homework on time to successfully complete the class. They will be asked to do the readings, create research materials, collect data, etc. outside the class. Please bear in mind that the course will require that students spend a considerable amount of time outside class (at least 2 hours every week, sometimes more). Most work will be done in small groups, suggesting that students need to be flexible in finding time to meet other students during the week. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

The reference books will be available in the library and the GIS Reference Room for those who wish to learn about each topic in more detail. Handouts and reading materials are on the course website.

[Grading criteria]

Final grades are based on two research papers (20% and 30%), a poster presentation (20%), and the quality and timeliness of group work done outside class (30%).

[Changes following student comments]

Students in previous years found this course very demanding but rewarding. Some students aimed to accomplish at a higher level while others were somewhat struggling to meet the requirements. I will provide office hours and other consulting time outside the class to meet the need of individual students.

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

For some weeks, students will be asked to bring laptop computers. Students must get the login information for PyscINFO database from the library.

[Others]

Students who have successfully completed Statistics will be given priority during enrollment.

Students must take and pass this course if they wish to enroll in the Self and Culture seminar. Students who plan to enroll in other seminars in social sciences are also strongly encouraged to take this course.

Day/Period : 木 2/Thu.2

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

This class aims at building a strong understanding of big data and analytics in terms of its concept and real-world cases. Also, this class includes practical learning of big data and analytics at a basic level, so that students can experience data analysis on their own.

[Goal]

Students will understand "what big data and analytics is," "how big data and analytics are utilized within organizations," and "what challenges modern companies have to embed big data analytics into their organizational fabric." These topics are timely and emerging issues to grasp an overall picture of business landscape in a digital society. Also, by practically learning how to analyze data, students will have practical learning experiences in data analysis.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course will proceed with lectures, readings, group presentations, and practical learning. Students are required to read each chapter of references distributed by an instructor in advance and submit a summary of it.

For the first half of the semester, the class starts with partial lectures from an instructor, and students will participate in group presentations and subsequent discussions.

Also, for another half of the semester, the class starts with lectures from an instructor about programming, and students will do practical learning on their own. During practical learning sessions, an instructor will lead Q&A for each group or try to give individual instructions if possible.

At the beginning of class, feedback for the previous class is given using some comments from submitted weekly papers.

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course will provide students with more knowledge of the core theories in macroeconomics, particularly on the economics of open economies, unemployment, monetary growth and inflation, and the model of aggregate demand and supply. Moreover, the role of fiscal and monetary policy to stimulate the economy will be discussed.

To prepare students for embarking confidently on their journey in the world of economic analysis and for seriously analyzing the economic signals and data we all face daily to be able to justify views and opinions with sound economic reasoning.

[Goal]

By the end of this course, students should be able to:

1. Apply macroeconomic knowledge to analyze contemporary macroeconomic issues and real-world problems.
2. Interpret macroeconomic issues and problems from the theoretical perspectives.
3. Assess macroeconomic theories in terms of their policy implications.
4. Articulate macroeconomic debates clearly, using both analytical tools and an intuitive approach.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course will be mainly conducted through lectures, with analysis of appropriate case studies related to each topic. Students are expected to read the required material prior to the lecture to discuss and solve problems in class. Assignments and related feedback will be given via the learning-management system. Additionally, midterm-exam and in-class-assignment feedback will be provided in class.

[Outline and objectives]

This is the second part to an introductory course in microeconomics. (See prerequisite below.)

In this semester, we will continue covering fundamental concepts and principles in microeconomics. This time, we will focus on producer and consumer theory and the labor market. In the first half of the semester, we will study firm behavior and market structures. In the second half of the semester, we will discuss consumer theory. The labor market and income determination will also be examined.

[Goal]

The intention of this course is to integrate theory and application. At the end of the course, students should grasp and be able to discuss fundamental concepts in microeconomics, i.e. how different market structures affect producers and consumers and how the labor market works. Students should be able to examine issues related to consumption, production, the labor market, income inequality, and poverty.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?] Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Outline and objectives]

Accounting is often called "the language of business". Basic accounting knowledge is fundamental to becoming a successful business manager. In this course, students can learn basic accounting concepts and key financial statements. The financial statements covered in this course are balance sheets, income statements and cash flow statements. It also covers important accounting topics such as the globalization of accounting standards and the double-entry bookkeeping process.

[Goal]

Students will be able to become familiar with the basic concepts and principles of accounting, and to understand corporate financial statements in order to analyze the overall business performance of corporations. Also, students will be able to learn the basic processes of double-entry bookkeeping. The processes include journal entries, posting, preparing trial balances, adjustments and closing entries.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course is taught through lectures, discussions and exercises. At my discretion, I may assign several mini-projects (and exercises) to be completed during, or outside of, the class. Students are encouraged to ask questions and to request that particular points be explained if they remain confused or uncertain about items discussed during the class. Feedback on the students' performance in the assignments during the course will be given regularly.

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This course aims at learning why and how contemporary organizations perform data visualization from a business perspective and practicing a data visualization tool, called Tableau.

【Goal】

By participating in lectures and group projects, students will (1) understand the basic of data visualization in contemporary organizations, (2) learn to analyze and critically evaluate ideas, arguments, and perspective, and (3) develop skills on a data visualization tool needed by business professionals in the field most closely related to this course.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course will proceed with lectures, group presentations, and group projects to practically learn how to use a data visualization tool. For the first half of the semester, the class involves lectures and group presentations that are aimed at understanding the basics of data analytics use (in this course, data visualization tool) in contemporary organizations and how it affects the paradigm of core business processes in the company.

In the second half of the semester, the class involves practical learning of Tableau and group projects. Students will learn how to use software called Tableau from an instructor and work on group projects with using Tableau. An instructor will give feedback and address major questions from students at the end of every class.

Phonetics and Phonology

Yuriko Yokoe

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 水 3/Wed.3

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

This course will cover the basic notions of articulatory, acoustic, and auditory phonetics and phonology.

We will explore how speech sounds are produced in articulatory organs, how these sounds travel in the air and auditory pathways, and how they are perceived in the listener's brain.

【Goal】

Students are going to learn about the mechanisms of speech perception and production. We will explore how articulatory organs are coordinated when we produce speech sounds, how speech sounds propagate in the air, and how these sounds are perceived and understood. There are three main goals.

- (1) Students understand the basic physiology (i.e., articulatory organs and hearing organs).
- (2) Students understand the physical representation of speech sounds and the mental representation of language.
- (3) Students understand how speech sounds are produced and understood in daily situations.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 2” and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course consists of lectures, discussions, and pop quizzes. Handouts and worksheets are provided in class. Students are expected to actively participate in class: take notes, be responsive to questions, and work in pairs and groups.

Teaching Pronunciation

Katsuya Yokomoto

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 木 5/Thu.5

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course will cover the theoretical and practical aspects of pronunciation teaching. We will look at pronunciation variations, and explore possible obstacles that adults and children come across in speech perception and production. We will discuss how teachers can help students learn and understand the articulation of English sounds.

[Goal]

At the end of this course, students will be able to:

- (1) Understand and explain the articulation of individual sounds in English,
- (2) Understand and explain the basic rules about the connected speech, rhythm, and intonation in English,
- (3) Understand the common challenges that learners encounter in learning pronunciation in English, and
- (4) Apply the knowledge about the English pronunciation and learners' difficulties into pronunciation teaching.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course is offered through lectures and discussions in class. Handouts are provided in class, and students are expected to participate in all class activities actively. Individual members' contributions to group work are vital to successful learning. Please make sure to complete preparatory study to maximize your contributions to class members and therefore learning outcomes. Good comments in group discussions will be introduced to the class for further discussions, and comments and explanations for tests will be given either in class or in a recording. Written feedback on microteaching will be given to individual students.

Semantics and Pragmatics

Nobumi Nakai

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 金 2/Fri.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

Semantics is the study of meaning in language. Pragmatics is the study of the ways people use language in actual conversations. The aim of this course is to provide students with an essential understanding of semantics and pragmatics, with examples drawn from English and Japanese.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) Have a general understanding of the interface between semantics and pragmatics.
- (2) Understand key concepts and major theories in the fields.
- (3) Survey the wide range of semantic and pragmatic phenomena in all their richness and variety.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course begins by covering some essential issues of semantics. In subsequent lectures, we will discuss how the identification of the semantic contribution of words and sentences gets us only partway to understanding what an utterance means. The course is a combination of lectures, group discussions, and review exercises. Feedback will be given during class discussions as necessary.

1	Introduction	Introduction
2	An Overview of Semantics	Describes the components of linguistic meaning and introduces lexical and compositional semantics.
3	Lexical Semantics (1): The Meanings of Words	Examines the different ways that word senses could be represented in the mind of a language user and discusses the types of reference that words can have.
4	Lexical Semantics (2): Word Relations	Discusses the kinds of meaning relationships that exist between words.
5	Compositional Semantics (1): The Meanings of Sentences	Introduces propositions, truth values, and truth conditions, and discusses relationships between propositions.
6	Compositional Semantics (2): Putting Meanings Together	Introduces the Principle of Compositionality in more detail and discusses different ways that lexical meanings combine to give rise to phrasal meanings.
7	Practice (1)	Provides exercises, discussion questions, and activities.
8	Language in Context	Explores several ways in which context can affect the meaning of utterances, and introduces the idea of felicity in discourse.
9	Rules of Conversation	Discusses why conversation needs to follow rules, and introduces Grice’s maxims for cooperative conversation.
10	Drawing Conclusions	Shows ways in which language users may employ context to convey or derive meaning that is not part of an utterance’s entailed meaning.
11	Speech Acts	Outlines many of the jobs that speakers accomplish with language and the ways in which they accomplish them.
12	Presupposition	Discusses another precondition for felicity.

13 Practice (2) Provides exercises, discussion questions, and activities.

14 Examination & Wrap-up Semester-end exam

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students are required to read the relevant reading materials carefully in advance so that they can actively participate in discussions. Practice problems will be assigned occasionally. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Textbooks]

No textbooks are used. All reading materials and exercises will be provided in class or/and through Hoppii.

【休講】 English Grammar Extended

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : | Year : 2~4

Day/Period :

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

Essentials of the grammar of the English language, part 2.

【Goal】

The ability to understand how sentences of English work.

And why would you want this ability? Not only in order to be able to teach English more effectively, but also in order to understand how the words of English go where they go, and thereby to sensitize yourself to what distinguishes good written style from bad (and thus to write better).

Furthermore, your improved metalinguistic knowledge is likely to be of some help in the acquisition of other languages, not only English.

As for “employability skills”, the first edition of the textbook described several applications, notably the following two:

(i) “In many professions (the law being a particularly clear example) it is a vital part of the content of the work to be able to say with confidence what meanings a particular sentence or paragraph will or won’t support under standard conceptions of English grammar.”

(ii) “Industrial research and development areas like information retrieval, search engines, document summary, text databases, lexicography, speech analysis and synthesis, dialogue design, and word processing technology increasingly regard a good knowledge of basic linguistics, especially English grammar, as a prerequisite.”

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Before each class, everyone should read and digest ten or so pages of the textbook. During class time, a lecture explains: often simplifying but sometimes elaborating. Students’ questions, apparent counterexamples and so forth are most welcome. After the class (and usually after a start during the class), students do assignments, some of which are the textbook’s own exercises and all of which require hard thinking.

Students both submit work for assignments and get comments on this work via “Hoppii”.

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Reading the relevant pages of the textbook, doing weekly assignments. (As an example, an exercise might ask whether each of a number of subordinate clauses is a relative clause or a content clause; this decision must be based on evidence that must be supplied.) Allow four hours a week to cover the assignment plus preparation.

【Grading criteria】

Work done for assignments: 100%

【Changes following student comments】

Evaluation not by examination but instead by weekly assignments. This frees up much class time, thereby allowing the course content to expand to cover not only coordination but also a syntactic variety of ways (such as passive clauses) of expressing information.

【休講】 The Words of English

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : | Year : 2~4
 Day/Period :
 Notes : < GIS students > 2008-2015 年度入学者は配当年次 1~4 年
 その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

A better understanding of the words of English: primarily their use within the English of today, but also a little about their origins.

【Goal】

The course deals with phonology, lexicology, morphology, lexical semantics, lexical acquisition and the history of English; as all of these are areas within linguistics, the ultimate purpose of this course is that of linguistics: to help give you some insight toward the aim of understanding how the human mind works. (It's likely that the course will extend your vocabulary, but this is true for most university courses. "Learning more English words" is not a major goal of this course.)

As for "employability skills", you'll get practice in reading comprehension, gathering information and developing hypotheses; and you'll also get a heightened and informed sensitivity to language that should help you in careers as diverse as law and copywriting.

And perhaps you will enjoy language more as well.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

A mixture of straightforward lectures (with responses from students), and word-related exercises. Active participation is highly encouraged.

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

After each class, reread and think about the class slideshow. Also, reading and carefully digesting the relevant pages of Heidi Harley's book English Words (see below) is strongly recommended.

Students do exercises as weekly assignments. (As an example, between the fifth and sixth classes in 2021, the students were asked to look at the verbs abuse, advise, believe, devise, grieve, halve, house, prove, shelve, thieve and use; and the nouns abuse, advice, belief, device, grief, half, house, proof, shelf, thief and use; to comment on any general pattern or patterns in the conversions, and to say what might be researched additionally if time permitted.)

Allow four hours a week to cover the assignment plus preparation.

The course is loosely based on this book, although the material in some chapters is dealt with in more depth than that in others. Whether you want to (i) check that you really did understand something correctly, (ii) read up on something that you realize you didn't understand, or (iii) get a fuller understanding of something you already think you understand, this book should be your first destination.

Psycholinguistics

Mako Ishida

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 月 2/Mon.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course will cover the basic notions of psycholinguistics – how languages are acquired, learnt, used, and understood in daily situations. It primarily focuses on human speech communication - how auditory and visual information is processed and integrated in the human brain. We will explore research findings in linguistics, acoustics, psychology, and neuroscience.

[Goal]

There are three main goals:

- (1) Students understand the basic structures of language.
- (2) Students understand communication strategies including auditory and optical illusion.
- (3) Students understand the basic brain structure and functions for human speech communication.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 2” and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course consists of lectures, discussions, pop-quizzes, and midterm/final reviews. Handouts and worksheets are provided in class. Students are expected to actively participate in class: take notes, be responsive to questions, and work in pairs and groups. Feedback for course contents and assignments will be provided in class.

[Outline and objectives]

This course provides students with a basic knowledge of sociolinguistics, the study of language in relation to society. The first part of the course is concerned with how individual language use is correlated with a variety of social variables, such as gender, age, class and ethnicity, by outlining a number of previous studies conducted in the English-speaking world. Particular reference is made to the classic research of William Labov, one of the founding figures of quantitative sociolinguistics.

Later lectures focus on how and where a language or dialect is socially placed and ranked within a community, including multilingual/dialectal countries such as Singapore. Students who are or are becoming bilingual will find the discussion on bilingualism especially interesting when they learn that its implications not merely vary from one society to another, but have been significantly changing recently. Another major topic is language attitudes. They are not based on purely linguistic considerations, but connected with how people perceive and evaluate different dialects or accents.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) understand key terminology, concepts and theories in sociolinguistics,
- (2) have an awareness of ongoing language changes in society, and
- (3) become familiar with interpreting quantitative/qualitative data for sociolinguistic analysis.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course is a combination of lectures and class discussions. Based on a flipped learning model, students have to read chapter handouts and answer assigned questions prior to attending each lecture. Submitted assignments and tests are reviewed in detail and commented on in the following week’s lecture.

English as a Lingua Franca

[Outline and objectives]

The ratio of L1 to L2 users of English in the world is roughly estimated to be 1 to 3. However, it was only towards the turn of the century that sociolinguists/applied linguists took a keen interest in the expanding use of English as a lingua franca (ELF), which is due to the globalisation in all aspects of society, including mass media and pop culture. Arguably, some Expanding Circle countries, where English does not have an official language status, have recently overshadowed the Outer Circle ones in proficiency and frequency of use.

The former part of the course observes how extensively English is used in international contexts, mainly among non-native speakers, while analysing samples of L2-accented speech. It also refers to the limitations in the traditional models of World Englishes put forward by B. Kachru and other scholars. The latter half discusses native-speakerness, bilingualism and native-speakerism, all of which exert a significant influence on pedagogical practices, and suggests how these notions could/should be modified from the perspective of ELF. The course is concluded with an analysis of status and function of English in present-day Japan.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) understand key terminology and concepts in ELF and World Englishes,
- (2) have an awareness of the wider use of English in non-native speaking contexts, and
- (3) become familiar with interpreting quantitative/qualitative data for linguistic research.

Topics in Applied Linguistics A: Linguistic Landscapes

Chie Saito

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 木 1/Thu.1

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

The course will explore how linguistic landscapes reflect complicated relationships between language and society. Linguistic landscapes are defined by Landry and Bourhis (1997) as “the visibility and salience of languages on public and commercial signs in a given territory or region.” Linguistic landscapes is a concept in sociolinguistics to study languages visually used in multilingual societies. We may not perceive Japanese society as multilingual. However, when you look at language use on public signs, you will realize that you are surrounded by more than just one language. Because the function of linguistic landscapes is not only an informational indicator but also a symbolic marker, you can observe our ever-changing society through an investigation of language use in signs. In the course, students will learn about the basic concepts of linguistic landscapes through lectures and literature reviews and deepen their understanding by conducting research.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students should be able to meet the following objectives:

- (1) Becoming aware of the presence of different languages and its meanings in public space,
- (2) Understanding how social, political, economic, and technological elements are embedded in linguistic landscapes,
- (3) Becoming familiar with the basic theories and methodologies of linguistic landscapes, and
- (4) Applying the knowledge to conduct individual research projects.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】
Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The main elements of the course are lectures, discussions, and student presentations. To begin with, the key concepts of linguistic landscapes will be explained. Next, the theories and methodologies of linguistic landscapes will be discussed through literature reviews. During the course, all the literature and extra materials are provided in class or on the course website. The students are encouraged to read the literature before attending a class. Interactive class participation is highly encouraged. Students will be required to carry out small-scale research projects in the field of linguistic landscapes and share their findings in class at the end of the course. Feedback is given both in class and through e-mail. Attendance at the first class is mandatory.

[Changes following student comments]

The lecturer will provide more business negotiation tips.

[Prerequisite]

None.

[Outline and objectives]

Negotiation is an interdisciplinary study (psychology, business management, economics, politics, law, etc.) which has been developed since the 1970s, when Harvard University started researching negotiation in a systematic manner. The study of this has become increasingly significant to global society. This course introduces students to the basic negotiation theories and techniques.

[Goal]

The purpose of this course is to learn basic negotiation theories and techniques, and utilize them in both business negotiations and daily life.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3” and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

In this course, students will learn basic negotiation theories, read and discuss case studies, and study consensus building so as to be able to interact with different societies. Feedback can be given verbally in class, non-verbally or in written form.

General Topics II: Business Ethics

Maurizio Raffone

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 水 1/Wed.1

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

Business Ethics covers a variety of contemporary case studies which demonstrates the dynamics between what could be called opportunity and misconduct. Over the years this has led to conflicts of interest, even more regulation to try and separate rule-makers from the rule-enforcers and the players and, where that fails, often catastrophic results ensue. This course aims to provide students with a framework to understand and deal with the fundamentals of ethics applied to the business world. We will look at various case studies to observe how companies operate within the grey area and/or have not acted responsibly in a highly competitive environment. This course will delve into specific areas that touch upon business ethics such as sustainability, ESG and technology. Students are encouraged to gain awareness of the interconnectedness of organizations and nations in a globalized world and how their actions as managers will affect different stakeholders, nations and the world as a whole.

[Goal]

Using the critical thinking assignments and class discussions, students will be able to apply their knowledge to case-studies and group work. Skills they acquire through this course should prepare them to understand key technical terms and give a better understanding of the business world.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Lessons will be structured with an initial lecture covering key themes and then a discussion of one or two case studies and examples. Students will be assigned three graded assignments, will sit two quizzes and one final exam.

Written feedback will be provided to the student individually on each graded assignment, quiz results will be shared also individually. The grades of the last exam will be sent back after grading, inclusive of personalized comments.

Organizational Behavior
 Junko Shimazoe
 Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4
 Day/Period : 木 5/Thu.5
 その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

In this course, students learn (1) why modern organizations behave as they do, (2) how the behavior emerges from inside the organization, and (3) how exogenous forces influence formation of the behavior. Since studies of organizations are fundamentally cross-disciplinary, this course approaches organizations from sociological, social psychological, public policy, and psychological perspectives about organizational behavior. For the same reason, examples covered in this course include organizations in the public, private, and non-profit sectors. At the end of this course, students will develop a multifaceted view of their own to explain various problems of modern organizations.

[Goal]

This course has three goals. First, students are expected to understand the scientific approach to study organizations. For example, what does it mean to study organizational behavior in a scientific manner? What are the objects of studying, organizational structure, performance, routines, or interactions among people and organizations? How is it possible to explain the relationship between behavior of people and organizational behavior? Second, students are expected to understand “organic aspects” of organizations. Organizations are more than machines whose structures and rules repeatedly generate intended results. Members interact with each other and in organizational contexts, from which unintended outcomes may emerge. In addition, organizations are influenced from temporal, geographical, and other environmental conditions. It is important for students to understand organizations as evolving and interactive actors with members and other organizations. Finally, students are expected to become able to explain problems caused by modern organizations in their own words. Regardless of their career after graduation, organizations are everywhere in modern life, and students may encounter minor to major issues caused both in and by organizations. It is essential for students to apply concepts that they learn in this course to organizational behavior that they observe in real life.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
 Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

In each class, I will assign readings to explore the topic of the next class. Finish them before class.

Active participation in class is required. In this course, we will use lectures by the instructor, audiovisual materials, discussion, and group presentations. The contents covered in class will go beyond assigned readings of the week. In the case of being unable to come to the class, send an e-mail in advance to the lecturer unless the reason is that you are sick.

In this course, students work together to study and make a presentation about organizational accidents. In the group presentation, explain the probable causes of the accidents and their implications to society using the knowledge from this course. Do not simply repeat what the internet sources, books, or other authorities say about the problems. Build your own explanation based on what you learn in this course. Students will receive feedback on their presentations in class.

Event Management

John Melvin

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 火 5/Tue.5

その他属性 : 〈実〉

[Outline and objectives]

For millennia, humans have found ways to mark important events in their lives: the changing of the seasons, the phases of the moon and the renewal of life each spring. Today, events are playing an increasing role in people's lives and culture. More leisure time and better standards of living have led to a proliferation of public and private events. More recently, governments and businesses have recognised the incredible power of events to help with economic development and destination marketing. The wide array of events, from community to international level, makes event management a hugely exciting field of study.

[Goal]

The purpose of this course is to acquire an in-depth knowledge about the field of event management. Students will learn both important theoretical considerations as well as applied knowledge relating to the factors for the successful planning, promotion, implementation and evaluation of events within different contexts.

Upon completion of this course, you should be able to:

- 1) Understand the range of factors behind the successful conceptualization and design of events
- 2) Understand the range of socio-cultural, economical & environmental impacts events can have on host destinations & inhabitants
- 3) Understand different sources of event funding and support and apply appropriate risk management practices
- 4) Understand the role and management of event volunteers
- 5) Appreciate the varied aims and objectives of different events and consider strategies to achieve a positive longer-term legacy

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The course is lecture-based, though you will have a number of opportunities to discuss issues in small groups. A range of case studies can help you consolidate your learning by illustrating the lecture content with real examples.

In groups, students will design a unique event, which will provide an opportunity to apply the theories and concepts from the lectures.

Assignments will be submitted via Hoppii; insightful answers will be shared in class to facilitate discussion.

Marketing Research
 Kayhan Tajeddini
 Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
 Day/Period : 木 5/Thu.5
 その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course will provide an introduction to market research as a business decision-making tool. The primary goal of this course is to equip students with an understanding of how market research can help them make business decisions and how they can transform research findings into actionable business insights. The course also aims to help students gain the ability to evaluate and interpret research designed and conducted by outside providers. During the course, we will discuss a wide range of research methods, including in-depth interviews, focus groups, surveys and modeling, and their application to the services and non-profit sectors. We will also discuss data sources and data collection methods. Students will have the opportunity to define a business problem, develop a research plan, collect and analyze data and present findings and their implications as a class project.

This course aims to help students:

- (1) Discuss what market research is and how, why, and when it's useful.
- (2) Identify a range of market research tools (e.g., focus groups, interviews, surveys), consider their strengths and weaknesses, and discuss when it would (and wouldn't) make sense to use each.
- (3) Use these tools to solve business problems and craft business strategies.

[Goal]

At the completion of this course, students are expected to be able to:

- (1) Understand the importance of marketing research
- (2) Formulate a research problem
- (3) Design a questionnaire
- (4) Collect respondent data
- (5) Enter respondent data into a computerized spreadsheet
- (6) Analyze respondent data with statistical software
- (7) Write a research report
- (8) Make a in-class presentation about the findings

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The course will be lecture, case, and discussion based. The assignments are designed to help students build skills that cover scientific, information, and communication literacy. Effort will be made to make the class both challenging and exciting.

We will use a combination of text and cases to explore and apply the topics. It is vitally important that you come to class prepared and ready to discuss the topics. If you read and prepare the materials you will learn more during the discussions and will be successful at the assignments.

Regarding the presentation and case studies, it will be explained in the first class with all guidelines, expectations and standards. The strengths and weaknesses of each presentation and reports will be discussed individually.

【Outline and objectives】

This is an active learning course centered on the fundamentals of entrepreneurship and entrepreneurial management. It is positioned as an entry point for students who think that they might want to start their own business “someday,” and want to learn about the startup process now. Specifically, the course is designed to help students develop a better understanding of how to generate and identify business opportunities, define potential business concepts, refine the business concepts through creativity and business modeling, translate the business concepts into minimum viable product definitions informed by design thinking and lean startup customer development approaches, and then prepare to drive sales of the product through an online presence.

【Goal】

The learning goal of this course is to acquire academic and practical knowledge about the fundamentals of entrepreneurship and entrepreneurial management. The primary learning objective of this course is to develop an entrepreneurial mindset. Additional learning objectives for this course include developing critical thinking, communication, leadership, teamwork, and ethical reasoning skills.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course is lecture and discussion-based, has an assigned reading every week, requires the use of an online journal, and uses group-driven experiential exercises to reinforce key concepts.

Preparation. Students must complete the assigned reading and write a journal entry about the reading before each class.

Class. In the first half of each class, there is a lecture. After the lecture, students break into groups in order to complete experiential exercises that are aimed at applying key concepts from the lecture and the assigned reading.

Review. After each class students are required to complete a journal entry describing their key takeaways from the class.

The Final Deliverable in the course is a Business Model Canvas and Executive Summary.

Feedback. Feedback is provided via the grade book feature in the Learning Management System (LMS) used by the Professor. Additionally, when warranted, comments are provided by the Professor via the LMS.

6	Business Models	In this session we will discuss business models.

7	Design Thinking & New Product Development	In this session we will discuss the design thinking process as it is applied to new product development.
8	Lean Start-Ups & The Business Model Canvas	The reading on Lean Startups for this session changed the way that entrepreneurship is taught and practiced.
9	Customer Experience	In this session we consider how good customer experience design and good website design can translate into more sales.
10	Leveraging the Cloud and Integrations	In this session we will learn about software as a service and web services automation and integration.
11	Go-To-Market Strategy	In this session we will consider the go-to-market strategy which is “an action plan that specifies how a company will reach customers and achieve competitive advantage.”
12	Social Media Marketing and Search Engine Optimization	In this session we will use a case study to explore the potential for using social media marketing and search engine optimization to compete against large enterprises.
13	Counterfeiting & System D	In this session we will discuss the logic of counterfeiters and the challenge of competing against them and System D (the informal economy).
14	Course Wrap Up	This session is a review of the course.

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Before each class, participants complete the assigned reading(s) and then write their journal entry in the online journal tool provided by the professor. After each class, students summarize their key takeaways in another online journal entry. In accordance with MEXT guidelines for 2-credit courses, I recommend allocating at least 150 minutes to read the assigned reading, reflect, and write the pre-class journal entry before each class, and at least 150 minutes to review, reflect, and write the post-class journal entry after each class.

【Textbooks】

An online coursepack of readings from the repository at Harvard Business School Publishing will be created by the professor. The cost of the coursepack is approximately US $42.50. Students who want to earn points for assignments that use coursepack readings must purchase the readings directly from Harvard Business School Publishing using the URL associated with the coursepack. (Note: Payments for the coursepack can be made with either a credit card or a debit card).

【References】

If you want to read a book before taking the class, I recommend The Lean Startup and/or The Startup Way, both by Eric Ries.

【Grading criteria】

LMS registration: REQUIRED
 Class participation & attitude: 39 points (29%)

【休講】 Creative Industries

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 木 4/Thu.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

In this class, we will explore different elements of contemporary creative industries and their surrounding cultures in Japan. This will include examining the differing conceptions of creativity they enable, and how this is connected to changes in media technologies and business strategies. Over the course of the semester we will explore the history of the idea of creative industries, examining specific industries in Japan. We will be focusing on the areas that are currently promoted locally and globally as key cultural industries in Japan. This includes anime, manga, toys, and the character business, exploring how these industries interacted and influenced one another. We will then move on to see how this connects to other industries, such as tourism. Lastly, we will examine the Japanese fashion industry in detail. For each of these commercial industries, we will analyze their production, distribution, and consumption as we examine different approaches to branding and creativity.

【Goal】

In addition to teaching the students information on the cultural production, economics, and marketing of the creative industries, this class aims to develop critical thinking and analytical skills. Throughout the semester students will: 1) critically engage with the concept of creativity; 2) learn the history of different creative industries and their shifts in business strategies and marketing; 3) explore how these shifts reflect societal changes in Japan.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will be lecture-based, with visual material such as clips of films and animation. Students will be asked to have group discussions and analyses on certain themes. Each week students will be provided with an academic reading relevant to the topic. These readings will be important background information and/or will be directly addressed as the topic of the lecture and discussion. Lectures will explain in detail and through examples the topic for that class. Discussions based on the lecture will be facilitated by questions from the instructor to help the students explore and develop their critical and analytical skills for that topic. Students will be assessed on their understanding of the lectures and readings through their presentations and papers. Students will receive feedback in class and in written form, based on a grading rubric.

Tourism Development in Japan

John Melvin

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 月 2/Mon.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉〈実〉

[Outline and objectives]

Up until the end of 2019, inbound tourism to Japan was experiencing unparalleled growth. An increasingly diverse range of tourists had brought opportunities and challenges to tourism managers, yet from 2020 there has been a refocus on domestic tourism due to the global coronavirus pandemic.

After a consideration of historical tourism development, this course will examine a range of topical issues, including relations with South Korea, the Tokyo Olympics in 2021 and the impact of UNESCO World Heritage Site designation of Mt. Fuji. We will analyze different management and marketing approaches of tourism in different prefectures. We will consider the factors behind the remarkable recovery of inbound tourism after the 2011 Great East Japan Earthquake and how Japanese tourism may develop in 2023 and beyond.

[Goal]

Upon completion of this course students should be able to:

- 1) Understand how tourism in Japan has developed into its present form
- 2) Appreciate some of the key stakeholders involved in planning tourism in Japan
- 3) Consider destination management and how to harness the social and economic potential of tourism for revitalizing Japan at prefectural level
- 4) Critically analyze prefectural and national government tourism management and marketing campaigns

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The course is primarily lecture-based, though students will have a number of opportunities to have group and class discussions. A range of case studies can help students consolidate their learning by illustrating the lecture content with real examples.

In groups, students will conduct an in-depth analysis of tourism in a particular prefecture, which will provide an opportunity to apply the theories and concepts from the lectures and enhance understanding of key issues.

Assignments will be submitted via Hoppii; insightful answers will be shared in class to facilitate discussion.

MAN200ZA General Topics II: Japanese Taxation Toshiki Onozuka Credit(s) : 2 Semester : 春学期授業/Spring Year : 2~4 Day/Period : 木 2/Thu.2 その他属性 : 〈優〉 [Outline and objectives] Taxation plays a crucial role in the functioning of the modern state. Tax revenues pay for public services, e.g., education, roads, defense, welfare, water supply and so on. People cannot live a healthy and cultured life without public services funded by tax revenues. In this course, we study such taxation in Japan. In the first half of this course students will study the basics of taxation from various angles; 1) what is the history of taxation? 2) what is the structure of taxation? 3) what type of taxes do we have? 4) who bears the burden of tax? Then, in the latter half of this course, with the basic knowledge acquired so far, they will study the real social issues involved in taxation, which include; 1) what is the difference between the tax evasion and the tax avoidance? 2) what is the qualified invoice system for consumption tax that the government plans to introduce from October 2023? 3) what is “the 100-million-yen wall” problem? The lecturer will explain the above items from the general point of view and in a simple and easy manner. Students will also study the basic terminology and mechanics of how corporate and personal taxation is calculated for a basic understanding of taxation. [Goal] By the end of this course, students should have a fundamental mastery of: a.Basic structure of Japanese taxation systems b.History of Japanese taxation vis-a-vis other countries c.Current issues surrounding Japanese taxation d.Global issues surrounding taxation The knowledge they acquire through this course will help them to develop the ability to identify and solve social problems they may encounter, and provides the means to solve them. [Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?] Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2” and “DP 4”. [Method(s)] During the course, each class is composed of a partial lecture on key concepts and in-class exercises including quizzes, small group discussions and class presentations to help students learn and apply the concepts. The economic perspective of taxation distinguishes “formal” and “effective” (or economic) incidences of tax. While formal incidence is a matter of who is legally liable to pay tax, effective incidence concerns the more fundamental question of who ultimately bears the burden of tax from a micro economic view point. Students will study income tax (所得税). There are 10 types of income subject to income tax, which are wage income, interest income, dividend income, etc. We will briefly look at how to calculate tax for each income. Then, two tax return filing processes will be explained, which are; 1) the tax return by a company employee, and 2) the tax return by a sole proprietorship (個人事業主). Students will study corporate tax (法人税). The items to be covered are; 1) what kind of tax is corporate tax? 2) who is legally liable for corporate tax? 3) what is corporate tax levied on? 4) Is the Japan's statutory tax rate competitive with other countries? 5) what is the tax return filing process? Students will study the general consumption tax (一般消費税). The items to be covered are; 1) what is this tax? 2) what is the history of this tax? 3) Who is liable for this tax, and who pays it to the government? 4) what are tax exempt businesses (免税事業) ? Students will study inheritance tax (相続税) and other tax related topics. The other tax related topics include 1) tax audits by the national tax agency (国税局による税務調査) 2) tax accountant qualification (税理士資格) 3) the “Furusato” tax (ふるさと納税). Review and in-class written examination. Tax evasion (脱税) is an illegal act that is against the law. On the other hand, tax avoidance (節税) is legal as long as it is done within the limits of the law. However, there are times when the line between tax evasion and tax avoidance is vague. Using a simple case of a tax return filing (税務申告) by a small family corporation, we will confirm the difference between tax evasion and tax avoidance. The content of the class is the same as class #9. In this class, our focus will shift from a domestic small corporation to a large corporation which is running its business globally. The points to be covered are what it is doing to reduce the amount of tax it has to pay within legal means. Similar to class #9, a simple case will be used to understand the tax planning activities by a global corporation.

11	Invoice System for Consumption Tax	Effective October 1, 2023, the invoice system will be introduced for the general consumption tax (一般消費税). The implementation of the invoice system puts tax exempt businesses (免税事業) at a financial disadvantage. Thus, tax-exempt businesses have been campaigning against it for the past two years. In this class, in the context of the history of the consumption tax, we will learn why this causes such an opposition movement.
12	The Wealth Disparity and Tax	Globally, the gap between rich and poor is widening. As Thomas Piketty, a French economist, points out, this disparity is expected to widen further in the future. With this trend, we will look at the situation in Japan, and think about the way to narrow the gap through taxation.
13	Discussion and Review.	We will review the contents learnt in the classes, and wrap up the important points through discussion before the final examination.
14	Final Examination and Wrap-up.	Wrap-up and in-class written examination.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

- a. Readings – Students are expected to read the reading materials carefully and to prepare for lectures.
 - b. Short assignments – Students are at times given assignments to strengthen their understanding of the application of the concepts. They are expected to hand in their homework in the following class. In the case of absence, they must hand in homework during the next class.
 - c. Case study analysis – Students form small groups to make a presentation on a case study based on specific theories or concepts discussed in class. Specific guidelines will be given in class.
- Preparatory study and review time for each class is two hours each.

TESOL II: Teaching Methodology

Machiko Kobori

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 木 2/Thu.2

その他属性 : 〈グ〉

[Outline and objectives]

The course is mainly provided for students intending to teach English. Its purpose is to give an insight into the basic issues in teaching methodology for L2 education. It will also encourage students to develop their own teaching performance with a consideration to make consistency in language education from the primary to secondary levels.

[Goal]

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to do the following:

1. Understand different types of L2 teaching methods and approaches.
2. Learn how to apply some findings of linguistic studies to L2 English teaching.
3. Consider L2 education in relation to crucial issues of semantics and pragmatics.
4. Grasp the knowledge and skills for teaching languages as well as L2 pedagogy through ICT to qualify as an English teacher.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 2" and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The course will focus on theoretical and practical aspects of the methodology of teaching EFL/ESL. It will also provide opportunities to explore a wide range of EFL/ESL teaching scenes in different countries with reflections on those in Japan; for example EFL/ESL classrooms for learners who vary in age, gender, nationality and occupation can be examined. The students will relive EFL/ESL teaching scenes by following principles and techniques discussed and suggested in a range of teaching methods and approaches: they follow the model English lessons and demonstrate them in the form of micro-teaching. They are also required to create the related teaching materials including ICT along with the lessons. The final exam and a written assignment are required for the completion of this course and, in a written assignment, they demonstrate their study of the model lessons.

Submission of the final requirements and feedback will be on the learning management systems.

【Outline and objectives】

The course is for students intending to teach English. Its purpose is to give an insight into syllabus design and lesson planning for L2 education. It encourages students to examine, discuss and create L2 resources with a consideration to make consistency in language education from the primary to secondary levels.

【Goal】

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to demonstrate the following:

1. Identify the components of a language course.
2. Design course materials that match educational objectives.
3. Employ a principled approach to the design, creation, and implementation of EFL/ESL course syllabi and teaching materials.
4. Grasp the knowledge and skills for teaching languages as well as L2 pedagogy through ICT to qualify as an English teacher.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course focuses on issues in planning and conducting EFL/ESL lessons: it encourages student teachers to take into consideration the importance of lesson planning when designing an EFL/ESL course. It also provides opportunities for the exploration of a wide range of ideas and examples in the syllabus design from different countries, with reflections on those in Japan. Students are expected to acquire a basic understanding of how to create a lesson plan with materials including ICT needed for managing the language classroom. Students are also required to create their own English lessons and teaching materials, with the opportunity to put them into practice. Students will complete a writing assignment and a final examination that reflects their work on teaching plans, performance and lesson materials. Submission of the final requirements and feedback will be on the learning management systems.

English Teaching in Primary School

Machiko Kobori

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 木 3/Thu.3

その他属性 : 〈グ〉〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course is for students intending to teach English to young learners as primary pupils. It provides an overview of second language learning (SLL) for such young learners, with reference to primary modern foreign languages (PMFL), in particular, English as a foreign language (EFL) within the global context. Its purpose is to give an insight into a range of SLL theories to primary pupils from psychological, educational and linguistic perspectives. It also explores modern second language (L2) pedagogy for them with consideration to make consistency in L2 education from the primary to secondary levels. It looks at practical issues of their SLL, such as the global movement towards primary L2 education, differences in teaching and assessing primary pupils and other L2 learners at higher levels of education, etc. Students will be encouraged to develop their own perspectives on the teaching of English in primary school.

[Goal]

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to do the following:

1. Understand the core issues of SLL theories of young learners.
2. Explain different perspectives of the core issues of L2 education in primary school.
3. Examine the connection between the core issues of young learners' SLL and L2 pedagogy in primary school.
4. Utilise the theoretical knowledge of L2 education for young learners to give an insight into cultivating L2 pedagogy in primary school.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

A presentation, final exam and writing assignment are required for the completion of this course; students are required to choose one of the course topics, make a presentation and submit a writing assignment on it. Submission of the final requirements and feedback will be on the learning management systems (HOPPII, etc.).

【Outline and objectives】

This course will introduce learners to a broad range of theories, issues and debates about the societal roles and functions of schools, universities and education systems around the world. Taking a sociological perspective, the objectives of the course are to:

- Introduce learners to a range of theories and approaches to critically analyze the roles of education in society
- Examine academic achievement and student well-being through international comparisons
- Explore debates on diversity, inclusion and decoloniality in educational contexts
- Critically examine the intersections of education and technology
- Explore debates about social mobility and reproduction through education in the context of gender, race and social class, and consider the role of cram schools in contributing to social inequality
- Explore the influence of culture on educational pedagogy in early childhood education

In addition to the acquisition of content knowledge, students will develop skills for critical online reasoning, understanding lectures given in English, and improve their communication skills through critical engagement with a wide range of topics.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students will gain an understanding of a range of issues related to education and society, and be able to critically engage with debates on education through a solid grounding in education theory and contemporary research.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The primary mode of instruction will be through pre-recorded lectures and readings and in-class discussions. Emphasis will be placed on critical thinking, group and whole-class discussions, and independent research. Assessment will take the form of written assignments and in-class participation.

Feedback will be given by rubric-based grading of weekly reflective assignments, and a final research paper.

【休講】 General Topics II: American Government

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : | Year :

Day/Period :

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

In this course, students will be introduced to the principles which undergird the American regime. This includes the major structural and operating features of the American system of government, and what legitimizes their basic rights and privileges in a representative democracy. It is essential to begin by examining first principles that are foundational to the American administrative state. These principles are set forth in the Declaration of Independence, proceeding by degrees thereafter to a consideration of the Confederation period, the Constitutional Convention, the ratification debates (The Federalist Papers), and other prominent legal events that decisively shaped the republic during its opening decades. With these foundations firmly in mind, we will then examine in greater detail the structure and history of the nation's uniquely constituted form of government, with particular emphasis on the importance of federalism and the separation of powers. Each of the federal branches will be studied, including the operations of the federal system, and students will understand how the U.S. Constitution establishes the separation powers and how these powers are simultaneously cooperative and competitive. U.S. Constitution protects civil liberties of American citizens.

【Goal】

This course will provide students with a comprehensive study of the United States of America government institutions and the political process.

Students will be able to trace and identify the historical development of the U.S. Constitution. Upon completion of the course, students will:

- List important dates of the Founding era (Declaration of Independence, Constitutional Convention, Federalist Papers, Constitution ratification);
- Learn the development and significance of the Declaration, the Federalist Papers, and the Constitution by locating the arguments, as well as the development of federalism;
- Compare the principles of government developed by the Framers with pre-existing establishments of the Founding era.

Students will be able to identify how the U.S. Constitution establishes the separation of powers. Upon completion of the course, students will be able to:

- Compare the powers of the three branches of government as set forth in the Constitution;
- Learn the structure and functions of Congress, the judiciary, the Executive;
- Describe the checks and balances that exist among Congress, the judiciary, and the Executive.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course will consist of lectures, open and group discussion, and individual and group activities. Students will be required to utilize critical thinking skills to formulate arguments and analyze concepts and principles in both oral and written form. Feedback for the quizzes and midterm exams will be given in class. Students are also encouraged to take advantage of office hours should they wish to get more personalized feedback on how to improve their performance.

Japanese Politics

Heiko Lang

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 木 1/Thu.1

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed as an introduction to Japanese politics. The first part traces the historic development of Japan's politics since the Second World War, focusing on the main turning-points and choices. In the second part, we look at the principal actors and structures that inform Japan's political system. The third part will focus on contemporary political issues.

[Goal]

Students who have completed this course will be able to
-understand the basics of Japan's political system,
-understand the main issues in contemporary Japanese politics,
-develop informed opinions on these issues, and
-critically assess the policies taken by the Japanese Government in response to these issues.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The course will be based on a combination of lectures and discussion. You will be encouraged to engage in critical debate, thorough textual analysis, and group work.

In each class, a lecture by the instructor will introduce the main aspects of the session's topic. This will be followed by discussion activities which will give you the chance to ask questions and share your opinions with the class.

You will be given timely feedback on your contributions in class or through Hoppii.

[Outline and objectives]

This course will address the basic knowledge, theoretical models and perspectives of Chinese domestic politics and foreign policy. For domestic politics, this course will introduce the Chinese political ideology and party-state structure, and analyze the current political institution and leadership system, as well as its political struggle and possible agenda for political reform. For foreign policy, this course will shed some light on the black box of Chinese foreign policy decision-making process, elaborate the hot topics related to Chinese foreign policy including nationalism, maritime ambition, the Belt and Road Initiative (BRI) strategy, and finally provide some detailed analysis on China's most two important bilateral foreign relations: China-US relations and China-Japan relations.

[Goal]

To help students gain basic knowledge, theoretical models and perspectives of Chinese domestic politics and foreign policy. Students will obtain the ability and skills to analyze issues related to Chinese politics and foreign policy. Students will also be able to deepen their understanding about what is happening related to China nowadays.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Lectures will be conducted based on PowerPoint slides every week. Students are required to read related materials to prepare for classes in advance. There will be also time for team discussion in class. Students are also required to do the assignments weekly. Feedbacks and comments for assignments of previous class are given at the beginning of class.

[Outline and objectives]

This course aims to introduce to undergraduate students the politics of Southeast Asia, one of the most politically, culturally, and economically diverse regions in the world. A major theme running through this course is the relations between the current state of political affairs in Southeast Asia and its colonial legacy and the prospects of democratization in the region.

[Goal]

The main objectives of this course are: (1) To provide the students with a basic introduction into the Southeast Asian states and their current political system; (2) To give the students a glimpse into the link between the colonial period and current Southeast Asia and the dynamics of Southeast Asian countries with each other; (3) To help the students to improve their critical thinking by asking questions related to the current state of political affairs in Southeast Asia, its problems, and suggesting solutions.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course covers a number of topics about Southeast Asia through a historical lens. During the first segment of the course (Week 1 to 4), an overall introduction to Southeast Asia and its history is provided. This serves as the historical context for the next segment (Week 5 to 10), which further discusses nationalism and ethnicity, politics and religions in Southeast Asia. The last segment of the course (Week 11 to 13) examines the establishment and the role of ASEAN, outside political influence over Southeast Asia, and non-traditional security threats facing the region.

Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

[Outline and objectives]

This course aims to introduce students to key concepts, themes, and approaches to African politics using the interdisciplinary methods of global studies. The course has, among others, objectives such as: a) to create awareness and an understanding of major issues in African politics; and b) to familiarise the students with the approaches and theories applied by political scientists in analysing the political development in Africa.

[Goal]

This course will focus on building academic skills by encouraging students to acquire analytical skills on a variety of issues in the discipline of global studies through the study of politics in Africa. Furthermore, students will be exposed to readings and discussions that will develop and improve academic reading and writing skills in the social sciences, with the goal of sparking an interest in conducting social research. Overall, this course will also encourage students to develop an interest in and inclinations towards Africa-related issues, including areas beyond politics, in order to expand their capacity for wider course selection and career prospects.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3” and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course will focus on building an academic exchange and having discussions on each week’s thematic areas. As an exercise to help students acquire reading and comprehension skills for academic articles, students will be expected to submit five key terms and one thesis statement from each assigned reading. The key terms and thesis statement will form the basis for in-class discussions. Students are also expected to familiarise themselves with the contemporary political discourse in Africa via BBC Focus on Africa. Although the instructor will use most of the time to explain the content of the class, students are encouraged to keep in mind that the style of the class is not a monologue but a discussion format. Students’ input will be through class discussions and a research-based essay to be submitted for final evaluation. For all written assignments, students will receive written feedback with corrections and recommendations from the instructor. Students are also encouraged to consult the instructor after the class session (the instructor will be available for 30 minutes after class) or make an appointment through email.

14	Conclusion and End-term	Reflections on Africa in global political discourse & End-term evaluation report (an improved version of the mid-term report in essay format).

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

In order for the students to participate and express their thoughts in class and in writing, they need to make adequate preparations. Students are advised to set aside 2-3 hours of preparatory study and review time for this class. The instructor will issue guiding questions at the end of every class for the next reading. Attempting to answer these questions will help the students grasp the main theme of the assigned readings. At least twice in the semester, students will be asked to watch recommended news items and documentaries outside of class.

[Textbooks]

The following text books will be reserved in the library for students’ reference. Those who can manage to purchase the books are encouraged to do so. Cheeseman, N., Anderson, D., & Scheibler, A. (Eds.). (2017). Routledge Handbook of African Politics, Routledge.

[References]

A wide range of diverse materials and recommended readings may be provided in class for every session. Nevertheless, these two texts are highly recommended. a) Thomson, A. (2016). An Introduction to African Politics (4th ed.). London: Routledge. b) Englebort, P., & Dunn, K. (2014). Inside African politics. Cape Town: UCT Press.

[Grading criteria]

20%: Identification of key terms and the main claim of the assigned readings.

20%: Pop Quizzes.

20%: Mid-Term Report.

40%: End-Term Evaluation Report (an improved version of the mid-term report).

The purpose of pop quizzes is to enhance students’ comprehension of key concepts covered in the class. There will be five pop quizzes. The dates and timing of the pop quizzes will not be disclosed to the students. Out of the five pop quizzes, only the top four will be used for grading. Pop quizzes will be ten short answer identification questions that will cover the contents discussed in the class.

Both the midterm and end-term evaluations will be a reflection on the topics we have covered in class, emphasising the context, causes, and consequences of political themes from the lecture materials and required readings. While previewing the questions is not encouraged, the themes for essays may be provided ahead of time to allow students to conduct prior research.

【Outline and objectives】

This course examines enduring questions of world politics, including rivalry and competition among great powers, rising ethnic and religious conflicts, the role of international law and organizations, growing economic interdependence and the effects of globalization, the rise of non-state actors and their challenges to state sovereignty, and the prospects of world order.

【Goal】

The course objectives are: (1) To enable students to utilize the concepts and theories of IR to analyze major events, actors and structures in world politics, e.g., the state, war, rising ethnic and religious conflicts, the role of international law and organizations, globalization, the rise of non-state actors and the prospects of world order; (2) To enable students to acquire the ability to form their own answers to enduring questions in world politics.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

This course consists of three major sections. In the first section, students will learn various analytical tools indispensable for deeply understanding enduring questions of world politics. Students then will utilize those analytical tools to examine the origin and process of major wars during the twenty century, namely World Wars I and II, and the Cold War. In this task, students will be required to give a group presentation. In the final section, students will examine contemporary issues, including rising intrastate conflicts in the post-Cold War era, the roles of international law and organizations, the rise of non-state actors, and the prospects of world order.

Comments for assignments are given during class and office hours.

"Introduction to International Relations" and "World Politics" are best seen as an inseparable pair of courses that will provide students with an overview of the field of IR. For this reason, it is recommended that students wishing to enroll in this course first pass "Introduction to International Relations".

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 火 1/Tue.1

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed to introduce students to the complex relationships between religion and politics drawing on cross-cultural case studies that range from the premodern to the contemporary period. The course takes a cross-disciplinary approach examining research from anthropology, sociology, psychology, and history. "Religion," as defined in the course, refers not only to doctrinal beliefs and formal institutions but also to informal supernatural beliefs, ritual practices, and the various subcultures and social aspects associated with religious communities. The principal aim of the course is to explore how religions as cultural systems interact and affect political systems and nation-states. By the end of the course, students will have a firm understanding of the complex relationship that religious groups, institutions, and larger traditions have with political systems.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will be able to: (1) analyze and discuss the roles that religion has played historically and cross-culturally in politics and public life; (2) understand the complex and diverse ways that religion and politics can interact; (3) critically evaluate scholarly research and media accounts that explore issues of religion and politics; (4) compare and contrast various theoretical models of religion and politics and the associated arguments.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This courses will be taught primarily through a combination of lectures, class discussion, and small group discussion. Each class will include a lecture followed by a class/group discussion based on related readings. Students will also need to complete reaction papers assigned to help reflect on the topics of selected classes. Students will also be required to select a topic and prepare an oral presentation on one of the topics covered during the classes. Presentations should be submitted with a script and students will receive written feedback.

[Outline and objectives]

This course provides students with the fundamental knowledge of the role and activities of International Organizations, with a focus on the United Nations System.

The course consists of four parts. The first part lays the foundations by discussing the theoretical basis of the study of International Organizations. In the second part, we will examine the activities of the United Nations in the field of peace and security. The third part will deal with human rights. In the fourth part, we examine the impact of the UN in the field of development, including contemporary issues such as climate change and global health governance.

[Goal]

The aim of the course is to provide students with theoretical and empirical knowledge about the role of the United Nations on important issues of relevance to their future roles as global citizens.

Students who have completed this course will be able to -explain the basic theories and approaches in the study of International Organizations,

-explain the main roles and functions of the UN in the field of peace and security, human rights, and development, and
-critically assess the effectiveness and impact of the UN on contemporary issues and real-life global problems.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The teaching method will be based on a combination of lectures and discussion. You will be encouraged to engage in critical debate, thorough textual analysis, guided research and group work.

Classes are generally divided into three parts. The first part consists of a short warming-up discussion of the reading material, where we identify the main issues. This will be followed by a lecture by the instructor about the session’s topic. In the third part, discussion activities will give you the chance to ask questions and share your opinions with the class. You will be given timely feedback on your essays through Hoppii.

[Outline and objectives]

The course centers on Asia, the most dynamic region in the world, to derive core policy lessons for economic development in the global context. Asia has achieved a remarkable growth during the past five decades, and its success has been referred to as a “miracle”. However, not all Asian economies have attained the same degree of success. The objective of this course is to learn how a group of Asian countries made it from low income into high income in a single generation. A key feature of the successful Asian economies has been their focus on structural transformation, that is, their capacity to shift resources from sectors of low productivity into sectors of high productivity, and upgrade the production and export baskets. After reviewing conventional development/growth theories, this course assesses Asia’s development from the lens of changing production and employment structures, and discusses implications for long-term growth and poverty reduction. The course pays due attention to the heterogeneity of Asian economies in their level of development and clarifies major causes of the divergence. This course is unique in its persistent focus on structural transformation and its applications of several new analytical tools originated from the network theory in physics.

[Goal]

Students who have taken this course should be able to:

- (1) understand the main growth mechanism: structural transformation, in the development process;
- (2) understand differences in development through the lens of structural transformation;
- (3) understand what the government can do to facilitate the process of structural transformation.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The intent of this course is to expose students to a range of ideas and issues in economic development. Students will be provided an opportunity to learn, think and discuss broadly and deeply about development issues across various development systems through lectures, discussions, group work, presentations and homework. Comments will be provided to assignments. Good works will be presented in class.

Public Policy

Benjamin SAN JOSE

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 金 1/Fri.1

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

This course provides an introduction to public policy, which Thomas R. Dye defines simply, as “whatever governments choose to do or not to do.” This course examines the nature of public policies, how they are made, implemented and evaluated, and the central institutions and actors involved in policy-making.

The course pays particular attention to the theoretical approaches to policy-making. It delves into the stages of the policy process: problem definition and agenda-setting; policy formulation and adoption; implementation; and evaluation. The course also covers governance and policy-making; public policies beyond the nation-state; and policy change and policy convergence.

To help develop analytical and critical thinking on public policy, students will be asked to form groups that would conduct their own analysis of policies undertaken by the Japanese government in certain policy areas, such as economic, welfare, health, education, immigration, gender, defense or environmental policy.

Policy analysis, as Dye puts it, is “finding out what governments do, why they do it, and what difference, if any, it makes.” In the latter part of the course, the groups will be asked to submit written reports and to make powerpoint presentations on the policies studied and policy outcomes and impacts.

[Goal]

The course seeks:

- To acquaint students with public policy as an academic sub-discipline.
- To introduce students to key theories, concepts and/or approaches used in policy-making, policy implementation and policy evaluation.
- To help students examine public policies more critically.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The course will consist mainly of lectures, open discussion, and class activities. Students will be asked as well as encouraged to express their views on the topic being discussed. Audio-visual aids such as short video clips, photos, maps and illustrations will be used to help make issues and events much more concrete and vivid to students, and to help stimulate or enliven discussion and debate. Feedback on assignments will be provided during class discussions, by email or through individual consultations.

Foreign Policy Analysis

Takeshi Yuzawa

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 火 4/Tue.4

その他属性 : 〈グ〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course will provide an overview of Foreign Policy Analysis (FPA), examining the processes and actors involved in foreign policy decision-making.

[Goal]

The course objectives are: (1) to enable students to demonstrate an understanding of the processes involved in foreign policy decision-making; (2) to enable students to demonstrate an understanding of the contexts, pressures and constraints with which policy-makers must deal; (3) to enable students to demonstrate their ability to engage in comparative analysis of the foreign policies of major powers.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course will first examine the key concepts and theories in foreign policy analysis (FPA), which are essential for understanding the contexts, pressures and constraints with which policy-makers must deal. These include the Rational Actor Model, the cognitive and psychological approaches, the bureaucratic politics approaches, the role of history and identity in foreign policy, and other internal-external factors influencing foreign policy decisions. After examining the major approaches in FPA, students will conduct case studies. For this reason, students will be required to give a group presentation based on readings relating to the foreign policies of the major states.

Comments for assignments are given during class and office hours.

[Outline and objectives]

This course offers an overview over the main issues that inform Japan's contemporary diplomatic relations. After reviewing theories of international relations and critically discussing their value for analysing international relations in East Asia, a brief historic overview will introduce the main topics of Japan's modern foreign relations. After this, the course proceeds by looking into several case studies of Japan's foreign policy, focussing on bilateral and multilateral relations. Topics discussed include Japan's territorial disputes with its neighbours, Japan's efforts to manage the rise of China, aspects of Japan's efforts in the field of international cooperation, Japanese proposals for fostering regionalization in Asia, and its efforts to tackle the growing global climate crisis.

[Goal]

Students who have completed this course should be able to:

- understand the main issues that inform Japan's international position and develop individual research interests
- understand the variables that shape Japan's present foreign relations
- critically assess the various interests of the major regional powers in Asia, including Japan
- gain an understanding of the most prominent theories of international relations, and be able to relate them to contemporary issues

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Students are required to read mandatory assignments each week. Lectures will be used to introduce each topic; afterwards, a critical discussion of the texts will take place where students are strongly encouraged to voice their own opinions. In the second half of the semester, depending on the number of participants, students will have the opportunity to give individual or group presentations on a topic of their interest.

Students are required to hand in discussion points for the reading before each class, which will be the basis for the in-class discussion.

Teacher feedback will be given during the discussions and after the optional presentations; comments on the results of the two examinations will be given in written form in a timely manner.

Development Economies

Augusto Ricardo Delgado Narro

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 水 2/Wed.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This is an introductory course to the field of Economic Development. This course aims to understand the main issues of development economics, analyze the economic problems of developing countries, and discuss strategies for achieving inclusive growth and reducing poverty and extreme inequality. This understanding will help the students answer key questions: Why do some countries achieve high levels of economic development and others do not? What are the policies governments can implement to change the growth path of their countries? This course will start from a “macro” perspective and later introduce a “micro” viewpoint of the problems to explore the social-economic factors that affect economic development. This course will cover economic growth, agricultural development, food security, population, education, migration, poverty reduction, informality, and more.

[Goal]

1. Understand: (1) why some emerging countries have been successful in catching up with rich countries in per capita income, while others are left behind, (2) why half of humanity remains poor, and many of them are living with less than $2 per day, and (3) why environmental degradation and resource exploitation are commonly associated with income growth.
2. Understand: what can be done to promote development through policies. Learn to analyze the economic and social impacts of specific initiatives.
3. Use data to conduct development analyses such as growth diagnostics, poverty assessments, impact analysis of development projects.
4. Encourage students to explore alternative paths of economic development that promote the well-being of individuals and communities.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The course will be mainly conducted through lectures where we will study theory and applications. Students are encouraged and expected to participate in classes. Depending on the number of students we may have presentations or a final essay. Feedback will be given to students at the end of each presentation/essay. Please note that the teaching approach may vary according to the established sanitation level and following the university rules in this regard.

Environment and Development

Gregory Toth

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 金 6/Fri.6

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

We will first define “development” and “environment” from the most prominent perspectives (noting theory) and trace their formations, the overlapping portions of which will guide our exploration of related ethics and norms and their translation into international law. From this base, we will analyze the intersection of environment and development in various sectors and international efforts. After noting detractors, we will look forward towards the continued evolution (including potential divergence and convergence) of these concepts.

【Goal】

The purpose of this course is to introduce students to topics related to environment and development, including the contextual background and recent trends. Students will develop critical thinking and policy analysis skills through discussion of the various topics, as well as understandings of elements related to: international relations, international law, sustainability, socio-economic and political division, and related theory and philosophy.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3” and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course follows a lecture-discussion method. After the material for each unit has been introduced, students will have an opportunity to ask questions and make comments about the material. Feedback will be provided directly during discussion sessions in the form of leading (Socratic-esque) questions and in summaries of the common trends in the completed assignments. Individualized feedback will be given in response to final assignment and upon request.

Reading of materials identified (and often provided) by the instructor; preparation of discussion talking points and questions; group report/presentation. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

【Textbooks】

There are no textbooks for this course.

【References】

Various references will be noted within the course materials.

【Grading criteria】

Students will be evaluated on the basis of class participation (40%) and a final review report/presentation (30/30%). Class participation will be judged based on attendance, preparation of questions/comments for discussion, and peer review during group work scenarios.

【Changes following student comments】

Students are encouraged to utilize the discussion time to speak in class.

【休講】 Society and Environmental Change

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 金 2/Fri.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This course considers various interactions between human being and the surrounding environment, including living forms within it. Such interaction eventually forms various cultures, and those cultures advanced human society in history. However, we have allowed the unprecedented Great Acceleration to occur, while we were enjoying such advancement. In this course, culture is considered as one of the domains as well as base layers of a society, and students are introduced to various culture and its environmental implications, which in turn affects the culture of the society. By looking at the connections to political and economic aspects, resolutions to building a sustainable society will be explored.

【Goal】

Students will be able to

- understand oneself as being shaped by the interaction between the socio-cultural context and resulting environmental changes;
- gain knowledge about the historical background on how the current unsustainable society has been shaped;
- acquire knowledge and insights about environmental implications on which our “sophisticated” lives are based; and
- acquire the basic concept and perspectives for future visioning for achieving sustainable society.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course will be conducted in mixture of lecture-based learning and more active involvement of students in class discussions. Students also have the opportunity to work in a group project towards the end of the course. More specific instructions are given in class for group work. Feedback to students’ work (on assignments and group work, etc.) is given in class and/or through the Hosei Learning Management System.

Advanced Topics in American Literature: US Southern Literature

Gregory Khezrnejat

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 月 3/Mon.3

その他属性 : 〈グ〉〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

Southern literature is perhaps the best-known regional literature of the United States, featuring voices, genres, and motifs specific to its distinct tradition. But it is far from a monolith, and the literature of the south reflects the diverse cultures, peoples, and languages of the region. Southern literature has often given a sharp focus to social, historical, and cultural issues of the United States, serving as a grim counterpoint to more optimistic national mythmaking. This course will focus on southern literature in the twentieth century, exploring how writers respond to questions of war, race, memory, class, and modernization.

【Goal】

Students will examine the historical context and major themes of southern literature. Students will also develop critical reading and writing skills.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

Modern Japanese Fiction in Translation

Gregory Kheyrnejat

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 月 3/Mon.3

その他属性 : 〈グ〉〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

How do we process the experience of encountering a new language and culture? How does that process in turn affect our own personal language and identity? In this course, we will read translations of personal essays and fiction written in the Japanese language by contemporary authors undergoing such experiences, including Japanese authors living abroad and non-Japanese authors writing in their adopted language. As we compare their stories and observations, we will also consider how the act of writing provides each author with a space to form and perform new cultural identities and personal idioms.

[Goal]

Students will practice reading and writing critically as they explore dynamics of culture, language, and identity in modern Japanese literature.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Classes will be divided roughly evenly between lectures and guided discussions. Short quizzes will be given to assess comprehension of weekly readings. Students will submit midterm and final papers. In-class feedback will be given for daily reaction papers, and students will receive personal feedback on written assignments.

Readings in Philosophy

Robert Sinclair

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 月 3/Mon.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

The three main objectives of the course are to introduce: (i) some of the real-world problems of global justice and the moral and philosophical challenges they present, (ii) some of the main positions and arguments that philosophers have proposed in response to these problems, and (iii) the philosophical method of analyzing and evaluating these different perspectives and arguments. A larger aim is to show how philosophy can help provide analytical tools for both clarifying and addressing the problems of humanity. Some of the topics we will discuss include: world poverty and economic inequality, human rights and sovereignty, nationalism and cultural diversity, just war and humanitarian intervention, and boundaries and immigration.

[Goal]

Students will (1) develop a deeper understanding of the basic issues, concepts and viewpoints found in global ethics and global political philosophy, (2) explore how philosophical ideas apply to real life events and (3) learn to think critically and express their opinions accurately. The class provides students with the moral background for their studies in the related fields of political science, international relations and politics.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Students will attend lectures, read related materials and have two written examinations. Feedback on completed assignments will be given in class.

[Outline and objectives]

Philosophy of Love

Love comes in many forms: romantic love, familial love, and friendship are some examples. Moreover, love and loving relationships play important roles in human life and well-being, and because of this, many of us are familiar with love. However, despite love's familiarity, puzzling philosophical questions arise when reflecting on its nature. What exactly is love? Is love irrational? Can it be immoral? How do advances in technology alter or shape how we think about love? These are all questions that we will explore in this course.

[Goal]

This course has four primary learning goals. First, students will learn about various and diverging views on the philosophy of love. Second, students will improve critical thinking skills when engaging with abstract reasoning, especially in the context of philosophical debate. Third, students will improve their reading skills when confronting nuanced and challenging text. Finally, students will improve their writing skills to communicate complex ideas clearly and confidently.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Each meeting will include an interactive lecture with slides and an active learning period. The lectures will occupy roughly one hour of each meeting. Students will then write a short in-class reflective writing exercise. Lastly, students will participate in a class discussion or debate. The instructor will assess students primarily on their final paper. Students will produce a paper proposal before writing a paper draft. After the proposal has been approved, students will write a draft of their paper. Students will then exchange papers with each other, and they will write a peer-reviewed report of another student's paper. Students should consider this report when revising their final drafts. In addition to the final paper, students will produce a short report explaining how they integrated changes from their peer-reviewed report into their final paper draft. The instructor will provide written feedback on the final paper.

Philosophy of the Person

Hedonism is the view that people should strive to live the most pleasurable lives possible. Some philosophers worry that this view renders humans in an undignified light and fails to capture what is most important about being a person. They instead claim that self-perfection should be the ultimate aim of human beings. This debate has wide-ranging effects on topics such as moral epistemology, moral psychology, moral theory, the nature of virtue, duty, and the good life. This course explores this debate in depth, focusing on Henry Sidgwick's and T.H. Green's ethical works.

Advanced Topics in Contemporary Art

Utako Shindo

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 火 6/Tue.6

その他属性 : 〈他〉〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

Since the late 19th century we have witnessed a number of artistic movements from, what is considered, modern to contemporary: the birth of realism, impressionism, abstract expressionism, minimalism, the rise of conceptual art, installation, video and pop art, the extension into earth, body, public domain, the revival of painting, the exploration into photography, the shift to more participation and collaboration based art practices. Amidst all these transformations, how does art continue to remain inspirational and 'contemporary'? In which way, are we able to recognize and respond to truly creative works from personal, global and interdisciplinary perspectives? This course looks at various topics in Fine art and closely pay attentions to how an artwork exists in a certain milieu: time and space, and among all kinds of relationships. Artistic practices mainly in Europe, North America, Asia and also other areas across the globe will be examined.

[Goal]

You will learn to appreciate an artwork by 'listening' to voices of an artwork as well as an artist, becoming familiar with terms in art from the late modern to contemporary times.

You will understand how one can engage with an artwork respectfully and express her/his/their unique experience in writing and speech.

You will become active and discerning participants/viewers of art, equipped with basic knowledges of Fine Art and related theories.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

I will provide a referential material as a post on Google Classroom in prior to each class. In the class, we will read texts, watch video clips, look at lecture slides, to learn about the key terms, artistic backgrounds, a milieu of an artwork that will help us understand and engage with the work. We will also have a in-class exercise and the time for questions at the end. Unless your question involves something personal, please ask during this time. In addition, you are required to attend at least one off-campus museum or gallery exhibition relevant to the course (determined by the instructor). You will then make presentations and write their research papers. You will be also asked to explore your own creative possibility, inspired by the shared learnings and experiments, at the end of the course.

The feedbacks to the in-class exercises will be provided in the next class as well as through the google classroom as comments where students are asked to submit them.

The feedbacks to the assignments, the presentations, and the experiments will be provided through the google classroom as comments as well as in the class.

NOTE 1: Please be aware that some works shown in class may address controversial issues and may include nudity.

NOTE 2: The schedule and the content may change in response to the students' needs.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students need to keep up with the class materials (readings, videos and so forth) and to be prepared for class discussions and activities. As part of their research, students are required to make at least one visit to an art exhibition suggested by the instructor in order to prepare their presentations and research papers. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Textbooks]

No textbook will be used. Readings will be made available on Hoppii or Google Classroom.

[References]

References will be made available on Hoppii or Google Classroom.

[Grading criteria]

Participation (30%) : Students will be expected to spend time with the referential materials (text and video clip) posted on Google Classroom for each class. Students will complete comment card (as part of In-class-exercise) and submit at the end of the class or 5pm on the next day. A self-guided field trip to one exhibition and the following presentation and paper: Each student is required to visit one of the exhibitions to be suggested by the instructor.

Short Presentation (20%) : Present the chosen work to class that you engage with during your self-guid museum/gallery visit. Project Paper (30%) : Write a paper, which is more than the written version of your presentation. Rather, it is a research paper and you will need to find and discuss an article on the artwork or the artist of your choice.

Experimentation (20%) : Students will experiment to connect a topic from the class to your interdisciplinary interest, to draw an idea for new art, and together to follow an instruction for making an artwork.

Art in the Real World

Suzanne Mooney

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 金 2/Fri.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

Despite art being a part of human culture and civilisation for millennia, the art world is often looked upon as something disconnected from everyday life. In this course, we will examine how art and everyday life are intertwined. This will be followed by study on the forms art takes in contemporary society, the value of art, spaces for art, and case studies on how artists live and work in contemporary society.

[Goal]

Through this course, students will gain an understanding of the role of contemporary art in society.

An important aspect of this study is to comprehend the processes of creation and the thinking behind public exhibitions, the multifaceted approaches of artists, and the infrastructure of the world of contemporary art in Japan and abroad, and how the art world is connected to the "real" world.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3" and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

In addition to lectures on relevant topics, students will take part in practical exercises to gain first-hand knowledge and experience of the processes involved in contemporary art-making.

- Drawing to communicate
- Collating images to create narrative
- Combining text and images to change meaning
- Action-based art

Students will also research a living artist working now, and will make a presentation on the results of this research.

In addition to the above, students must keep track of their weekly learning by collating images and text in a class notebook, 2 pages (minimum) per week that are relevant to the course material.

Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

Feedback on presentations will be given in class. Separate feedback will be given via email or the Learning Management System if required.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students are expected to prepare a notebook and basic writing and drawing materials. Reading and preparation activities will be assigned on a weekly basis.

Students are also expected to visit at least one art exhibition and conduct research in preparation for a presentation (suggestions will be provided).

Students are also expected to use their notebook to keep a record of ideas, samples of artworks, and other experiences throughout the semester. A digital notebook is acceptable.

Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Textbooks]

No textbook will be used. Lecture slides/notes/other materials will be provided online.

[Grading criteria]

Participation:

This applies to class activities, assigned readings, exhibition visit and regular contribution to the group discussions.

Weekly submitted responses:

This is a requirement to submit weekly assignments. Examples of weekly assignments are: Pages from your workbook; a written response to class contents, a response to an assigned reading, evidence of activities completed in class that week.

Presentation: each student must make a short presentation on a living, working artist within the context of the course.

The final grade is calculated as follows:

Active participation 30%

Weekly submitted responses 40%

Presentation 30%

[Changes following student comments]

Not applicable.

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

Students will need a class notebook (e.g. A5-A4 sketchbook/notebook), and general stationary (e.g. pen, pencil, glue, tape, scissors). A digital notebook is also acceptable. Access to a computer, as weekly responses and submissions will be digital only.

Details of other items required will be given as required.

[Others]

You do not need to be "good at art" or have previous practical experience in art to take this class.

What is essential for this class is to be curious and open-minded about what art can be, and to be willing to engage in discussions on topics that are new and, at times, challenging.

Students are expected to be punctual. As many of the topics are open for debate, participation in group and class discussions will be expected of all students.

Weekly responses must be submitted before the next weeks class, through an online system.

【Outline and objectives】

Existentialism is a branch of philosophy that confronts some of the most problematic aspects of existence. These include the value of freedom and rationality, whether living an authentic life is achievable, whether life can be meaningful, the nature of absurdity, whether modern life is nihilistic, and the role of emotions in ethics. This course is an in-depth exploration of several themes from existentialist thought. This course focuses on the philosophical writings of Fyodor Dostoevsky, Albert Camus, Søren Kierkegaard, Friedrich Nietzsche, Jean-Paul Sartre, Simone de Beauvoir, and Iris Murdoch.

【Goal】

This course has four primary learning goals. First, students will learn about various and diverging views on the philosophy of existentialism. Second, students will improve critical thinking skills when engaging with abstract reasoning. Third, students will improve their reading skills when confronting nuanced and challenging philosophical and literary texts. Finally, students will improve their writing skills to communicate complex ideas clearly and confidently.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Each meeting will include an interactive lecture with slides and a discussion period. The lectures will occupy roughly one hour of each meeting. The nature of the discussion period will change based on whether a homework assignment is due the following week. On weeks when a homework assignment is due the following week, students will work in small groups to discuss the assignment prompt. On weeks when there is no homework assignment due the following week, class-wide discussions or debates will follow the lecture. Students will receive feedback from the instructor on homework assignments and the final exam via the online Learning Management System.

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

This course will provide a perspective on contemporary British culture. With Britain as a case theme, we also understand the diversity of cultures around the world and the significance of enhancing communication with people from other cultural backgrounds.

[Goal]

(1) Students will study the latest developments of, and arguments on, culture in Britain after WWII, particularly after the 1980s. During this period, British society and culture changed rapidly and were fragmented and reshaped. (2) Students will think of them in social, political, economic and historical contexts, and also study factors such as nation, ethnicity, gender, youth culture, commercialism, entertainments, and the internet. (3) Accumulating knowledge and having a map concerning contemporary British culture will contribute to students' understanding of interdisciplinary discourses in media and academia. (4) This course will help build skills of acquiring information, analyzing materials, and writing reports.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?] Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Students will learn the words, concepts, and proper nouns of every week's theme. While giving consideration to the tradition, the conventions, and Britishness in culture, these themes will be analysed in the context of 21st-century Britain. The recent studies of culture will make debate issues more understandable to foreign students. Pictures, films, and music will be used in the class. For students' further study, materials will be distributed, as well as related books and websites introduced.

Feedback will be given through Hoppii.

【Outline and objectives】

New Zealand (NZ) is one of the most popular destinations for nature-lovers and fans of world-acclaimed movies such as The Lord of the Rings and The Hobbit. At the same time, its flourishing economy and relaxing lifestyle has attracted immigrants and long-term stayers from all over the world. It is little known, however, that this small country with a population of about five million has been leading the world on social issues, particularly with regard to women's suffrage, the anti-nuclear movement and caring for the underprivileged. This course is concerned with the significant historical figures and events of NZ from the early contact between the Maori and Europeans to some great backyard inventors. With NZ as a case theme, we also understand the diversity of cultures around the world and the significance of enhancing communication with people from other cultural backgrounds.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) acquire substantial understanding of the major facts and issues of NZ,
- (2) develop the skills needed to collect and analyse data for research purposes, and
- (3) learn to make an effective presentation about selected topics.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3” and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Each student does research on an assigned topic independently and gives a 20-minute talk on it, while the other students are expected to contribute to the discussion with questions and comments. The instructor is more of a facilitator to assist students by providing a framework for study and inviting lively discussion and response. By the last class, students will complete an essay on one of their chosen subjects, addressing the review comments and the suggestions they receive at the time of their presentation.

【休講】 Social Theory: Perspectives on Inequality

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 金 5/Fri.5

その他属性 : 〈優〉〈S〉

【Outline and objectives】

Social inequality has always been a part of human society, and social scientists have invested much effort into “figuring out” why there is social inequality and how social inequality is sustained and reproduced. Earlier efforts focused mostly on socioeconomic inequality, while later endeavors explored racial, gender, sexual inequalities and their interconnections. These efforts resulted in classical and contemporary social theories on inequality. In this course, students will learn these theories, which are interesting in and of themselves, but more importantly, they will learn to think about inequality deeply and sophisticatedly.

【Goal】

In mastering the social theories covered in this course, students will hone their critical thinking skills, develop their own theories of various aspects of society and the world and consider solutions to lessen inequality. Students will acquire the skills to engage with complex ideas and think systematically and logically, and remaining aware of social injustices and problems. By the end of the course, students should be able to form and support their opinions with ease.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course is taught through a combination of lectures interwoven with short discussions, student presentations based on readings, and post-presentation discussions.

After the active learning section, the instructor will give feedback to each student personally in verbal or written form.

Students were positive about the course, despite the rather heavy workload. However, to encourage students to engage more with the class materials, short discussions have been integrated into the lectures from 2017.

【Others】

If you like to read, think and discuss, this is the course for you. If you have taken and liked courses in political theory, philosophy, cultural anthropology or other sociology courses, it’s likely that you find this course enjoyable as well.

Aslo, students who have passed Introduction to Sociology will be given admission priority. All students who intend to enroll in this class have to attend the first class.

Race, Class and Gender II: Global Inequalities

Daiki Hiramori

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 木 1/Thu.1

その他属性 : 〈グ〉〈優〉〈S〉〈未〉

【Outline and objectives】

This class builds on what students have learned in Race, Class and Gender I to look at how inequalities are inter-connected through examining various global issues. Students will learn to analyze how race, class, gender, and sexuality are connected to each other as intersecting inequalities in a society and the world, and on that basis, consider the possibility of an equal but diverse world.

【Goal】

A major goal is to develop students' sensitivity towards issues of inequality and skills in social analysis and critical thinking. By exploring social issues in an international and global context, students will learn to see how any global issue is multidimensional, and specifically, how inequalities are complex and constituted by the interconnection of race, class, gender, sexuality, and other bases of inequality.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

This course will be based on a combination of short lectures by the instructor and student-led class discussions. Verbal and written feedback on assignments is given during class discussions and through using other tools as appropriate. Students are encouraged to visit the instructor during office hours for more personalized feedback.

Migration and Diaspora

Chris H Park

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 木 4/Thu.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

Scholarship on diaspora has drastically increased in the last three decades, and the issues pertaining to immigration and exile, as well as nation-state, nationalism, citizenship, identity and belonging have been explored and examined through a lens of diaspora in various academic disciplines. The course will address various issues that constitute diaspora such as the process of transmigration, settlement, and creation of diasporic communities, as well as identity formation, cultural hybridization, and cultural/knowledge productions – all of which are informed by race, gender, sexuality, class, religion, language and others.

In so doing, the class will first locate the roots of diasporas. As early historical references of the Jewish diaspora and the Black diaspora suggest, the displacement of people and communities from the original homeland often involved both internal and external forces that rendered them “exiles” or “slaves” against their will. Similarly, more recent diasporas emerge as a result of conflicts, wars, colonization, decolonization and globalization that result dispersion of people as “immigrants,” “refugees” and “adoptees.” Situating diaspora in broader projects of nation-building and empire-building, the course will ask and complicate the questions not simply about who, but also when, how, and under what circumstances people become diaspora, as well as how they (re)construct diasporic subjectivity and identity. Finally, the course will have a special focus on women’s experiences and voices.

[Goal]

At the end of this course, students should be able to:

- Explain such concepts as nationalism, citizenship, identity and belonging
- Explain historical and contemporary issues faced by various displaced people categorized as “immigrants,” “refugees,” and “adoptees” in their process of transmigration, settlement, and creation of diasporic communities
- Analyze various data sources including policies, legislations, historical facts, popular cultural production and personal narratives
- Use intersectionality as a lens of analysis to discuss issues pertaining to identity formation

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Although the instructor will provide the basic framework in a lecture format, students are expected to actively participate in and contribute to class discussion. This includes asking questions, seeking clarification and offering critical ideas and interpretation. In addition, a small group of 3-5 individuals will work on a project and present findings and analyses on a topic of their choice. Further directions will be given in class.

In addition, it is possible that some comments from the reaction papers may be introduced in class to elaborate on each lecture and to facilitate discussions.

Comments for assignments and the final reports are given through email.

Students are expected to regularly check (at least once or twice a week) their university email account and Hoppii for course announcements and updates.

Feminist Theory

Daiki Hiramori

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 月 3/Mon.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This course focuses on vibrant intellectual conversations engendered by the production of feminist theory in the contemporary moment. This course is divided into the following four sections: (1) theorizing feminist times and spaces, (2) theorizing intersectionality and difference, (3) theorizing feminist knowledge and agency, and (4) imagine otherwise/solidarity reconsidered. In addition, this course pays a special attention to Chicana feminist theory. Through this course, students will learn the ways feminist theorizing moves across disciplines and at times intentionally defines and destabilizes disciplinary categorization.

【Goal】

By the end of this course, students will be able to: (1) identify and describe the key concepts and main themes of feminist theory (remembering/understanding), (2) apply feminist theory to contemporary social issues in Japan and abroad (applying), (3) compare and contrast various strands of feminist theory (analyzing), and (4) develop and present their own ideas and perspectives on gender and sexuality (evaluating/creating).

Special Topics I: Photography and Culture

Gary McLeod

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 土 2/Sat.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

How can photography help to understand the world around us? Can it support or shape the way in which we interact with it? This course looks at the role of photography in an increasingly digital and time-poor society. Through “rephotography”, a set of visual practices for expanding conversations about place over time, the course explores the dual pressures upon today’s camera users to evidence and record reality while embodying authentic acts of personal expression.

[Goal]

Students carry out an independent rephotography project from conception to publication under a broader research agenda to visually record time and place in Tokyo. Through producing a photo book, students will develop critical perspectives toward contemporary image-making while learning to articulate research methodologies and give constructive feedback.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course uses a practical approach. Workshops, assignments and supporting lectures are employed to develop students’ understanding of contemporary photography and improve critical skills regarding the production of images (i.e. visual literacy). Students produce and print a contact sheet of 35 photographs every week which is used for discussion in class. Final submission comprises a photo book and evidence of participation (12 submitted contact sheets). Attendance is recorded weekly using visual media (e.g. photograph). Feedback is given through ongoing dialogue between students and instructor during production of the contact sheets and photobook.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students must regularly take photographs throughout the semester. Every week students are required to bring a contact sheet containing 35 photographs made during the week before, which will be discussed in class. They are also expected to use the photo book resource in the library and do assigned readings. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Grading criteria]

Participation: this applies to weekly contact sheets (minimum of 12) More than 2 unexcused absences will result in failure of this course.
 Photo book: each student must produce a small photo book (min. 96 pages) that communicates ideas relating to the city and time.
 The final grade is based on: Participation 40% and Photo book 60%. As a variety of predictable and unpredictable factors are involved in the process of creating a photobook, evaluation considers a blend of concept, research, originality, visual communication ability and tenacity.

Participation and speaking up during class discussions (40%)

Presentation (50%)

【Changes following student comments】

Not applicable.

【Prerequisite】

Previously taking classes on media, race and gender will enhance the learning experience for this class.

【Outline and objectives】

In this class we will explore how different media operate, exploring how various mediums — such as cinema, television, comics, animation and social media—allow us to see and understand the world in different ways. By using theories and methods developed for each media, we will gain a better understanding of how each media operates, and what it allows us to see or hides from our view. In order to keep some common ground, we will compare each of these media to a particular type of media platform. While comparing and contrasting these media, we will be analyzing specific films, television series, manga, anime works, etc., detailing how they touch on topics such as societal critique, politics, race, gender, technology, spectatorship, geopolitics, and consumerism.

【Goal】

In addition to teaching the students about contemporary media and society, this class aims to develop critical thinking and analytical skills. Throughout the semester students will: 1) learn methodologies to analyze various media; 2) examine the specific operations of each media; 3) learn how to analyze the media's relationship to self and society; 4) explore how to conduct in-depth analyses of specific media works.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will be discussion-based, with visual material such as images and clips of films, manga, animation, etc. Each week students will be provided with an academic reading relevant to the topic. These readings will be important background information and/or will be directly addressed as the topic of the class content and discussion. Discussions based off of the reading material will be facilitated by questions from the instructor to help the students explore and develop their critical and analytical skills for that topic. Students will be assessed on their understanding of the readings through class discussions presentations. In class, feedback is given using some comments in relation to student questions and comments.

【Outline and objectives】

With Disney films and anime becoming popular all over the world, it is hard not to see animation as a dominant form of global media. But how can we explore animation in its global position? Focusing on animation from the U.S., Japan, as well as Europe and parts of Asia, in this class we will closely examine the particularities of animation, exploring different thematic topics that intersect with globalization. Throughout the semester we will be engaging with the aesthetics of animation, analyzing its history, production processes, and global presence. In the first section of the class, we will learn how animation functions as a certain type of technology, how it operates transnationally, and how this is representative of contemporary globalization. In the second section of the class, we will examine specific topics that are relevant to globalization, including the spread of culture, the ethics of globalization, and global environmental destruction. Utilizing the methods learned in the first section of the class, we will analyze how specific animations and genres grapple with these topics.

【Goal】

In addition to teaching students information about animation and globalization, this class aims to develop critical thinking and analytical skills. Throughout the semester students will: 1) learn methodologies to examine animation as a particular type of media; 2) explore many of the problems of globalization through the example of animation; 3) learn how to apply those methodologies to analyze how certain animations engage with the problems of globalization.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will be lecture-based, with visual material such as clips of films and animation. Students will be asked to have group discussions on certain themes. Each week students will be provided with an academic reading relevant to the topic. These readings will be important background information and/or will be directly addressed as the topic of the lecture and discussion. Lectures will explain in detail and through examples the topic for that class. Discussions based on the lecture will be facilitated by questions from the instructor to help the students explore and develop their critical and analytical skills for that topic. Students will be assessed on their understanding of the lectures and readings through their presentations and papers. Students will receive feedback in class and in written form, based on a grading rubric.

【Outline and objectives】

In this class, we will explore how various media intersect with the idea of the nation in Japan. This will include engaging with the intersection of different media during the formation of the modern Japanese nation-state in the late 1800s. From this point of departure, we will move forward through Japanese history, exploring different media and how they operated in Japanese society at different times. We will examine print culture, from newspapers and wood-block prints, to comics and magazines, as well as moving-image media such as animation and live-action TV and film. Exploring their history, we will analyze some of their shifts over time, and how they reflect changes in their relationship to images of the nation in Japan. This includes how subcultural “otaku” media became official symbols of Japanese national culture, both locally and globally. After addressing this topic in detail, we will then return to more mainstream media, such as films and TV dramas and their relationship to shifts in Japanese society.

【Goal】

In addition to teaching the students about modern Japanese history, society, and media, this class aims to develop critical thinking and analytical skills. Throughout the semester students will: 1) learn methodologies to examine various media and their connection to Japanese society; 2) examine the specific dynamics of each media and their connection with the nation of Japan on a local and global scale; 3) develop how to analytically engage with the history of Japan and these media through the methodologies learned in class.

Media Research

Kukhee Choo

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 火 4/Tue.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course aims at helping students historicize and contextualize the socio-political and economic influences that media technology has had on our everyday lives and how that influence manifested itself in media representations. The study of media technology as material culture through its production, dissemination and uses has become more urgent as new forms of media are created faster than ever. In this course, students will analyze how media technology has developed throughout history and will further examine the pros and cons, social embracement and anxieties associated with each technology and their representations. Students will apply what they learn about the development of media technology and how it has been represented from a historical and socio-economic perspective and reflect it in their research projects.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will be able to,

- understand the history of media technology and its institutional development through their research projects
- learn theories regarding the development of media technology and learn how the technological development of media and its institutions has informed human perception, anxieties, body, gender and politics throughout history
- improve critical thinking ability about how the historical development of media technology has changed the institutional landscape as we know it and demonstrate that understanding by constructing strong arguments during class discussions

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The course will cover the historical development of media technology through required readings and watching relevant media examples. The class will be centered on student discussions related to the required readings and topics and the instructor will guide the discussions accordingly.

Comments/feedback for assignments (tests and reports, etc.) are given during office hours.

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : | Year : 3~4

Day/Period :

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

Artificial Intelligence (AI) has a profound impact on the business world in many ways, changing the way cities are run, the way we live and socialise through to the way we do business. This course focuses on how businesses use AI to make their businesses more profitable and customer experience better. In case-studies we will cover during this course we will analyse the impact and thereby also understanding businesses better. We will also observe that businesses employ data scientists to analyse data. These scientists use machine learning as part of their implementation of AI. So in the later part of the course we will delve deeper into Machine Learning so that we can better understand what data scientists do. Hence we are able to understand the “mechanics” of AI.

【Goal】

Using the critical thinking exercises and class discussions, students will be able to apply their knowledge to case-studies and group work. The skills they acquire through this course should prepare them to understand key technical terms and give a better understanding of the world.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

At the beginning of class, feedback for the previous class is given using some comments from submitted reaction papers. Method of instruction will be a mixture of lecture, group presentation and discussions. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

Cultural Psychology

Takafumi Sawaumi

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 金 3/Fri.3

その他属性 : 〈グ〉〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course introduces the perspectives and major research findings of cultural psychology. The course will introduce general theories and perspectives underlying cultural psychology, explore cultural influences on a wide range of psychological processes, including socialization, self-concept, motivation, emotion, and cognition. The course will also explain the mechanisms underlying cultural differences and examine the process of acculturation and biculturalism in an increasingly diverse world. Throughout this course, students will learn how culture shapes the way we think and behave and how we, at the same time, shape these cultures.

[Goal]

One of the aims of this course is to introduce students to the perspectives, research methods, and findings of cultural psychology. Another equally important aim of this course is cultivating students' abilities to understand and deal with variations in psychological processes across cultural and ethnic groups, as well as to gain an understanding of the cultural groundings of their own experiences and actions. By the end of this course, students will be able to demonstrate understanding of how cultural systems influence individuals' psychological processing, including development, self-concepts, motivation, emotion, and cognition. They will also be able to critically engage and analyze cultural products, such as books, films, and advertisements.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Instructional methods include lectures, films, discussion over assigned readings, and small group activities. At the beginning of class, feedback for the previous class is given using some comments from submitted slips and papers.

Community Psychology

Toshiaki Sasao

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 水 3/Wed.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This course has been designed to provide a rigorous undergraduate-level introduction to the theories and methods of community psychology. Community psychology is concerned with person-environment interactions and the ways society impacts individual and community functioning. The field focuses on social issues, social institutions, and other settings that influence individuals, groups, and organizations. Community psychology aims to optimize the well-being of individuals and communities with innovative alternative interventions designed in collaboration with affected community members and with other related disciplines inside and outside of psychology. Students are expected to gain a comprehensive understanding of working knowledge and skills in community psychology, as practiced around the world.

【Goal】

Upon completion of the course, students are expected to achieve the following goals:

- (a) to develop an understanding of the role of social-historical factors in the development of community psychological perspectives while dispelling the popular myth about the field;
- (b) to gain a working knowledge of different theoretical approaches for prevention of social and psychological problems in the community and begin to think about how these can be practically implemented and evaluated;
- (c) to critically analyze the community psychological literature; and
- (d) to appreciate professional careers and practices in community psychology.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】
Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course combines several different kinds of pedagogical strategies including lectures, class discussion, film discussion, and small group work. The requirements of the course include: (a) active participation, preparation, and engagement in class, (b) in-class and take-home exercises, and (c) midterm and final exam. Feedback will be provided via individual face-to-face sessions and/or the Hosei Hoppi System.

Required Readings

Students are expected to come to class fully prepared to participate in class discussion and other activities. In order to do so, students are required to have read the readings for each module prior to coming to class sessions.

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

Major topics include definition, psychological assessment methods, psychotherapy approaches, along with the history of treatment and the role of science in clinical psychology. The course also explores some of the most common mental illnesses.

[Goal]

Major Course Objectives.

By the end of the course, you should be able to:

- Demonstrate an understanding of how clinical psychologists approach mental health from a biological, cognitive, and social perspective.
- Explain the importance of the scientist-practitioner model of clinical psychology.
- Describe the types of questions clinical psychologists ask and realize that appropriate research methods must be employed in order to answer them.
- Identify the major tasks and responsibilities of clinical psychologists as health care professionals.
- Engage with the ethical framework for the practice of psychology.
- Identify diversity issues as they relate to clinical psychology.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Through a series of lectures, readings, exercises, films, and group projects, this course introduces and provides a broad overview of the field of clinical psychology. 1. Final Project -presentation

The final project is to be completed in small groups of students (if you want to do it individually, you must clear it with myself). The goal of the final project is for students to research and present information about the topic of clinical psychology in class by using power-point slides. Projects will focus on and cover the specific topic of clinical intervention. Possible examples of the projects include: Person-centered therapy, Psychodynamics therapy, Humanistic & Existential Psychotherapies, Behavior therapy, Cognitive-Behavioral therapy, Child & Family therapy, Couple therapy, Psychopharmacology, etc.

The topic could be a specific issues in clinical psychology other than intervention, but those who wants to do so must consult myself in advance.

2.Movie Report: A list of movies will be provided in class.

3. Exams: There will be no exam, but a brief final paper will be assigned.

4. Research Article Summary: In order to help you develop your understanding of psychological findings and methodology, you will be required to complete a brief (2 to 5 pages) summary of a research article. Articles appropriate for this paper can be found on the website or in library. Use an article of interest to you as long as it is appropriate to the course content and relevant to the field of clinical psychology. Insightful comments from reaction papers will be introduced in class and used in deeper discussions.

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed to introduce students to the major theoretical perspectives and empirical research on the psychology of morality. In recent decades there has been a renaissance in research exploring morality and its associated psychological aspects. Accordingly, this course will focus primarily on psychological research on morality from a variety of fields (including cognitive psychology, comparative psychology, social psychology, developmental psychology, and evolutionary psychology) but will also include discussion of related work in philosophy, animal behavior, economics, and neuroscience. The course is intended to provide an introductory overview to the psychology of morality while also addressing core questions, such as: What is morality? Where does it come from? Do humans have core innate moral intuitions or are they socially learned and culturally dependent? Is there evidence of morality in any other species? By the end of the course, the students will have a greater appreciation of potential answers to these questions and then ongoing debates that surround them.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students should be able to: (1) recognize and understand the key terms and major theoretical approaches in the psychology of morality; (2) discuss relevant studies and identify the strengths and weaknesses in their methodology and theoretical models; (3) compare and contrast different psychological theories of morality and discuss their application to selected scenarios; (4) critically evaluate the key theoretical approaches and their potential relevance to everyday life and moral judgments.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course will be taught primarily through a combination of lectures and group discussion. In the first part of the class the lecture will introduce key topics and theories and the group discussions will focus on related readings and issues of debate. Reaction papers will be assigned for selected topics in order to encourage engagement with relevant issues. Over the course of the semester, students will be required to prepare an oral presentation that discusses the research on a topic of their choosing covered on the course. The mid term and final exams will consist of questions that will evaluate the lecture content and core readings. Exams will be conducted on and feedback will be provided through Google Classrooms.

More detailed feedback will be provided in regard to the reaction papers and how to structure essay-style answers for exams. All students will be tasked with reading the same core reading for each class with additional reading options to reduce confusion and improve class discussion. More time will be allocated to in-class discussion and debates to insure students understand lecture topics.

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

There is no specialist equipment required beyond a PC/laptop and access to the internet. Some classes may be held online. Weekly readings and reaction papers will be distributed via Google Classroom.

Qualitative Research Methods

Allen Kim

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 金 5/Fri.5

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed to introduce students to qualitative research methods. The course begins with research problems, questions and design considerations. The course follows with training, through lecture, group work and hands-on experiences, in data collection methods commonly used in qualitative research—field observation, interviews, and the use of documents and archival data. Students will undertake a pilot research study as part of the course requirements. This includes designing a research question, doing a literature review, creating a questionnaire, observing a field setting, analyzing field notes, and presenting on preliminary research findings. The exercises are intended to develop the mindset required to think through, design, and execute a qualitative study.

[Goal]

Provide students with an appreciation for and the basic steps of qualitative research design. Acquaint students with a diversity of qualitative methods and associated theoretical, ethical, and pragmatic issues. Instruct students on how to conduct qualitative research that is descriptively rich, theoretically illuminating, and personally meaningful. Each student will be able to create her/his own research questions, decide a research site/community, conduct original research, and present their findings.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Although the instructor will provide the basic framework in a lecture format, students are expected to actively participate in and contribute to class discussion. This includes asking questions, seeking clarification and offering your critical ideas and interpretation about student projects, practical fieldwork issues, and lectures on other fieldwork techniques. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students should come to class having read and prepared to discuss assigned readings. The course will also require students to conduct participant-observational fieldwork outside of class. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Textbooks]

No textbook will be used for the course. Readings will be provided through the online course management system.

[References]

References will be shared in class.

[Grading criteria]

Field I, II, III Assignments: 60%
Research Proposal/Presentation 40%

Three or more unexcused absences will result in an incomplete grade (marked “E” on grading sheet). Please provide documentation if you need to be absent from class for medical reasons, job interviews and family emergency. If you arrive late or leave early, each will be counted as one ½ absence. 5 absences will result in “not passing.”

[Changes following student comments]

Weekly assignments have been updated.

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

None. You may use laptop or tablet to take notes.

[Others]

Slight modifications may be expected. Our goal in this class will not be to memorize or master a series of clear-cut answers; rather, by engaging in lively discussions, we aim to hone our ability to ask critical questions so as to further develop our skills as writers, readers and thinkers. In order to create such a learning environment, students should speak to each other and the instructor with respect. Abusive and harsh language will not be tolerated. Students with special needs should notify the instructor as early as possible, no later than the third week of the semester. Student attendance is critical because each lecture builds on the previous week. Missing out on critical components of the research process will put you behind in being able to design and implement a full project.

[Prerequisite]

None.

【Outline and objectives】

We all want to live a happy life and yet we may be inadvertently creating obstacles to achieving happiness. In this course, students will learn how we get to know ourselves, the maladaptive habits that our minds develop to protect the self from various ego threats, and various ways to improve psychological well-being of the self and others.

【Goal】

Upon completion of the course, students should be able to:

- (a) Identify and explain classic and contemporary theories relating to the self.
- (b) Critically analyze and synthesize empirical research in social psychology.
- (c) Apply their learning to their own life to critically evaluate and explain interpersonal experiences during daily life.
- (d) Verbally present their reactions and experiences to course content.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course mostly combines lectures and student-led class discussions on assigned readings. Students will receive oral and written feedback on their discussion questions and reaction papers.

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Students should review their notes and be able to explain the major concepts and theories they have learned in previous lectures. They will read the assigned readings before each class and prepare a reaction paper and discussion questions based on the readings. They must also download and print out handouts prior to each class and bring them to class to take notes. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

【Textbooks】

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course aims at understanding database and SQL. Through lectures and actual practices, students will learn how to build and utilize database.

[Goal]

By participating lectures and actual practices, students can (1) understand and implement crawling and MySQL, (2) implement programs using SQL and learn how to use MySQL using Python, and (3) utilize database on their own.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course will proceed with lectures, actual practices, and Q&A sessions (including individual instructions if necessary). Students are required to review what they have learned in the last class and to take the mini test every week about content of the last class.

At the beginning of every class, feedback for the previous class is given, and a brief review will be conducted.

【休講】 Syntactic Theory

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : | Year : 3~4

Day/Period :

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

The study of syntax (in particular that of English) via investigation and experiment.

【Goal】

Two goals. First, an insight into the nature of syntax. Secondly, a better grasp of how to go about understanding any phenomena that at first seem baffling, or in other words the acquisition of some aspects of scientific method via the careful examination of language.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

We use a textbook that does not presuppose a knowledge of linguistics but does assume that the reader has an intellectual curiosity and an appetite for language-related exercises and real thinking. This will be very much a “300-level” course, or anyway a course for thinking adults.

Students both submit work for assignments and get comments on this work via “Hoppii”.

14	X-bar Theory	Preposition phrase modifiers and P-bar; generalizing across T-bar, N-bar, and P-bar for an abstract X-bar; implications of X-bar for language acquisition

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Reading with maximum concentration (without background music or other distractions), hard thinking, doing the various exercises, and probably also discussion with classmates of the content and exercises. Allow two hours a week for this. Also, weekly assignments, which consolidate what has been covered in class. An assignment might, as an example, ask students to think through the implications of two candidate syntax trees (diagrams of constituent structure) for the same one sentence, and thus to point out why one of the candidates should be discarded. Allow two hours a week for the assignment too.

Dropping the section on formal arguments, dropping the exercises-only weeks, and evaluating by weekly assignments alone. This frees up a lot of class time: we can slow down in some places but nevertheless cover a considerable amount of material.

【休講】 Morphology: Building Words

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : | Year : 3~4

Day/Period :

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

The formation of words, with particular reference to English. At first the subject may sound like etymology (the history of words), but it is not: native speakers have a considerable unconscious knowledge of word formation, even without any historical awareness.

【Goal】

As morphology is part of linguistics, the ultimate purpose of this course is that of linguistics: to help give you some insight toward the aim of understanding how the human mind works. As for “employability skills”, you’ll get practice in reading comprehension, gathering information and developing hypotheses; and you’ll also get a heightened and informed sensitivity to language that should help you in careers as diverse as law and copywriting.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Using weekly slideshows, we’ll go through the textbook, which is neither long nor hard to read. Rather than encouraging the mere learning of facts (sure soon to be forgotten), textbook and course both emphasize exercises, so that the reader is a participant in morphology rather than a mere spectator. Students both submit work for assignments and get comments on this work via “Hoppii”.

Reading the relevant pages of the textbook, doing exercises from the textbook (and its “challenges”), revising with the slideshow, finding other examples and real or apparent counterexamples. Allow two hours a week for this. Also, weekly assignments, which consolidate what has been covered in class. As an example, the assignment for the fourth week in 2021 asked about each of the five compounds backup singer, know-nothing, military intelligence, rotgut, and drunk driver: students were asked to provide the (syntactic) category of each of the two compounded words, and of the resulting compound; and to say whether the compound was subordinative, attributive, or coordinative, whether it was left- or right-headed, and whether it was endocentric or exocentric. Allow two hours a week for the weekly assignment too.

English Dialects around the World

[Outline and objectives]

No language has ever been so extensively used on Earth as English is today. However, the language, spoken by well over 400 million people as a mother tongue, has developed a wide range of variations due to regional and social factors. This course aims to survey the phonetic, lexical and syntactic features of some varieties of standard English in the UK, North America and Australasia, with frequent reference to their historical and cultural backgrounds. Special attention is paid to Australian and NZ English, considering the increased significance of the southern hemisphere countries in business and education. It is often predicted that L2 speakers of English in Asia alone will likely outnumber monolingual English speakers of the Inner Circle within this century. Mention is made of Singapore English as an example of New Englishes.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) better understand the richness and diversity of the English language,
- (2) get familiar with the IPA vowel and consonant charts,
- (3) be able to identify major English accents in the world, and
- (4) become more familiar with the lexical/syntactic features of Canadian, Australian and NZ English in particular.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course is a combination of lectures and discussions about pre-assigned topics. Students have to address review and application questions given in advance. Submitted assignments and tests are reviewed in detail and commented on in the following week's lecture.

【休講】 English in Asia

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : | Year : 3~4

Day/Period :

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

In this course, students will learn how English is used in Asia. The characteristics or features of English in selected countries in Asia are explored from the perspectives of World Englishes with special reference to socio-historical contexts and educational policies.

【Goal】

Upon completion of this course, students will:

- 1) Become aware of some of the major varieties of Asian Englishes.
- 2) Be able to understand some historical contexts for how English came to be used in Asia.
- 3) Be able to understand some educational contexts for how English is taught in Asia.
- 4) Be familiar with the idea of World Englishes.
- 5) Be able to reflect on their own use of English more objectively.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 3” and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

You will be assigned a set of reading materials in advance, which will provide some background information about the issues in focus. A comprehension quiz based on the reading will be given at the beginning of the class to make sure you have a basic understanding of the topic. Then the topic is further explored with additional lectures as well as through pair/group discussions. Audio-visual materials (including movies) will also be introduced to provide actual samples. Toward the end of the semester, students will select a topic/country of their interest and make a presentation in class. Feedback for assignments will be given either individually (paper/LMS) or shared during the class. Actual lesson plans and contents may be modified based on the number of students enrolled and their preferences/progress.

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 金 2/Fri.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

In this course, you will learn how Language Policy is defined as an academic subject. This course will cover major concepts behind language policies. By drawing on various topics related to language variation (e.g. social class and gender), this course will provide an accessible and engaging overview of Language Policy.

[Goal]

The understanding of language policies that cause and result in linguistic mechanisms utilized by particular members of a given society so as to distinguish themselves from societal members. The broad goal of this course is to promote social understanding and justice in schools, communities, and corporations.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

After an introduction to the topics in the form of mini-lectures, examples of policies or general concepts will be presented for discussion, activity, and analysis. This course will contain assignments and writings outside of class, which may be presented in class. Note that the suggested topics may vary slightly depending on the number of registered students and their interests. Finally, submissions of assignments and their feedback will be via Google.docs (unless students are notified previously).

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

This class is an advanced level course of that focuses on the concept of international economics. In this class, I introduce the state of the economy as we stand now, and then we learn basic concepts and theoretical underpinning about trade.

【Goal】

The goal of this section is to understand the theoretical explanations of why various types of trade occur and how countries gain from trade. For example: (i) how the global supply chain works; (ii) how/why Japan’s trade patterns have changed over time; (iii) why trade creates (often temporary) income inequality, etc. We aim to the level that you can explain why certain news related to trade – for example, the Trade war, Japan’s trade deficit, why the same goods are traded across borders (e.g., Japan exports and imports automobiles at the same time).

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

There is no textbook for this class. The PDF version of the PowerPoint File (with some space for you to write memos) will be posted on Hoppii in two days in advance. In the subsequent class, we may have a brief (5-10 minutes) discussions of the previous class, drawing on the real-world examples. At the beginning of class, feedback/questions for the previous class from students (if there are any) will be provided. I may ask some students to make comments, so I strongly recommend having a clear understanding and thinking of the actual applications of what we have learnt in the previous class. Some knowledge of Economics will help, but if you find something that you are not familiar with, please Email me at ayako.saiki.67@hosei.ac.jp

No.	Theme	Contents
1	Introduction to the course	Introduction to the course
2	State of the World Trade	We will review the current status of the world economy, especially focusing on trade and the supply chain disruption.
3	The Era of Mercantilist	Up to the 18th century, many European countries took mercantilist policy, which often led to conflicts among states. We learn what occurred during that period, and the reason behind the idea.
4	Advantage, relative and absolute	Relative advantage is a core concept behind the basic trade model. We’ll learn the difference between absolute and relative advantages.

5	Ricardian Model	Ricardian Model is the first model which gave justification to trade between countries. We study the model.
6	Heckscher-Ohlin Model	Heckscher-Ohlin Model, which considers differences in factor abundance among countries as a driver of the world trade, will be covered.
7	Discussion/Review	We’ll review what we have learnt and the limitation of the models. Active discussion is strongly encouraged. All students will be asked to contribute to the discussion.
8	New Trade Model (1)	We study “the second generation” models of trade using increasing returns to scale and network effect.
9	New trade model (2)	We study the importance of intra-industry trade (trade of same goods), vertical integration, global supply chains in the world trade and their theoretical underpinning.
10	The impact of trade on income distribution	Often, some argue trade (or globalization) worsens inequality. We will review the empirical evidence and theoretical explanation.
11	Trade and exchange rate	We study how trade affect exchange rate, and vice versa.
12	Trade policy	We study various tools countries employ to govern international trade (preferential trade agreement, tariffs, import quotas), and how WTO handles them.
13	The infant industry argument	Many East Asia countries, including Japan and China, took and/or taking protectionist policies in the early phase of their economic development. We will learn how developing countries often protect certain industries and how such policies benefits/harms economic development, and what is the key ingredients of success.
14	Final Exam and Review	Close-book final exam.

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

Please make sure you have your slide printed out (I prefer you to not to use laptop), and review what you have learnt, which might be on a quiz (not-pre-announced mini test). Also, if you have a particular subject matter you want to have a discussion, please let me know so that I can incorporate into the actual class. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me via Hoppii or via Email.

【Textbooks】

There is no textbook. The PPT slide is the only required material (I will make PPT self-explanatory as much as possible). Students who want to study further, or need some textbook as a reference, recommended books are as follows:

[References]

There will be handout which will be distributed as the course progresses. But here is some interesting link you might want to check from time to time.

<https://www.imf.org/en/Publications/WEO> (IMF: World Economic Outlook

)

- <https://www.cia.gov/the-world-factbook/> (CIA World Factbook)

The Economist, The Financial Times would be helpful to learn about the current status of the world economy.

Also, if you want to study this subject further, I recommend these two books:

(1) Caves, Frankel and Jones, "World Trade and Payments," Pearson College Division (Used in Kennedy School of Government, Harvard university (MA Level))

(2) Krugman and Obstfeld, "International Economy: Theory and Policy". (any version is fine)

Both are available at amazon.com, but make sure you purchase from Book Depository because there are many "fake" books sold by individual seller.

[Grading criteria]

There will be four "quizzes" (non-pre-announced mini-test). So I recommend you come to the class with a good understanding of what you have learned in the previous classes.

The grading will be based on the final exam (50%), quizzes (10% x 3=30%) and class participation (20%).

In the class participation, I check your understanding of the previous class, as well as the active engagement in each class via comments, your thoughts, your own experiences, etc.

[Changes following student comments]

In the previous year, many students gave me feedbacks that the course was too theoretical for non-Econ major students. While some theoretical explanations are necessary, I will try to make it more approachable for non-Econ students. Also, since this year's class will be held on-campus, I would like to increase the amount of free discussion during the class.

[Others]

* Academic Integrity

You are expected to be honest in all of your academic work. Allegations of alleged academic dishonesty will be subject to sanctions, including failing.

* Disability Statement

If you are a student who needs accommodations, please talk with me or go to students and present your letter of accommodation as soon as you can. In order to provide special accommodations for test etc, I need the documentation over 48 hours in advance; accommodation cannot be made retroactively. The same goes for quizzes. You cannot excuse for missing a quiz ex post (after the quiz). If you have questions about documenting a disability or requesting accommodations, please contact the Administration Office and talk to me immediately as the class starts.

Please note that if I noticed you are clearly doing something else (games, SNS, etc.), or if you are talking to other students, I would ask you to leave the class since it disturbs other students. It is also prohibited to take a photo of the blackboard. I recommend using pen and pencils instead of laptops.

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 火 1/Tue.1

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course aims at understanding the application of human-mimicking technologies (AI,NLP, sensors, robotics, augmented reality, etc.) to create, communicate, deliver, and enhance value across the customer journey.

[Goal]

Students will first understand the current challenges that marketers to deal with in a modern society (e.g., generation gap, COVID-19, digital divide). Based on that, students will learn the role of human-like technologies in addressing such challenges and marketing customers effectively. In this line, predictive marketing, contextual marketing, and augmented marketing will be covered. Finally, students will practically learn how to apply what they have learned and how to devise feasible solutions by performing their own group projects.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course will proceed with lectures, readings, group presentations, and group discussion. Students are required to read each chapter of a textbook in advance that will be covered during the class and submit summary of it. After partial lectures from an instructor, students will participate in group presentations and subsequent discussions. The subject of group presentations will be divided into two types – (1) the content of each chapter based on rigorous understanding, (2) case studies of the modern companies that can deepen understandings of each chapter and develop students’ own critical perspective on the cases. At the beginning of class, feedback for the previous class is given using some comments from submitted weekly papers.

Supply Chain Management

Kayhan Tajeddini

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 木 6/Thu.6

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

Global supply chains interact with all facets of business and society. In this interdisciplinary course, students will gain a multi-faceted perspective on the global dimensions of today's business operations. Students will explore the interrelationships between global supply chains, logistics operations, society, and the environment. The study of business operations will be set in the context of social science theories and popular perspectives on the history, geography, structure and ethics of trade. Students will examine the impacts of current trade systems on both production and consumption regions and the human and environmental consequences of trade patterns.

[Goal]

1. For students to gain a multi-faceted perspective on the global dimensions of today's business operations through understanding how modern, global supply chains and logistics networks operate.
2. For students to understand the multi-disciplinary facets of how a global supply chain can be viewed, analyzed, and operated.
3. For students to explain multiple key social science theories and popular perspectives on the history, geography, structure and ethics of trade, and apply them to the analysis of supply chains.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The course will be lecture, case, and discussion based. The assignments are designed to help students build skills that cover scientific, information, and communication literacy. Effort will be made to make the class both challenging and exciting.

We will use a combination of text and cases to explore and apply the topics. It is vitally important that you come to class prepared and ready to discuss the topics. If you read and prepare the materials you will learn more during the discussions and will be successful at the assignments.

Regarding the presentation and case studies, it will be explained in the first class with all guidelines, expectations and standards. The strengths and weaknesses of each presentation and reports will be discussed individually.

Services Marketing

John Melvin

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 月 4/Mon.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉〈実〉

[Outline and objectives]

What are services? The service sector, which includes finance, education and tourism, now accounts for around 80% of developed countries' economies and today's graduates are highly likely to be employed in such organizations. The purpose of this course is to provide students with an in-depth understanding of the theoretical and practical processes of marketing services, with a particular focus on tourism. Driven particularly by more demanding customers and advances in technology, organizations are pursuing closer and more interactive relationships with their customers, with important consequences for marketing. It is essential for companies and destinations to understand the impact of these changes in order to maintain and develop competitive advantage.

This course will consider strategic issues in services marketing; we will also consider micro-marketing issues relating to service design, the service experience, tourist behavior and the challenges and opportunities for managers presented by technological developments.

Students will engage in additional learning opportunities such as group discussions and presentations. We will analyze a number of tourism-related case studies in addition to other service sectors.

[Goal]

This course aims to give students insights into the particular characteristics of marketing services such as tourism. After exploring current marketing theory on destination marketing, consumer value creation and the consumer experience, the course will apply these to the management and marketing of services.

From the consumer perspective, students will learn about consumer behavior, the impact of the service environment and forming relationships with service providers. From an organizational perspective, we will consider managing the service environment, innovation and developing service brands in order to facilitate consumer value creation and provide more memorable and rewarding experiences.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Lectures will take place in an interactive environment, with students contributing through group discussions and a presentation. In group projects, students will gain an in-depth understanding of a particular organization/destination and must then present the results of their analysis.

Assignments will be submitted via Hoppii; insightful answers will be shared in class to facilitate discussion.

Cultural Tourism

John Melvin

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 月 1/Mon.1

その他属性 : 〈優〉〈実〉

[Outline and objectives]

The phenomenon of cultural tourism exists in many forms and is regarded as one of the oldest forms of tourism. Defined as “A form of tourism that relies on a destination’s cultural heritage assets and transforms them into products that can be consumed by tourists.” (du Cros & McKercher, 2015: p.6), this course will analyze the 4 elements within the definition: (i) Tourism, (ii) Utilization of Cultural Assets, (iii) Consumption of Cultural Tourism Experiences, and (iv) Tourists and the Host Community.

We will consider the importance of cultural assets: as a way to define and understand nations, as a manifestation of people’s ethnicities and identities as well as a vital driver of tourism. To do so, we will analyze the role played by various stakeholders, such as governments, businesses, the media, NGOs and conservation organizations such as UNESCO & ICOMOS.

[Goal]

Upon completion of this course students should be able to:

- 1) Understand the various forms of cultural tourism
- 2) Understand the key organizations involved in providing and conserving cultural tourism at local, national and international level
- 3) Understand the role of cultural tourism in destination branding and marketing
- 4) Understand the role of cultural resources in forming people’s national and local identity, and how these are preserved and managed
- 5) Understand the complexities of stakeholder relations in the management of cultural tourism resources

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The course is primarily lecture-based, though students will have a number of opportunities to discuss issues in small groups. A broad range of case studies can help students consolidate their learning.

In groups, students will conduct an in-depth analysis of tourism in a selected destination through a case study, which will provide an opportunity to apply the theories and concepts from the lectures and enhance understanding of key issues.

Assignments will be submitted via Hoppii; insightful answers will be shared in class to facilitate discussion.

Although not essential, this course will be more accessible for students who have taken other tourism-related courses. As such, students are strongly recommended to have taken/concurrently take one or more of the following: 100-level Introduction to Tourism Studies or the 200-level Event Management or Tourism Development in Japan courses.

I can draw from my experience in organizing events and as marketing director of a tourism business in the UK to help provide students with examples and to illustrate issues.

Digital Marketing

Youyung Hyun

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 木 1/Thu.1

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course aims at understanding the application of human-mimicking technologies (AI,NLP, sensors, robotics, augmented reality, etc.) to create, communicate, deliver, and enhance value across the customer journey.

[Goal]

Students will first understand the current challenges that marketers to deal with in a modern society (e.g., generation gap, COVID-19, digital divide). Based on that, students will learn the role of human-like technologies in addressing such challenges and marketing customers effectively. In this line, predictive marketing, contextual marketing, and augmented marketing will be covered. Finally, students will practically learn how to apply what they have learned and how to devise feasible solutions by performing their own group projects.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course will proceed with lectures, readings, group presentations, and group discussion. Students are required to read each chapter of a textbook in advance that will be covered during the class and submit summary of it. After partial lectures from an instructor, students will participate in group presentations and subsequent discussions. The subject of group presentations will be divided into two types – (1) the content of each chapter based on rigorous understanding, (2) case studies of the modern companies that can deepen understandings of each chapter and develop students’ own critical perspective on the cases. At the beginning of class, feedback for the previous class is given using some comments from submitted weekly papers.

English Teaching in Primary School: Advanced

Tomoko Shigyo

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 金 4/Fri.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course is for students intending to teach English to young learners as primary pupils. It provides an overview of the curriculum development of the teaching of English in primary school based on second language learning (SLL) theories to primary pupils. Its purpose is to cultivate skills to implement second language (L2) education in primary school appropriately. It particularly looks at how to design English classes to facilitate literacy skills (reading and writing) of primary pupils with consideration to make consistency in L2 education from the primary to secondary levels. The students are encouraged to develop their own perspectives on designing English classes and practice modern EFL pedagogy such as content and language integrated learning (CLIL) and using picture books.

[Goal]

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to do the following:

1. Understand how children learn to read and write.
2. Understand how to link picture books with curriculum.
3. Develop curriculum of CLIL using picture books.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Developing a lesson plan, micro-teaching and final assignment are required for the completion of this course; students are to create their lesson plans and demonstrate their English lessons based on the plans. They are required to reflect on their lessons in class and to revise their lesson plans based on the reflection in the final assignment. Submission of the final requirements and feedback will be on the learning management systems (HOPPII).

TESOL IV: Testing and Evaluation

Machiko Kobori

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 火 3/Tue.3

その他属性 : <グ>

[Outline and objectives]

This course is for student teachers of English. It explains how to evaluate learners and teachers in L2 education. It encourages students to examine, discuss and assess practices in L2 education. This course focuses on issues in assessing EFL/ESL learners and teachers: it encourages student teachers to reflect on EFL/ESL learning. The course provides opportunities to explore a wide range of ideas with a consideration to make consistency in language education from the primary to secondary levels.

[Goal]

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to demonstrate the following:

1. Explain the core issues in L2 education testing and its integration with ICT.
2. Identify testing components.
3. Design testing materials that match educational objectives.
4. Employ a principled approach to the design, creation and implementation of materials testing and evaluation.
5. Understand what is required to qualify as an English teacher.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Student teachers will learn how to create English tests as well as how to integrate ICT with it, and then make presentations. They must create their own English tests. The course finishes with a writing assignment and final examination.

Submission of the final requirements and feedback will be on the learning management systems.

International Relations of the Asia-Pacific

Takeshi Yuzawa

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 木 3/Thu.3

その他属性 : 〈グ〉〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course will explore the nature of international relations in the Asia-Pacific. It will mainly examine and discuss the following: (1) factors for stability and peace in the Asia-Pacific region after the end of the Cold War; (2) roles for the great powers in the region: the United States, China, and Japan; (3) problems and prospects for regional security and economic cooperation; (4) the evolution of regional institutions; (5) the prospects for regional order.

[Goal]

The course objectives are: (1) to develop students' ability to effectively use IR theories to analyze and explain developments in regional affairs; (2) to enable students to analyze the foreign policies of the major powers and selected regional countries; (3) to enable students to assess the developments of regional institutions; (4) to enable students to examine and assess the status and prospects for regional order.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course is composed of twelve lectures. In each class, a background lecture on a pre-selected topic will be provided to students. After a lecture, there will be a discussion. While the lectures will provide an overview of the topics in question, the discussions will give students an opportunity to examine policies in more depth.

Comments for assignments are given during class and office hours.

Advanced Comparative Politics

Kana Inata

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 木 2/Thu.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course provides a broad overview of key concepts and theories in comparative politics and aims at facilitating the students' understanding of why and how political events happen. Specifically, each lecture addresses important substantive questions about the world today (e.g., Why do protests happen? Why do some countries successfully democratise while others do not? Why does the military intervene in political affairs?) and explains how existing studies have answered those questions. This course critically examines several existing theories so that the students will be able to analyse current political events from their own comparative perspectives. In addition, this course introduces the key methodological concepts that are associated with the analysis of comparative politics. Specifically, the course explains what causal relationships are, how they are different from correlations, and what we should do to explain political events.

[Goal]

This course helps students:

- To learn the fundamental concepts and theories on comparative politics.
- To learn how to use the knowledge acquired in this course for explaining the various political issues in the world today.
- To understand the research methods relevant to the study of comparative politics.

Globalization and Political Change

Jenny Balboa

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 水 3/Wed.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This course aims to examine the current global political issues and their implications. The rise of populist and authoritarian leaders in many parts of the world – in the US, Europe and Asia had threatened global stability and the future of democracy. The election of Trump as US President had a costly legacy in the US and global politics. The UK's vote for Brexit provided a striking image of the power of far-right movements in the UK and Europe. The resurgence of these movements are fueled by post-truth politics, denialism and fake news which imperil civic engagement and democratic ideals. These developments are thought to be connected to the negative consequences of globalization, notably the deepening of inequality, the cultural clash, and the divide of values, which led to social and economic fragmentation and highly polarized politics. Adding to the global anxiety and uncertainty is the Russia-Ukraine war which was instigated by Russia's own authoritarian-populist leader, Putin. These crucial global events and issues need thorough examination and reflection since they significantly affect our lives, the future of democracy, and the rules-based international order. At the same time, we need to understand our options, as well as the appropriate choice of policy actions to counter the negative impacts of the social, economic and political changes that are brought by these challenges.

【Goal】

In examining globalization and political change, the course aims to answer three questions: 1) What are the impact and consequences of globalization? 2) What are the recent trends in global politics? and 3) What is the future of globalization and politics?

Globalization has provided opportunities for international cooperation and for minor voices to be heard; however, it has also become a significant source of domestic and global friction and instability. Globalization has both positive and negative consequences. We need to understand how we can benefit from its positive impact, and as much as possible, work on how the positive benefits can be harnessed. Meanwhile, we also need to carefully study the negative impact, how they can be managed, reduced, or even eliminated.

This course will help you develop deeper understanding of contemporary political issues, and strengthen your ability in analyzing the impact of crucial global events. In relation to these, we will engage in exercises that will improve your critical thinking skills, as well as help you effectively communicate your ideas and personal reflections of reading materials and current events. You will be writing reflective essays for your mid-terms examinations. The final exam will be a short essay and test on what you learned from the key themes of the course. We will have Active Learning Tasks composed of class debate and individual student report that will help you improve your confidence in presenting your ideas clearly and logically.

To receive credit from the class, you need to attend the lectures, participate in the Active learning tasks, and pass the mid terms and final examinations, which require you to read and reflect on the materials provided.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The class combines lectures with active learning tasks, such as class debate and individual presentation. To make the class more lively and interesting, you are encouraged to participate actively and share your opinion regarding the topic of the day and the reading materials. The first half of the course tackles the nature, impact and consequences of globalization. The second half of the course examines the recent trends and future direction of globalization and politics.

Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System. Insightful comments from reflective essays will be introduced in class and used in deeper discussions.

[Method(s)]						The teaching methods of this course will combine lectures and discussions with active learning tools designed for each class. In addition, feedback will be provided after student presentations, discussions, and group work ("good", or "what needs to be improved", etc.). Detailed written comments on the discussion paper and the final exam will be provided individually. These comments will be emailed or posted on the designated course website within 1-3 weeks of submission. The class will meet once a week for 100 minutes. Please note that the learning approach may vary from face-to-face to virtual and vice-versa depending on the pandemic situation.

[Grading criteria]

Participation and learning attitude: 20%

Participation does not mean only attendance. It includes both consistent attendance and good preparation for class discussions based on weekly readings, lecture topics, and contributions to group activities. Active participation in class discussions, as well as critical assessment of the assigned course reading, and peer interpretations are essential to ensure the success of the course and its learning outcomes.

Discussion paper: 40%

In addition to regular reading, each student will be required to discuss 1-2 journal articles as per the weekly schedule. Starting from the third week, the last 40 minutes of each session will be devoted to at least two presentations (15-20 minutes each) based on your discussion papers. Each student should critically discuss selected journal article(s) and submit core points on 3-4 double-spaced pages within one week of the presentation. The discussion paper should focus on the theoretical knowledge and empirical evidence related to the argumentation of the article(s), assess whether the author succeeds in his/her goals, and establish links to other course topics. The second week will include an academic writing workshop and detailed instructions on how to write a discussion paper and prepare an analytical presentation.

Final exam: 40%

The final exam consists of short and long critical essays and will be conducted in an open book format for a fixed period of time. This requires students to work independently, using their own words and drawing on course lectures, handouts, and reading materials (no external sources should be consulted). Detailed instructions will be provided a week before the exam.

[Changes following student comments]

From 2022: Although I think that the students still experienced some difficulties, mainly related to the method of active participation and deep involvement in the learning process, it seems to me that the second year of working with GIS students was less problematic. Perhaps this is due to the fact that students already had some understanding of this course through the syllabus, etc.

From 2021: This course turned out to be somewhat difficult due to the fact that students were not so accustomed to participatory and active learning methods, in particular critical thinking, independent reading and writing in accordance with academic standards and specific techniques of each discipline, class discussion and peer interpretations, etc. Therefore, while continuing to adhere to my teaching philosophy of participatory and active learning, I have changed some assignments/ requirements and added an academic writing/analytical presentation workshop to gradually help students improve their learning skills and habits. I look forward to achieving these goals together!

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

PC for class use when needed (no smartphones and other digital devices will be allowed without permission).

[Others]

Final grade:

Please note that your final grade will be calculated based on your participation, learning attitude, discussion paper and final exam (see, "Grading Criteria"). In no case will your final grade be assessed for just one component. In addition, failure to complete one of the components will result in course failure. Remember that your final grade is the accumulation of points earned during the semester. Please plan your learning goals ahead of time, including your expected grade.

Course syllabus:

This is an abridged version of the syllabus for prior reference. A detailed syllabus with weekly readings and assignments will be shared at the beginning of the semester.

Previous course participation:

Although no prerequisites are required for the course, previous participation in international relations, international law, international security, human rights, global politics, and/or development is recommended.

International Development Policy

Ippeita Nishida

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 木 2/Thu.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

International development policies have been formulated along two domains, one by the donor coordination group (i.e. providers of Official Development Aid), traditionally represented by the OECD-DAC and another at the multilateral agenda setting forum such as the United Nations. While both serve the purpose of advancing the lives of people and discussions are mutually-related, each has distinct interests and constraints. In this course, we aim to understand how international development policy/agenda is being formulated and what the current (and future) issues are. Specifically, students will explore (1) the rationale and evolution of development policies by the donor community, (2) the holistic and people-centered agenda setting at the United Nations and (3) current policy issues related to development, such as impact of COVID-19, debt-sustainability and great power rivalry between China and the U.S., etc.

[Goal]

The course objectives are:

- 1) To enable students to assess the development policy debates from multiple aspects.
- 2) To make students able to differentiate development agenda formulation process at different stakeholder groups.
- 3) To equip students with the holistic understanding of the ongoing issues that affect on the process of global development, through groupwork.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This class will have lectures and interactive discussions, as well as group presentations. Active participation is expected. Students will undertake a final exam and have occasional short papers to write. Insightful comments from papers will be introduced in class and used in deeper discussions.

The course is composed of three parts. The first part (weeks 3-6) will have lectures on debates among traditional donors. In the second part (weeks 7-9), lectures will cover key discourses of the United Nations adaptation of the Sustainable Development Goals. The third part (weeks 10-13) will examine current policy issues that are related to development and students will be tasked to do research and make group presentations. Except the first day, in principle, this class will adopt the face-to-face format, to allow students’ direct interaction. Yet, it may use the online platform when necessary (in such case, students will be notified in advance).

International Environmental Policy

Gregory Toth

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 金 6/Fri.6

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

The world continues to face global environmental challenges – climate change, deforestation, biodiversity loss and pollution, among others. As a response, different international initiatives are being implemented, resulting in a variety of agreements, laws, regulations and other policy mechanisms. This course focuses on international environmental policy (IEP), and explores the motivations, challenges and opportunities of IEP actions, taking into consideration the role of multilateral organizations (e.g. the United Nations), governments, corporations, NGOs and local communities. The course includes in-depth analysis of particularly relevant IEP arrangements in the areas of agriculture, forestry, biodiversity, climate, urbanization and trade.

[Goal]

The main goals of the course are to:

- provide a basic understanding of current global environmental problems
- develop critical thinking regarding international policy mechanisms to tackle environmental problems
- enhance students' ability to understand the risk, uncertainty and complexity embedded in IEP
- to cultivate students' capacity to critically assess the motivations, challenges and opportunities related to IEP actions
- learn to work collaboratively with other classmates in the elaboration and presentation of a group project.
- improve basic professional skills regarding self-organization, planning, time management, and respect for diversity in points of view.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3” and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The course consists of short lectures and interactive class discussions and presentations in which students address, from a critical perspective, the topics covered each week (prepared prior to class). At the end of the course, students have the opportunity to present their (group) project and discuss it in class. Feedback will be given through class discussion and in response to submitted assignments and individual requests.

Global Political Economy

Nathalie Cavasin

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 水 1/Wed.1

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

We will examine the structure of the contemporary global political economy. Students will be introduced to the theories, debates and paradigms using case studies to develop an understanding of the global political economy. Students will also debate on the new political economy landscape after the Covid-19 pandemic and its effect on the global supply chain, the consequences of the Russia-Ukraine war and its impacts in the global economy, among others topics. Specific attention will be put on the role of China and its increased participation in the global political economies, the geopolitical situation in the world and the recent trends regarding India's new enthusiasm in the new globalization regime.

[Goal]

Students through the assignments that are based on current events in the world (analysis with back-up from recent news) will be able to learn to express their opinions and develop their critical thinking skills.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Each week, in addition to readings to be done, written assignments will be assigned. These written assignments are mandatory. Each student will also write a report every three weeks on a topic from the news in relation with the course contents topics. In addition, there will be an individual essay with a group presentation (topic to be decided later with the supervision of the professor) a book review project to be written and a take-home assignment for the final assignment. Students will receive written feedback (eventually oral feedback and mini-discussions with the professor in class) by the professor.

[Outline and objectives]

This course aims to provide students with a basic understanding of international law, with a particular emphasis on the impact that international law instruments and practices have on national laws and policies. The course begins with an introduction to general principles of international treaty and customary law, examining important cases and doctrines that have developed over time. The first part of the course will conclude with a framework of analysis that students may consider in assessing both the respective merits and limitations of international law instruments. The second part of the course will look at how international law has attempted to shape the world we live in by examining selected areas where it has tried to influence human behavior, including security, human rights, the environment, health, trade/investment and other commercial issues, and the global commons.

[Goal]

At the end of the course, students should have a basic understanding of international law instruments, with an emphasis on recognizing the impact and limitations of treaties in their historical, economic, social and political contexts.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3” and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The course will be conducted using lectures, group discussion and exercises, and one negotiation simulation exercise. At the beginning of class, feedback for the previous class is given using comments from submitted reaction papers. Students will need access to the Internet in order to retrieve the cases, treaties and articles. Writing assignments will include a case brief and a term paper.

Law in a Globalizing World

Kelesha Nevers

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 水 6/Wed.6

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

As nations and peoples continue the trend of globalization, legal issues become increasingly more complex. This course provides an overview of this trend, investigating similarities, differences, changes, and challenges experienced by an array of stakeholders as new issues arise and views on existing issues converge in some ways and diverge in others. Specific discussion topics include, but are not limited to, human rights, crime, the environment, international institutions, and conflict of laws.

[Goal]

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to discuss and analyze the legal aspects of specific problems in a globalizing world. Through discussion and debate, students will develop their ability to grasp and analyze different opinions, as well as predict counter-arguments. Through the creation of a final report and related presentation, students will enhance their ability to develop and logically present their ideas, while reflecting on peer feedback.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3” and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course will be taught through a combination of lecture- and seminar-style classes. Students are required to attend class prepared to participate in discussion. Students are also required to make one main and one or more smaller presentations and submit a final report on the topic of their main presentation, which should reflect class discussion and peer feedback. Instructor feedback will be given during class discussions, through commentary on errors and correct responses found in the assignments, and in response to individual requests. Assignments submitted on the online dashboard will receive individualized comments on the strengths and weaknesses of the submissions.

Advanced Accounting

Noriaki Okamoto

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 金 5/Fri.5

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

The main objective of this course is to theoretically and practically understand the new trends in accounting: accounting for sustainability and social impact. After taking this course, students will gain relevant knowledge about accounting for corporate sustainability and social impact. More specifically, students can learn the basics of how to recognize, measure, and report corporate sustainability and social impact.

[Goal]

This course consists of accounting for sustainability and social impact, both of which have recently gained prominence in corporations and attracted stakeholders' attention. By taking this course, students can understand theories and academic findings regarding accounting for sustainability and social impact. Moreover, students can discuss practical topics such as specific institutions (some frameworks to calculate sustainability and social impact) and real leading companies' practices.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course is taught through lectures, discussions and exercises. At my discretion, I may assign one or more mini-projects to be completed during, or outside of, the class. Occasionally, students are required to submit reaction paper (mini-essay) at the end of the session. Students are also encouraged to ask questions and to request that particular points be explained if they remain confused or uncertain about items discussed during the class. Feedback on the students' performance in the assignments during the course will be given. At the end of the course, final exam and (individual or group) presentation will be assigned.

Seminar: Diversity of English I

Yutai Watanabe

Credit(s) : 4 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 金 3/Fri.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

With estimated 2.3 billion users, the global dominance of the English language is in no dispute. However, the language has developed a wide range of variations, depending on the social and cultural contexts where it was transplanted and the other languages it exists alongside. This seminar is concerned with the phonetic features of English(es) both in the Inner and Expanding Circles, while also shedding light on the speakers' language attitudes and ideologies. We start the spring semester by reviewing Kachru's (1985) three-circle model and Schneider's (2007) 'Dynamic Model' of postcolonial English. Then we focus on New Zealand English (NZE), one of the youngest Inner Circle varieties, examining how it is distinguishable from UK, US and Australian English. The latter part of the semester is devoted to the features of L2-accented English and native-speakerism in the Expanding Circle.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) understand the evolution and diversity of the English language,
- (2) recognise the phonetic features of NZE and L2-accented English, and
- (3) get used to analysing sound recordings for research purposes.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This seminar is presentation and discussion oriented: Students take turns to review a book chapter or journal article assigned by the instructor, noting key terms and concepts, which could be proactively studied by consulting reference materials. The other students in the class contribute to the discussion with their questions and observations. Detailed comments and suggestions for further study are provided at the end of each presentation.

Seminar: Diversity of English II

Yutai Watanabe

Credit(s) : 4 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 金 3/Fri.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

English is the most common international language in business, education and mass media, and is used by more than one billion people in the world as L2 speakers alone. The fall semester focuses on the use of English in the Expanding Circle, particularly in mainland Europe and Japan. We compare the two regions in the users' ideologies and attitudes towards L1 English and English as a lingua franca (ELF). Through the process of individual or collaborative research, we also discuss a variety of sociolinguistic issues: societal multilingualism and individual plurilingualism, Euro-English, CEFR, linguistic landscapes, etc.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) learn the current use of English in the Expanding Circle,
- (2) understand the tenet of ELF,
- (3) develop a critical view of monolingualism as the norm, and
- (4) get used to collecting and analysing data for research purposes.

Seminar: Diversity of English II

Yutai Watanabe

Credit(s) : 4 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 金 4/Fri.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

English is the most common international language in business, education and mass media, and is used by more than one billion people in the world as L2 speakers alone. The fall semester focuses on the use of English in the Expanding Circle, particularly in mainland Europe and Japan. We compare the two regions in the users' ideologies and attitudes towards L1 English as the target in teaching/learning and English as a lingua franca (ELF). Through the process of individual or collaborative research, we also discuss a variety of sociolinguistic issues: societal multilingualism and individual plurilingualism, Euro-English, CEFR and linguistic landscapes, etc.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) learn the current use of English in the Expanding Circle,
- (2) understand the tenet of English as a lingua franca,
- (3) develop a critical view of monolinguals as the norm, and
- (4) get used to collecting and analysing data for research purposes.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This seminar is presentation and discussion oriented: Students take turns to review a book chapter or journal article assigned by the instructor, noting key terms and concepts, which could be proactively studied by consulting reference materials. The other students in the class contribute to the discussion with their questions and observations. Detailed comments and suggestions for further study are provided at the end of each presentation. All students are expected to write a short or extended essay on their chosen topic towards the end of the 3rd or 4th year, respectively.

Seminar: Language Teaching and Learning I

Machiko Kobori

Credit(s) : 4 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 火 5/Tue.5

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

The course is for students wanting to explore effective language teaching and learning both face-to-face and online, targeting various types of second language (L2) learners inside and outside the school language classroom. It focuses on core issues affecting L2 education, such as L2 motivational strategies for successful achievement in learning L2s within the context of second language acquisition (SLA). Its purpose is to give an insight into the educational and second language learning (SLL) theory: issues on L2 learners, teaching methods and approaches, teaching materials, lesson planning for educators, and educational specific skills for explaining how to elicit and maintain L2 learners' motivation, etc. It also provides opportunities for developing practical techniques that motivate L2 learners, and examining, reflecting on and discussing significant aspects of successful language teaching and learning. It encourages the students to consider how they can contribute to learner achievement and to establish their own career paths in the related educational fields within the global context.

[Goal]

The course provides opportunities to:

1. Learn challenging issues of language teaching and learning within various contexts of L2 education.
2. Acquire theoretical knowledge of motivational strategies in L2 education.
3. Examine how L2 education is implemented effectively with the expertise of SLA.
4. Discuss how the L2 motivational strategies are connected to theoretical aspects of SLL.
5. Practice basic ideas for effective L2 teaching within the global context.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Presentations, the related tasks and activities and fieldwork are required for the completion of this course; students are required to choose one of the course topics, make a presentation and complete a seminar paper on it. They are also required to plan their face-to-face and online language courses/lessons and implement them in educational organisations. Submission of the final requirements and feedback will be dealt with in seminar class and on the learning management systems (HOPPII, etc.).

Seminar: Intersectionality: Multiple Inequalities I

Diana Khor

Credit(s) : 4 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 月 4/Mon.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉〈S〉

[Outline and objectives]

Race, class, gender and sexuality, nation and so on constitute our identities, shape our experiences, and constrain as well as enrich our lives. Importantly, they constitute interconnecting sources of inequality in society and in the world today. In this seminar, students will read and critique social theories and research informed by an intersectional perspective that aims at understanding the complex, intersecting nature of social inequalities. In the process, they will acquire tools and develop perspectives to apply to their own research.

[Goal]

The main goal of this seminar is to develop students' sensitivity towards issues of inequality related to race, class, gender, sexuality, nationality and so on, and expose them to the cutting-edge theoretical and empirical works in the developing field of "intersectionality". Another goal is to develop students' skills in social research, discussion, presentation, and writing. Learning to evaluate and critique ideas and research is a particularly important goal in this seminar.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Since this course is a seminar, it is taught primarily through student presentations and discussions. Students deliver presentations on selected readings as well as on their own research. Further, they also engage in discussions based on critical reading of extant research and theories, as well as on current relevant social issues. Feedback is given orally after each presentation and discussion, and comments are given to individual students on every assignment submitted.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Every week, there is work to do: reading, preparation for presentation, and/or conducting research. Students are expected to keep up with all this work to make the seminar work for them and other students. Preparatory study and review time for this 4-credit class are at least 4 hours each.

[Textbooks]

No textbook will be used. Copies of journal articles and book chapters will be distributed in class and uploaded on the Hosei Learning Management System.

[Grading criteria]

Clear instructions and goals are set for every assignment. The grade will be calculated as follows:

Participation in class discussion (8%)

Reading presentations and discussant presentation (18%)

Critiques on readings (20%)

Research topic presentation and research paper presentation (14%)

Research paper (40%)

[Changes following student comments]

Students have been fully satisfied with the course, saying that it was intense but worthwhile. However, the instructor will check constantly with students to keep the workload reasonable.

[Others]

Students are expected to have passed Race, Class and Gender I. However, this prerequisite may be waived if a student has the equivalent academic background.

Students are expected to take both Intersectionality I and Intersectionality II, and in principle, they are expected to continue for two years. Special arrangements will be made for students who study abroad for one or two semesters.

Seminar: Intersectionality: Multiple Inequalities I

Diana Khor

Credit(s) : 4 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 月 5/Mon.5

その他属性 : 〈優〉〈S〉

[Outline and objectives]

Race, class, gender and sexuality, nation and so on constitute our identities, shape our experiences, and constrain as well as enrich our lives. Importantly, they constitute interconnecting sources of inequality in society and in the world today. In this seminar, students will read and critique social theories and research informed by an intersectional perspective that aims at understanding the complex, intersecting nature of social inequalities. In the process, they will acquire tools and develop perspectives to apply to their own research.

[Goal]

The main goal of this seminar is to develop students' sensitivity towards issues of inequality related to race, class, gender, sexuality, nationality and so on, and expose them to the cutting-edge theoretical and empirical works in the developing field of "intersectionality". Another goal is to develop students' skills in social research, discussion, presentation, and writing. Learning to evaluate and critique ideas and research is a particularly important goal in this seminar.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Since this course is a seminar, it is taught primarily through student presentations and discussions. Students deliver presentations on selected readings as well as on their own research. Further, they also engage in discussions based on critical reading of extant research and theories, as well as on current relevant social issues. Feedback is given orally after each presentation and discussion, and comments are given to individual students on every assignment submitted.

Seminar: Self and Culture I

Yu Niiya

Credit(s) : 4 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 月 3/Mon.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

The focus of this seminar is on a deeper understanding and analysis of how the self and culture shape how we feel, think, and behave, by drawing on empirical literature in social and cultural psychology. In both the spring and fall semesters, the seminar will meet once a week for 2 periods. In the spring, class time will be devoted to group discussions on assigned readings that examine the impact of social media on our psychological well-being and interpersonal relationships. Students will discuss whether social media can create fulfilling social connections, whether dependence on social media is really problematic, how culture shapes social media usage and its influence on our well-being, and whether how social media could be used to promote online and offline prosocial behaviors. Through readings and discussions, students will go beyond the simple debate that social media helps or impedes human interactions. In addition, third year students will decide on the research questions, hypotheses, and theories of the research they will pursue in the seminar. Fourth year students will collect data, run an experiment or a survey, and will analyze them using a statistical package of their choice (JASP, HAD, SPSS, or R).

[Goal]

Upon completion of the course, students are expected to achieve the following goals:

- (a) To learn how social psychology can help understand our behaviors and decisions via literature review and in-depth discussion;
- (b) To develop a working knowledge of different approaches and methods of social and cultural psychology;
- (c) To develop a deeper understanding of our own lives, using knowledge and wisdom gained through the seminar;
- and
- (d) To develop research skills and knowledge to apply selected social psychological theories to a real-life context.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course combines several pedagogical strategies including student-led weekly class discussions and presentations. Students will receive oral and written feedback on their presentations and weekly reaction papers.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students are expected to complete all the reading assignments, write bi-weekly reaction papers, and post them on the course website by the designated date. Those assigned to lead discussions will further prepare the summaries of the readings and discussion questions. Third year students will formulate research questions and hypotheses based on a comprehensive review of relevant literature on the topic. Fourth year students are expected to run their survey or experiment and collect data for their graduation thesis. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 4 hours each.

In both the spring and fall semesters, the seminar will meet once a week for 2 periods. In the fall, class time will be devoted to group discussions on assigned readings related to students' research interest as well as to group discussions on student led research. Third year students will design and prepare an experiment or a survey to be conducted the following year; fourth year students will analyze their data and write a research paper in APA-style. Students will receive guidance on each step of research, from identifying and refining a research question, conducting a literature review, to creating a questionnaire, analyzing data, and reporting their results.

[Goal]

Upon completion of the course, students are expected to achieve the following goals:

- To learn how social psychology can help understand our behaviors and decisions via literature review and in-depth discussion;
- To develop a deeper understanding of our own lives, using knowledge and wisdom gained through the seminar;
- To design and implement a small-scale empirical study on the basis of previous research and skills;
- To analyze and interpret collected data using statistical software (e.g., JASP, SPSS, R, HAD); and
- To write up a research paper formatted in APA style (for fourth year students).

Seminar: Self and Culture II

Yu Niiya

Credit(s) : 4 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 月 4/Mon.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

The focus of this seminar is on a deeper understanding and analysis of how the self and culture shape how we feel, think, and behave, drawing on the empirical literature in social and cultural psychology. In the fall, the seminar will meet twice a week. Both days will be devoted to group discussions on student led research. Third year students will design and prepare an experiment or a survey to be conducted the following year; fourth year students will analyze their data and write a research paper in APA-style. Students will receive guidance on each step of research, from identifying and refining a research question, conducting a literature review, to creating a questionnaire, analyzing data, and reporting the results.

【Goal】

Upon completion of the course, students are expected to achieve the following goals:

- (a) to design and implement a small-scale empirical study on the basis of previous research and skills learned during the spring term;
- (b) to analyze and interpret collected data using statistical software (e.g., JASP, SPSS, R, HAD); and
- (c) to write up a research paper formatted in APA style (for fourth year students).

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course combines several different kinds of pedagogical strategies including student-led weekly class discussion, presentations, and small group projects. Students will receive feedback on their research design in class, during the discussion. They will also receive written feedbacks on their papers.

Seminar: International Relations I

Takeshi Yuzawa

Credit(s) : 4 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 木 4/Thu.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

The first two decades of the 21st century have witnessed dramatic changes in international relations. It has become increasingly obvious that the relative power and influence of the United States over world politics is declining vis-à-vis rising states, most notably China. At the same time, the legitimacy of Western liberal norms and values (such as democracy, the rule of law, and human rights) that have constituted an important feature of an American-led order are being challenged by the rise of alternative norms and values, supported by rising states. This trend has been further reinforced by growing public distrust of existing political systems in many Western democracies, in particular the United States, mainly stemming from detrimental effects of economic globalization. In addition, the international political stage, which was previously dominated by states, has increasingly featured non-state actors, including multinational corporations, non-government organizations, and terrorist groups. The enormous growth of non-state actors poses serious challenges to the power and authority of the state. These drastic changes in the realm of IR pose the significant question: What will be the shape of the world order in the 21st century?

In order to address this question, this seminar will examine the following:

- 1) Shifts in power distribution among great powers (including the United States, China, Japan, India, and major European countries) and their strategic competitions.
- 2) Prospects for global governance (Pandemic, Climate Change, Financial Crisis)
- 3) New technology and geopolitics (US-China competitions, The roles of "Big-Tech" companies)
- 4) The political effects of economic globalization (The rise of populism and the decline of democracy in major countries)
- 5) Competition among differing norms and values: disputes over capitalism, democracy, human rights, and self-determination in the Middle East, Africa, and East Asia.

[Goal]

The course objectives are:

- 1) To provide students with a background for eventual careers in fields (including work in government, international organizations, business, and the media) which require articulate, clear-thinking individuals with a grasp of contemporary international relations (IR);
- 2) To enable students to establish a firm foundation for studying IR at graduate level;
- 3) To enable students to demonstrate mastery of the subject matter of the course through the expression of relevant factual knowledge and the comprehension of relevant theory, deployed with appropriate analytical skill, as evidenced in discussion, oral presentation and written work.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The spring semester will have detailed discussion on topics relating to the main theme of this seminar. Extensive review of IR theories will also be conducted in the early weeks of the semester.

During the fall semester (and the summer camp), students will undertake their own research projects. Seminar members will also engage in some group work relating to their research topics, role-play, and simulation studies).

Students will be required to write several short essays (only in the spring semester) and one research paper during the course (submitting a research paper by the late January 2024). Students can choose any topics within the discipline of IR. Minimum length for the research paper is 4,000 words. Fourth-year students will concentrate on their dissertation projects during the year. Dissertation subjects can be on anything within the IR discipline. Minimum length is 8,000 words, excluding bibliography, but including notes, any appendices and tables. Comments for assignments are given during class and office hours.

Seminar: Tourism Management I

John Melvin

Credit(s) : 4 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 火 4/Tue.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉〈実〉

[Outline and objectives]

While governments are quick to laud the economic benefits that tourists can bring, there are growing concerns about the impact of relentless growth of global tourism on the environment as well as the socio-cultural wellbeing of host communities. Driven largely by deregulation, globalisation and technological developments, the overarching focus on growth that has driven post-WW2 development is being increasingly challenged and questioned. From 2021, the gradual post-coronavirus recovery offers a rare chance for the tourism industry to consider revising hitherto unsustainable business practices.

Adopting a lens of sustainability, this semester considers the management and marketing of tourism. Combining analysis of seminal research with illustrative and up-to-date case studies from a range of domestic and international destinations, students will gain insights into the factors driving tourism development. Students will also be introduced to different research methods, and will acquire the tools to critically investigate tourism in a context of their choice. This will form the basis of an extended research paper that will be completed during the second year of the seminar.

[Goal]

The goal of this seminar is to provide students with academic and practical knowledge relating to management and marketing that can facilitate their progression into the world of work. This will include multiple aspects of tourism management including stakeholder management, tourism impacts, overtourism and niche tourism development.

Upon completion of this course, students will have acquired enhanced research and analytical skills. They will develop their ability to design, organise and manage an original tourism-related research project. Additionally, through in-class discussions and presentations, students will gain valuable experience in persuasively expressing and defending their opinions on a range of issues relating to business management and marketing.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The seminar consists of in-depth analysis of various issues related to sustainable tourism management. In the spring semester, students are introduced to some core texts and research and are encouraged to start to consider which areas they intend to focus on. In the fall semester, students will begin to refine their topic and develop a firm research proposal.

In the second year of the seminar, students will research and write their extended research paper.

While some seminars will be instructor-led, students will play an increasing role in giving presentations & leading discussions on the Core Readings. As students’ own research develops, they will give presentations on their research, and share their growing expertise with the other students.

Assignments will be submitted via Hoppii; insightful answers will be shared in class to facilitate discussion.

Seminar: Tourism Management I

John Melvin

Credit(s) : 4 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 火 5/Tue.5

その他属性 : 〈優〉〈実〉

[Outline and objectives]

While governments are quick to laud the economic benefits that tourists can bring, there are growing concerns about the impact of relentless growth of global tourism on the environment as well as the socio-cultural wellbeing of host communities. Driven largely by deregulation, globalisation and technological developments, the overarching focus on growth that has driven post-WW2 development is being increasingly challenged and questioned. From 2021, the post-coronavirus recovery offers a rare chance for the tourism industry to consider revising hitherto unsustainable business practices.

Adopting a lens of sustainability, this semester considers the management and marketing of tourism. Combining analysis of seminal research with illustrative and up-to-date case studies from a range of domestic and international destinations, students will gain insights into the factors driving tourism development. Students will be introduced to different research methods, and will acquire the tools to critically investigate tourism in a context of their choice. This will form the basis of an extended research paper that will be completed during the second year of the seminar.

[Goal]

The goal of this seminar is to provide students with academic and practical knowledge relating to management and marketing that can facilitate their progression into the world of work.

Upon completion of this course, students will have acquired enhanced research and analytical skills. They will develop their ability to design, organise and manage an original tourism-related research project. Additionally, through in-class discussions and presentations, students will gain valuable experience in persuasively expressing and defending their opinions on a range of issues relating to business management and marketing.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The seminar consists of in-depth analysis of various issues related to sustainable tourism management. In the spring semester, students are introduced to some core texts and research and are encouraged to start to consider which areas they intend to focus on. In the fall semester, students will begin to refine their topic and develop a firm research proposal.

In the second year of the seminar, students will research and write their extended research paper.

While some seminars will be instructor-led, students will play an increasing role in giving presentations & leading discussions on the Core Readings. As students' own research develops, they will give presentations on their research, and share their growing expertise with the other students.

Assignments will be submitted via Hoppii; insightful answers will be shared in class to facilitate discussion.

[Outline and objectives]

This seminar continues from the Tourism Management I seminar, though with a greater focus on students' independent research projects. In addition to a field trip, students are expected to conduct investigative research that will form the basis of an extended research paper to be completed during the second year of the seminar.

Building on knowledge acquired in the Spring semester on the management and marketing of tourism, the class content will continue to blend analysis of seminal research with illustrative and up-to-date case studies from a range of domestic and international destinations on tourism management. These will vary from year to year based on students' research interests and current affairs.

[Goal]

The goal of this seminar is to provide students with academic and practical knowledge relating to management and marketing that can facilitate their progression into the world of work.

Students who have previously taken literature courses in GIS – particularly Introduction to Literary Theory and/or Comparative Literature – will be given priority consideration.

[Prerequisite]

There are currently no prerequisites for this seminar.

[Outline and objectives]

This seminar is for students interested in literature, literary research, and composition. What separates a strong reading from a weak reading? How do critics and theorists evaluate and discuss a text? What tools and methods do researchers employ to deepen our understanding of a work of literature and its context? In this course, we will be exploring these questions through reading, researching, and discussing a selection of modern and contemporary pieces of short fiction.

[Goal]

Over the course of this seminar, students will:

- (1) develop advanced close reading skills
- (2) grasp the basic theory and methodology of literary research
- (3) develop the ability to discuss prose fiction in multiple technical and theoretical contexts

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This seminar will be primarily based around reading short fiction and essays. Students will conduct independent research on assigned short stories, which they will then present in class. These presentations will be interspersed with lectures and guided readings by the instructor. Students will be assessed based on class participation, presentations, and written submissions. Feedback on presentations and written assignments will be provided in class.

Seminar: Media Across Borders I

Stevie Suan

Credit(s) : 4 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 金 3/Fri.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

It has often been noted that animation is the dominant medium of the current era. For instance, Disney is the world's largest media company, anime is a globally popular media, and we even use animated LINE stamps to communicate with each other. Considering how our lives are now so "animated" as the point of departure, this seminar will explore ways of thinking about media broadly, including anime and films, manga and music, games, lifestyle, fashion, and SNS. Learning various theoretical and methodological approaches, this seminar will explore how different media are both affected by and affect the global societies we live in.

[Goal]

Throughout the seminar, students will learn how to engage with various media by examining relevant theories and research, exploring them through group work and discussion. They will also learn how to apply and critique the approaches examined in class. To do so, there will be presentations as well as smaller projects that work with specific theories and methods that focus on certain media. The students will have the opportunity to examine first-hand what media theorists and researchers are discussing about contemporary (and past) media and how such media reflect and affect society. Across the semester, students will also develop their own research project on a specific media of their choosing, applying the theories and methods we explored in class.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?] Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

As a seminar, these classes will primarily be discussion and presentation-based. Each week students will be provided with an academic reading relevant to the topic, engaging with methodological and theoretical concepts in ways that connect to their research interests. Students will have group and class discussions on certain themes and prepare group presentations and activities to better engage with that week's reading. Classes will also feature visual material such as images and clips of films and animation to better address, apply, and critique the readings. Students will also receive individual feedback and consultation at different points in the semester. Assessments of their work will be based on their understanding and application of the readings through their presentations, participation in discussion, and final papers.

Each week there will be articles/chapters to read, preparations for the discussion, presentation, and/or conducting research. All students are expected to be diligent and keep up with this workload to ensure that the seminar works for the class, the other students, and their own research interests. Reading, preparation, and review time for this class are at least 8 hours.

[Textbooks]

No textbook will be required as readings will be provided by the instructor.

Seminar: Media Across Borders I

【Outline and objectives】

It has often been noted that animation is the dominant medium of the current era. For instance, Disney is the world's largest media company, anime is a globally popular media, and we even use animated LINE stamps to communicate with each other. Considering how our lives are now so "animated" as the point of departure, this seminar will explore ways of thinking about media broadly, including anime and films, manga and music, games, lifestyle, fashion, and SNS. Learning various theoretical and methodological approaches, this seminar will explore how different media are both affected by and affect the global societies we live in.

【Goal】

Throughout the seminar, students will learn how to engage with various media by examining relevant theories and research, exploring them through group work and discussion. They will also learn how to apply and critique the approaches examined in class. To do so, there will be presentations as well as smaller projects that work with specific theories and methods that focus on certain media. The students will have the opportunity to examine first-hand what media theorists and researchers are discussing about contemporary (and past) media and how such media reflect and affect society. Across the semester, students will also develop their own research project on a specific media of their choosing, applying the theories and methods we explored in class.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】
Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

As a seminar, these classes will primarily be discussion and presentation-based. Each week students will be provided with an academic reading relevant to the topic, engaging with methodological and theoretical concepts in ways that connect to their research interests. Students will have group and class discussions on certain themes and prepare group presentations and activities to better engage with that week's reading. Classes will also feature visual material such as images and clips of films and animation to better address, apply, and critique the readings. Students will also receive individual feedback and consultation at different points in the semester. Assessments of their work will be based on their understanding and application of the readings through their presentations, participation in discussion, and final papers.

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed for beginners (or more advanced students). The aim of this course is to help students acquire basic skills of communication. In our epoch of "globalization", knowledge of only one foreign language (for example, English) is far from sufficient. By learning French, students will have more opportunities to work on the world stage.

[Goal]

The goal of this course is to develop basic daily communication skills: asking for information, answering questions, speaking about oneself, and understanding simple texts.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 3".

[Method(s)]

Mr.Okamura (French BI) and I will use the same textbook (see below) and conduct the class in relay. The students will learn all basic skills - speaking, listening, reading and writing although learning of practical skills takes precedence in this course. (Mr. Okamura will rather focus on learning the grammar. It is therefore required that the students attend both of the courses). Active participation is necessary not only for the acquisition of communicative skills through various means (e.g., role-playing), but for an understanding of French culture or that of other French-speaking countries.

The students will get information about the course by way of Learning Management System (LMS).

During the semester, the students are required to submit several assignments through LMS. They will get them back equally through LMS.

The covid 19 situation has caused some problems on a larger or smaller scale: confusion of schedule because of the alternation of online classes and face-to-face classes, awkwardness of class activities especially on oral level because of distance between students in the classroom, etc. I will try to create an optimum situation which can facilitate students' class performance.

[Outline and objectives]

Basic Spanish grammar and conversation.

[Goal]

By the end of the semester, students should be able to write, speak, and understand basic Spanish, in the simple present and past tense.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 3".

[Method(s)]

This course begins with the Spanish alphabet. Basic Spanish grammar will be explained during each weekly lesson. After an explanation of grammatical principles, students will be asked some practical questions. This class advances slowly. In order to prepare, students should do the review exercises at home and bring their textbook and a Spanish-Japanese dictionary to class (see below). To foster a deeper appreciation of Spanish and Latin American cultures, some Spanish songs and movies will be shared, time permitting.

The feedback for homework will be given through Hoppii Learning Assistant System.

Please note that the first week will be offered online to avoid overcrowding the classroom. The Zoom URL for the first class will be announced on Hoppii Learning Assistant System before the semester begins.

[Outline and objectives]

中国語初習者を対象に、発音・文法・会話・作文などの項目を学習しつつ、「読む・書く・聞く・話す」の 4 技能をバランスよく身に付け、初級レベルの総合的な中国語コミュニケーション能力を養う。

This is the Chinese course for beginners. The aim of this course is to acquire the basic communication skills of Chinese. We will improve the skills of listening, speaking, reading and writing through studying pronunciation, grammar, conversation and composition.

[Goal]

この授業の到達目標は以下の通りである。

- (1) 基本的な中国語を読んだり聞いたりして、相手の意見や情報などを理解することができる。
- (2) 基本的な中国語を書いたり話したりして、自分の考えや経験などを表現することができる。
- (3) Spring 学期の学習を完了した段階で、HSK1 級に合格できるレベルの中国語能力を身に付ける。
- (4) 中国語圏の言語や文化に対する関心を持ち、積極的に異文化を理解することができる。

The goals of this course are as follows:

- (1) Students can understand the thoughts and information of the other party by reading and listening to basic Chinese.
- (2) Students can express their thoughts and experiences by writing and speaking basic Chinese.
- (3) Students can pass HSK Level 1 by the end of the spring semester.
- (4) Students can have an interest in Chinese culture and language, and be able to actively understand different cultures.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 3".

[Method(s)]

・授業は基本的にテキストに沿って毎回 1 課ずつ進める。毎回の授業は、概ね以下の手順で進める。1. 小テスト (約 20 分)、2. 前回の復習 (約 10 分)、3. テキストの学習 (約 40 分)、4. 問題演習・コミュニケーション活動など (約 30 分)。

・外国語の習得のためには、継続的な学習が重要であるため、毎回授業の最初に小テストを行う。

・この授業ではブレンド型学習 (教室での対面学習と自宅での e ラーニングを組み合わせた学習方法) を導入し、教室学習と自宅学習を有機的に連携させつつ行う。

・教員は小テストの添削や質問への回答を準備し、授業時に返却・回答することで随時フィードバックを行う。

Race, Class and Gender I: Concepts & Issues

Daiki Hiramori

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 火 1/Tue.1

その他属性 : 〈グ〉〈ダ〉〈未〉

[Outline and objectives]

This class sees our society through the lens of race, class and gender to understand how privilege and inequality are produced, maintained, naturalized and challenged. The course will look at how various inequalities are connected to one another through examining global, national and local issues. Students will learn to analyze how race, class, gender, and sexuality are connected to each other as intersecting inequalities in a society and the world, and on that basis, consider the possibility of an equal but diverse world.

[Goal]

Through lectures, discussion and written assignments, students will learn concepts and theories to analyze how race, class, gender and sexuality affect individuals and society. They will learn to apply these analytical tools and knowledge to form critical opinions on current issues related to various bases of inequalities. Students will acquire skills in critical thinking, analysis and writing that can be applied in other academic fields as well as future careers.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course will be based on a combination of short lectures by the instructor and student-led class discussions. Verbal and written feedback on assignments is given during class discussions and through using other tools as appropriate. Students are encouraged to visit the instructor during office hours for more personalized feedback.

Sociolinguistics

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 火 2/Tue.2

その他属性 : 〈ゲ〉

【Outline and objectives】

This course provides students with a basic knowledge of sociolinguistics, the study of language in relation to society. The first part of the course is concerned with how individual language use is correlated with a variety of social variables, such as gender, age, class and ethnicity, by outlining a number of previous studies conducted in the English-speaking world. Particular reference is made to the classic research of William Labov, one of the founding figures of quantitative sociolinguistics.

Later lectures focus on how and where a language or dialect is socially placed and ranked within a community, including multi-lingual/dialectal countries such as Singapore. Students who are or are becoming bilingual will find the discussion on bilingualism especially interesting when they learn that its implications not merely vary from one society to another, but have been significantly changing recently. Another major topic is language attitudes. They are not based on purely linguistic considerations, but connected with how people perceive and evaluate different dialects or accents.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) understand key terminology, concepts and theories in sociolinguistics,
- (2) have an awareness of ongoing language changes in society, and
- (3) become familiar with interpreting quantitative/qualitative data for sociolinguistic analysis.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course is a combination of lectures and class discussions. Based on a flipped learning model, students have to read chapter handouts and address questions asked there prior to attending each lecture. Submitted assignments and tests are reviewed in detail and commented on in the following week’s lecture.

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Students are required to read the handouts beforehand so that they can actively participate in discussions. They may also need to consult chapter references or search for relevant online resources. Preparatory study and review time for this course are 2 hours each.

【Textbooks】

No textbooks are used. All handouts are posted on the course website, while additional materials will be provided in the classroom.

【References】

Detailed references and suggestions for further reading are listed on each chapter handout. The following books will be helpful as a general introduction.

【Grading criteria】

Evaluation will be based on in-class quizzes and take-home tasks (20%), a mid-semester exam (40%) and a final exam (40%). Attendance at the first class is mandatory. More than two unexcused absences will result in failure of the course.

【Changes following student comments】

Students have been positive about the contents and method of instruction. Hyperlinked video clips are updated every year.

【Equipment student needs to prepare】

The lectures are delivered using PowerPoint slides and Internet resources. The handouts are downloadable in PDF format.

【Others】

It is recommended that students have completed 100-level linguistics courses with a good understanding. This course is cross-listed with the Global Open Program. Non-GIS students may join if they demonstrate solid background in linguistics and meet the minimum English proficiency requirement: TOEFL iBT® 80 or IELTS 6.0.

International Security

Takeshi Yuzawa

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 木 3/Thu.3

その他属性 : 〈グ〉〈未〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course covers the approaches to security studies, a sub-discipline of International Relations (IR). Security studies mainly examines the causes of war; the conditions for peace; strategies for avoiding conflict, managing and resolving disputes; and the impact of new technologies, weapons, actors and ideas on states' calculations on whether to use force.

[Goal]

The course objectives are: (1) to enable students to develop a broader understanding of the key theories and concepts in security studies; (2) to examine major security challenges in the international arena through the lens of theories and concepts; (3) to acquire the ability to form their own answers to enduring and contemporary questions inherent in international security studies.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course has two segments: First, presenting major theories and concepts in security studies, necessary for understanding contemporary security policies and issues.

Second, examining contemporary security challenges related to armed conflicts, arms trade and military competition, nuclear proliferation, genocide and mass killings, and terrorism.

Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

International Relations of the Asia-Pacific

Takeshi Yuzawa

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 木 3/Thu.3

その他属性 : 〈ゲ〉

【Outline and objectives】

This course will explore the nature of international relations in the Asia-Pacific. It will mainly examine and discuss the following: (1) factors for stability and peace in the Asia-Pacific region after the end of the Cold War; (2) roles for the great powers in the region: the United States, China, and Japan; (3) problems and prospects for regional security and economic cooperation; (4) the evolution of regional institutions; (5) the prospects for regional order.

【Goal】

The course objectives are: (1) to develop students' ability to effectively use IR theories to analyze and explain developments in regional affairs; (2) to enable students to analyze the foreign policies of the major powers and selected regional countries; (3) to enable students to assess the developments of regional institutions; (4) to enable students to examine and assess the status and prospects for regional order.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】
Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

This course is composed of twelve lectures. In each class, a background lecture on a pre-selected topic will be provided to students. After a lecture, there will be a discussion. While the lectures will provide an overview of the topics in question, the discussions will give students an opportunity to examine policies in more depth. Comments for assignments are given during class and office hours.

General Topics I: Visual Communication Design

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 1~4
Day/Period : 土 2/Sat.2

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

Images seen on walls and in public spaces are rarely random. Most are designed to grab attention and make the viewer want to do something, whether it be desire a car, a drink, a movie, or to share in an idea such as a political message or charity. If images always carry messages, this course explores such message through the practice of making images.

[Goal]

During this course, we will learn how visual messages are conveyed through the acquisition of essential skills (e.g. use of grids, balance, rhythm, typography). We will also develop a working understanding of the impact that images have upon contemporary society. In doing so, the course aims to encourage students' critical awareness of surrounding visual environments.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Blending theory and practice to introduce the basics of Visual Communication Design, the first part of the course looks at how and why we "read" images in different ways. The second part looks at supporting students through the process of designing an advertisement. To develop a contextual understanding of the subject, students also create a dedicated Instagram account for collecting advertisements seen around Tokyo. Final submission comprises a final project (advertisement) and evidence of participation (Instagram posts). Attendance is recorded weekly using visual media (e.g. photograph). Feedback is given via dialogue and discussion of work in class.

3	Visual Theories	Exploring theories associated with the act of seeing.
4	Visual Persuasion	Discussing the use of persuasion and the commonality of propaganda.
5	Visual Stereotypes	Exploring stereotypes within the contemporary visual landscape.
6	Visual Analysis	Analyzing images using Lester's six perspectives.
7	Visual Literacy	Discussion of advertisements in Tokyo.
8	Layout	Exploring the value of different layouts in design.
9	Typography	Exploring the history and use of typefaces for design.
10	Images	Looking at ways to reproduce/scale/multiply images within designs.
11	Colour	Exploring colour as a communicative decision for design.
12	Constructive Feedback	Getting feedback on poster designs.
13	Peer Review	Making final amendments and adjustments to designs.
14	Taking Responsibility	Discussing the future of advertisements.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students are expected to download and read assigned readings prior to lectures. Students are also expected to create a dedicated Instagram account and post a single image taken daily (7 days x 13 weeks = 91 images). The project will require a number of hours spent outside of class in order to make the work. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Grading criteria]

Participation: this applies to class-activities, assigned readings and daily posts to Instagram. More than 2 unexcused absences will result in failure of this course.

Final Project: each student must produce an advertisement relating to a topic determined by the instructor.
The final grade is based on: Participation 40% and Final Project 60%.

[Changes following student comments]

Changes reflect feedback and suggestions. Thank you.

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

Students will need a laptop, a camera, a workbook (e.g. blank sketchbook/notebook), and general stationary (e.g. pen, pencil, glue, tape, paperclips). Students will also need access to a printer and know how to use it (e.g. Convenience store print machine). Paper and other basic art materials may also be requested from time to time.

[Others]

Being naturally creative is not a requirement for this course. However, students are expected to come to class on time, participate and demonstrate an active interest.

General Topics I: Fine Arts

Suzanne Mooney

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 1~4
Day/Period : 金 1/Fri.1

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

Drawing is at the root of expression and communication in fine art. Through this course, students gain a fundamental understanding of art, while also pushing the boundaries of drawing beyond a traditional understanding of the medium. The skills being taught start with traditional drawing methods, and throughout the course, the definition of drawing is expanded to include elements of photography, digital imaging, and computer code.

Fine art is often dismissed as purely subjective and beyond comprehension or academic interrogation. Through a structured, methodical approach to image-making, supported by a comprehensive introduction to basic theory, and examples of these methods in practice, students will gain the ability to hone in on an area of interest and apply drawing and image-making as a means of research or expression.

[Goal]

Learning how to 'look' is the biggest obstacle to successful drawing. Before even considering how to reproduce the appearance of an object or form, one must see beyond the obvious and the expected. Through active engagement in guided practical class activities and the production of an individual portfolio, students will gain an understanding of the potential of fine arts as a communicative tool, in addition to aesthetic experience and self-expression.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Students engage in weekly practical exercises supported by lectures introducing relevant artists and their works. Exercises take the form of drawing activities that ask students to visually explore an object/subject.

Working towards an individual approach, students produce a portfolio of drawings. In addition to a final portfolio of drawings, students are required to keep a weekly sketchbook and take part in presentations and discussions in class.

Students will receive direct feedback and critique in class, combined with regular written feedback or grades for assignments submitted online. For major assignments, a grading rubric will be provided and explained in detail.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each. Students are be required to complete practical activities outside of class time.

In addition to class activities and regular notebook work, students will be required to spend time every week working towards their portfolio before the final review.

Research on an artist selected by the student will also be expected.

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 木 2/Thu.2

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

The goal of this course is to introduce the students to various quantitative research methods used in the social sciences. When making important decisions, be it choosing a strategy to increase the sales of a product, implementing an intervention program to boost people's well-being, or selecting a school program to increase students' learning, people can rely on their intuition and experience, or they can base their decisions on facts: data. In this course, students will develop skills to obtain valid and reliable data through experimental and survey methods. The course will also cover topics related to research ethics, some basic statistics, and APA-style writing.

【Goal】

This course provides an overview of the 'how's and 'why's of quantitative research in social sciences, and it covers such topics as design, ethics, and APA-style writing and such strategies as field experiments and surveys. Students will develop the ability to design, conduct, evaluate, and report empirical studies. By developing hypotheses and critically assessing information, students will improve on their critical thinking skills.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

The course consists of lectures, in which general ideas and methods of research will be presented, and hands-on applications of the methods, in which student's research projects will be planned and presented. Although some of the class time will be set aside for planning students' research, the majority of it will be done as assignments to be completed outside class. Feedback for research will be given during class time. Comments for papers will be given via the Learning Management System.

2	The Fundamentals of Research	How do we define variables? How do we measure them? What is good research? How do I know if I can trust the findings?
3	Common Experimental Designs	Evaluating causal claims with experiments: random assignment and control
4	Understanding Research Paper	Understanding the structure of a research paper
5	Experimental Research I	Presentation of the research question, hypotheses, and theories
6	Experimental Research II	Identifying the various threats to internal validity
7	Data Analyses I	Understanding the basics of inferential statistics
8	Correlational Research I	How are the two variables associated? How can we write clear questions?
9	Correlational Research II	Presentation of the research question, hypotheses, and theories
10	Correlational Research III	Creating a questionnaire
11	Sampling Issues and Validities	How generalizable are my findings?
12	Data Analyses II	Computing reliabilities and correlations
13	Data Analyses III	Data analysis workshop using a statistical software
14	Students Poster Presentations	Poster presentations of group research

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Students will have to complete the assigned homework on time to successfully complete the class. They will be asked to do the readings, create research materials, collect data, etc. outside the class. Please bear in mind that the course will require that students spend a considerable amount of time outside class (at least 2 hours every week, sometimes more). Most work will be done in small groups, suggesting that students need to be flexible in finding time to meet other students during the week. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

The reference books will be available in the library and the GIS Reference Room for those who wish to learn about each topic in more detail. Handouts and reading materials are on the course website.

【Grading criteria】

Final grades are based on two research papers (20% and 30%), a poster presentation (20%), and the quality and timeliness of group work done outside class (30%).

【Changes following student comments】

Students in previous years found this course very demanding but rewarding. Some students aimed to accomplish at a higher level while others were somewhat struggling to meet the requirements. I will provide office hours and other consulting time outside the class to meet the need of individual students.

【Equipment student needs to prepare】

For some weeks, students will be asked to bring laptop computers. Students must get the login information for PyscINFO database from the library.

【Others】

Students who have successfully completed Statistics will be given priority during enrollment.

Students must take and pass this course if they wish to enroll in the Self and Culture seminar. Students who plan to enroll in other seminars in social sciences are also strongly encouraged to take this course.

[Outline and objectives]

Since the late 19th century we have witnessed a number of artistic movements from, what is considered, modern to contemporary: the birth of realism, impressionism, abstract expressionism, minimalism, the rise of conceptual art, installation, video and pop art, the extension into earth, body, public domain, the revival of painting, the exploration into photography, the shift to more participation and collaboration based art practices. Amidst all these transformations, how does art continue to remain inspirational and 'contemporary'? In which way, are we able to recognize and respond to truly creative works from personal, global and interdisciplinary perspectives? This course looks at various topics in Fine art and closely pay attentions to how an artwork exists in a certain milieu: time and space, and among all kinds of relationships. Artistic practices mainly in Europe, North America, Asia and also other areas across the globe will be examined.

[Goal]

You will learn to appreciate an artwork by 'listening' to voices of an artwork as well as an artist, becoming familiar with terms in art from the late modern to contemporary times.

You will understand how one can engage with an artwork respectfully and express her/his/their unique experience in writing and speech.

You will become active and discerning participants/viewers of art, equipped with basic knowledges of Fine Art and related theories.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

I will provide a referential material as a post on Google Classroom in prior to each class. In the class, we will read texts, watch video clips, look at lecture slides, to learn about the key terms, artistic backgrounds, a milieu of an artwork that will help us understand and engage with the work. We will also have a in-class exercise and the time for questions at the end. Unless your question involves something personal, please ask during this time. In addition, you are required to attend at least one off-campus museum or gallery exhibition relevant to the course (determined by the instructor). You will then make presentations and write their research papers. You will be also asked to explore your own creative possibility, inspired by the shared learnings and experiments, at the end of the course.

The feedbacks to the in-class exercises will be provided in the next class as well as through the google classroom as comments where students are asked to submit them.

The feedbacks to the assignments, the presentations, and the experiments will be provided through the google classroom as comments as well as in the class.

NOTE 1: Please be aware that some works shown in class may address controversial issues and may include nudity.

NOTE 2: The schedule and the content may change in response to the students' needs.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students need to keep up with the class materials (readings, videos and so forth) and to be prepared for class discussions and activities. As part of their research, students are required to make at least one visit to an art exhibition suggested by the instructor in order to prepare their presentations and research papers. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Textbooks]

No textbook will be used. Readings will be made available on Hoppii or Google Classroom.

References will be made available on Hoppii or Google Classroom.

[Grading criteria]

Participation (30%) : Students will be expected to spend time with the referential materials (text and video clip) posted on Google Classroom for each class. Students will complete comment card (as part of In-class-exercise) and submit at the end of the class or 5pm on the next day. A self-guided field trip to one exhibition and the following presentation and paper: Each student is required to visit one of the exhibitions to be suggested by the instructor.

Short Presentation (20%) : Present the chosen work to class that you engage with during your self-guid museum/gallery visit. Project Paper (30%) : Write a paper, which is more than the written version of your presentation. Rather, it is a research paper and you will need to find and discuss an article on the artwork or the artist of your choice.

Experimentation (20%) : Students will experiment to connect a topic from the class to your interdisciplinary interest, to draw an idea for new art, and together to follow an instruction for making an artwork.

[Changes following student comments]

I have made the reaction comments due by 5pm on the next day. This will achieve equity especially for slow-writing students.

【Outline and objectives】

This course is designed to introduce students to qualitative research methods. The course begins with research problems, questions and design considerations. The course follows with training, through lecture, group work and hands-on experiences, in data collection methods commonly used in qualitative research—field observation, interviews, and the use of documents and archival data. Students will undertake a pilot research study as part of the course requirements. This includes designing a research question, doing a literature review, creating a questionnaire, observing a field setting, analyzing field notes, and presenting on preliminary research findings. The exercises are intended to develop the mindset required to think through, design, and execute a qualitative study.

【Goal】

Provide students with an appreciation for and the basic steps of qualitative research design. Acquaint students with a diversity of qualitative methods and associated theoretical, ethical, and pragmatic issues. Instruct students on how to conduct qualitative research that is descriptively rich, theoretically illuminating, and personally meaningful. Each student will be able to create her/his own research questions, decide a research site/community, conduct original research, and present their findings.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Although the instructor will provide the basic framework in a lecture format, students are expected to actively participate in and contribute to class discussion. This includes asking questions, seeking clarification and offering your critical ideas and interpretation about student projects, practical fieldwork issues, and lectures on other fieldwork techniques. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

【Grading criteria】

Field I, II, III Assignments: 60%
Research Proposal/Presentation 40%

Three or more unexcused absences will result in an incomplete grade (marked “E” on grading sheet). Please provide documentation if you need to be absent from class for medical reasons, job interviews and family emergency. If you arrive late or leave early, each will be counted as one ½ absence. 5 absences will result in “not passing.”

【Changes following student comments】

Weekly assignments have been updated.

【Equipment student needs to prepare】

None. You may use laptop or tablet to take notes.

【Others】

Slight modifications may be expected. Our goal in this class will not be to memorize or master a series of clear-cut answers; rather, by engaging in lively discussions, we aim to hone our ability to ask critical questions so as to further develop our skills as writers, readers and thinkers. In order to create such a learning environment, students should speak to each other and the instructor with respect. Abusive and harsh language will not be tolerated. Students with special needs should notify the instructor as early as possible, no later than the third week of the semester. Student attendance is critical because each lecture builds on the previous week. Missing out on critical components of the research process will put you behind in being able to design and implement a full project.

[Outline and objectives]

This course will cover the basic notions of psycholinguistics – how languages are acquired, learnt, used, and understood in daily situations. It primarily focuses on human speech communication - how auditory and visual information is processed and integrated in the human brain. We will explore research findings in linguistics, acoustics, psychology, and neuroscience.

[Goal]

There are three main goals:

- (1) Students understand the basic structures of language.
- (2) Students understand communication strategies including auditory and optical illusion.
- (3) Students understand the basic brain structure and functions for human speech communication.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 2” and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course consists of lectures, discussions, pop-quizzes, and midterm/final reviews. Handouts and worksheets are provided in class. Students are expected to actively participate in class: take notes, be responsive to questions, and work in pairs and groups. Feedback for course contents and assignments will be provided in class.

[Outline (in English)]

Learn basic knowledge about the Constitution of Japan.

The theme is to understand the philosophy and structure of the Constitution of Japan, mainly for beginners, based on their understanding of the relationship between law and the state and society. By grasping the basic structure of the legal system centered on the Constitution and acquiring basic legal knowledge through "correct understanding" of the basic principles of the Constitution of Japan and the content structure and characteristics based on it. The goal of the lesson is to acquire the legal and institutional knowledge and qualities necessary as a citizen of a democratic nation and as a sovereign. At the same time, we aim to cultivate a so-called "legal mind" that can respond appropriately and appropriately to various legal relationships in the real world.

The standard preparatory study and review time for this class is 2 hours each.

Browse the materials instructed during the lecture (in some cases, you may instruct to view videos such as YouTube as well as paper materials).

Summarize the content of the lecture in a memo and summarize it in easy-to-understand sentences (this work is directly linked to grade evaluation because a report is required for the content of the lecture).

"Systematic understanding of the Constitution", "Basic legal knowledge" described in the achievement goal column by the task report (50%) in the first half of the lecture (face-to-face type) and the task report (50%) in the second half of the lecture (on-demand type). Evaluate by measuring the degree of achievement of "Legal Mind Development".

[Outline and objectives]

The purpose of this course is to deepen students' understanding of the significance and role of physical activity and to foster the acquisition of essential knowledge and attitudes that contribute to the maintenance and promotion of physical, mental, and social health and self-management throughout life through lectures and practical training.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students should be able to do the followings:

1. Deepen understanding of the significance and role of physical activity from various perspectives.
2. Acquire the ability to use sports activities to establish a prosperous and healthy student and social life.
3. Acquire basic knowledge and develop attitudes that contribute to self-management.
4. To acquire the ability to demonstrate leadership and solve problems through communication with others, which is considered to be extremely important for playing an active role in the real world after graduation.
5. Aim to acquire various skills that lead to the development of employment ability (ability to build relationships of trust, ability to act jointly, etc.).

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

[Method(s)]

If the Method(s) is changed, we will announce the details of any changes.

Students are expected to be in good physical condition before attending the class so that they will not have any physical or mental problems during the physical activities in the class. In addition, students are expected to follow the lecture's instructions in charge of the class regarding assignments to be done after class and preparations for the next class.

This class has comprised both lectures and practical lessons, and students are expected to learn and understand elementary health and physical education. Also, the class schedule may be changed due to COVID-19 and the university guidelines.

Due to the coronavirus pandemic, if too many students are registered for this class, we may have to choose students via random selection to avoid a large group gathering. Further details of this will be announced through Hoppii before the first lesson starts.

When students submit reaction papers, the teacher will comment or give feedback on those reaction papers at the beginning of the next session.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

This class's standard preparatory study and review time is 2 hours each. The purpose of this class is to understand that sports activities contribute to the promotion of physical and mental health and interpersonal relationships through lectures and practical training. Therefore, record the time spent on daily physical activity, meals, sleep time, etc., look back on the contents, and record the effects and future tasks. Also, get in the habit of looking at various sports-related information sent from TV, newspapers, the Web, etc. This work will deepen your understanding of the contents of this class.

[Textbooks]

No textbook will be used.

[References]

Reference books may be introduced as and if necessary.

[Grading criteria]

Your overall grade in the class will be decided based on the following.

1. Participation status for activities during class / Reaction paper 60%,
2. Assignments / Reports 40%.

In principle, this grade evaluation method is used, and students who have difficulty in normal activities will be treated and evaluated individually.

[Changes following student comments]

None (due to a newly appointed teacher).

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

1. Students must bring their proper sportswear and indoor shoes for practical lessons.

2. Students must bring their own personal computer or mobile device to create and submit assignments.

【Others】

1. The order and content of each class can be changed/modified due to the number of participants and available facilities, as well as the situation of COVID-19 and university guidelines.

2. This class is planned to be held offline (face to face); therefore, please follow the university guidelines carefully when participating in classes (e.g., sanitizing your hands before participation).

3. If students have any issues, including health, before, during, and after the class, students must inform their condition to the teacher.

14	まとめのワーク	「法政大学と自分たちの未来」を話しあい、将来の法政大学への提言をする。本学の教学担当理事の講評を受け、もっとも優れた発表に総長賞を授与する。(小秋元段常務理事・科目責任者=小林)

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

毎回、講師は代わりますが、一つの流れになっています。配付資料を読み直し、紹介した参考文献にも目を通すようにしましょう。2020 年にオープンしたばかりの HOSEI ミュージアムは必見。予習復習をかねてぜひ見学を！ デジタル展示でつぎつぎと新しい情報が出てきます。その他関連する特別展示なども紹介、見学を推奨します。なお、本授業の準備学習・復習時間は、各 2 時間を標準とします。

[Textbooks]

写真でみせる『法政大学 1880-2000 そのあゆみと展望』から抜粋本をつくり、授業支援システムに掲載します。さらに充実したバージョンはテキストとして生協で販売します。

[References]

毎回、適宜お知らせします。本学の大学史については、上述書のほか『法政大学八十年史』『法政大学百年史』『法政大学と戦後五〇年』などがあります。

[Grading criteria]

毎回の学習支援システムのコメントにみえる取り組み 70 %、期末レポート 30 %で総合的に評価します。

[Changes following student comments]

開設 13 年を迎える科目で、受講生が法政大学で学ぶ自分を見つめ直す役割を果たしているようです。毎回の授業内容を、テキストとより関連づけながら進めていくよう努めます。みなさんにとって興味深く、よい刺激となるようにする工夫を重ねていきます。

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

配付資料類は、学習支援システムを通じて配付します。

[Others]

・入学した段階で、本学で学ぶことの意味を考えられるよう 1 年次での履修を推奨します。2 年生以上の受講ももちろん歓迎します。
・この授業で法政大学の経てきた歴史に興味をもったら、上位科目として開講されている「法政学の探究 LA・LB」にもチャレンジしてみてください。

[Outline (in English)]

(Course outline) Welcome to Hosei University! Would you like to know when, how and why your university and faculty were founded?

We will trace the more than 140-year history of Hosei University, looking at its various aspects: the university song, acceptance of overseas students, relations with other countries, distinctive research institutes, changes in student culture, outstanding graduates, etc. In the last class session, we are going to hold a discussion as to the future of our university and you can present your proposals to the university president. Hopefully this class would be a good opportunity for you to reflect on yourself who study at this university and think about your future career.

(Learning activities outside of classroom) Students will be expected to study for four hours before and after each class.

(Grading Policies) The final grade will be calculated based on the small report submitted in each class (70%) and the final report (30%).

[Outline and objectives]

この授業は、「大学を知ろう <法政学>への招待」(旧科目名「法政学への招待」)をすでに受講し、法政大学が経てきた140余年の歴史と現状について一通りの理解をもつ学生を主対象にして、本学ゆかりの特定の人物を媒介に、法政大学についてより深く考える場を提供する発展科目として設定しました。

「大学を知ろう <法政学>への招待」における学習を前提に、本授業では、法政大学で教えた教員や、学んだ学生を具体的に取り上げます。教員の場合なら、その人物が法政大学でどういう教育研究に携わったのか、そのことで本学や社会の発展にいかに関与したか、などを追います。卒業生の場合なら、本学で何を学んだのか、あるいは学んだことをその後の本人の人生や、社会に向けてどう役立てたかなどについて、探究することになるでしょう。

法政大学ゆかりの特定の人物を詳しく追うことで、「自由と進歩」の理念や、時代のフロントランナー養成を掲げる本学の歴史と現在が、より具体性を帯びて理解できるようになるはずです。

[Goal]

本学の経てきた道を、具体的な人物に即して、実証的・実感的に把握できることを目指します。時代の大きな流れの中で、本学ゆかりのその人物が何に興味をもち、どんな活動をし、何を目指し、何に悩んだかなど、時代の潮流や雰囲気を受講生個々人の知性と感性で感じられるようにします。それを、自分の学生生活や将来像へとつなげて考える契機を得るよう努めます。

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

[Method(s)]

科目責任者の教員2名が毎回同席し、授業をコーディネートします。講義は、毎回のテーマに最適な本学内外の講師陣(科目責任者を含む)が、分担して担当します。

授業の最後に毎回、リアクションペーパーを書いていただきます。受講生の声を反映した参加型・双方向型授業になるよう努めます。なお、質問やリアクションペーパーに対するフィードバックは授業中に行います。

対面を基本としますが、講師の都合等により他の形式で行う回が生じた場合は、事前にお知らせします。

[Schedule] 授業形態：対面/face to face

No.	Theme	Contents
1	導入	この授業の狙いや、全体の構成について説明する。 あわせて、本学の経てきた歴史の概略を復習する。(科目責任者=高柳俊男、北口由望)
2	本学草創期を支えた日本近代法の父・ポアソナードとその門人たち	1873年に政府顧問として来日したフランス人法学者ポアソナードは、刑法・民法などの近代法典の整備のかたわら、法学教育にも尽力した。その門人の薩埵正邦に焦点を当てて、明治初期の法典整備・法学教育の意義を考える。(岡孝)

3	世界を知りつくした本学の祖 箕作麟祥	本学の前身である和仏法律学校の初代校長の箕作麟祥は、明治期の有数の啓蒙家であった。彼は、洋学を学んで、西洋の法律や歴史を日本に紹介し、日本の「民権」のために活躍した。彼の仕事を振り返って、そこから学ぶものを探りたい。(南塚信吾)
4	「民法の父」・和仏法律学校初代総理 梅謙次郎	日本民法典起草者の一人であり、帝国大学法学部教授、法政大学の初代総理(総長)であった梅謙次郎について、韓国(大韓帝国、1897~1910年)政府の法律顧問として活動していた頃の足跡を辿る。(李英美)
5	能楽研究の開拓者である野上豊一郎	法政大学は古典芸能の「能楽」と深い結びつきがあるが、その縁は、戦後間もなく総長を務めた野上豊一郎が創出したものである。今回は、野上と能楽との出会いから、彼が残した功績を概観する。(伊海孝充)
6	夏目漱石門下生たちに学んで作家になった椋鳩十	伊那谷出身の椋鳩十(本名:久保田彦穂)は、とくに動物物語の作者として広く知られる。初の詩集を出し、学生結婚もした法政大学時代をはじめ、戦前戦後にわたる椋の歩みを時代の中で振り返る。(高柳俊男)
7	作家井本健作とその日記	野上豊一郎の推挙で本学教員になり、戦前・戦後にかけて、予科長、第二中学校長(初代)、図書館長を歴任するなど大学運営にも深くかかわった作家・俳人の井本健作。井本が長年にわたり書き残した日記(「自省録」)を紐解き、知られざる戦前期法政大学の歴史を明らかにする。(北口由望)
8	戦争の中を生きた学友たち~久納好孚を例に	終戦直前のわずか10ヶ月足らずの間に5,845名もの戦死者を出した「特攻」。その第一号となったのが、本学に学んだ学友の一人・久納好孚であった。彼はなぜ「特攻」を志願したのか。その短い生涯を辿りながら、戦前戦中の本学の歴史と学友たちの生きざまを追体験してみたい。(鈴木靖)
9	城戸幡太郎、波多野完治、宮原誠一、乾孝~	戦前の法政大学高等師範部教授の城戸幡太郎、波多野完治、宮原誠一らは、本学を舞台に教育科学研究会や保育問題研究会を組織したが、そのねらいは現場の教員と研究者とが共同して教育実践を研究することにあつた。キャリアデザイン学部へと引き継がれるこの伝統を明らかにしたい。(笹川孝一)
10	南北朝鮮と日本の狭間に生きた尹学準	尹学準は朝鮮戦争最中に韓国から日本に密航し、法政大学の小田切秀雄ゼミで近代文学を学んだ。晩年、母校の教授となり、現役のまま亡くなった尹学準の波乱万丈の歩みを追いながら、その一生が投げかけるものを考えたい。(高柳俊男)

[Grading criteria]

毎回のリアクションペーパーに反映された授業に取り組む姿勢40%、学期末のレポート60%を基準にして、総合的に評価します。受講者数によっては若干の変更があるかもしれませんが、その場合は授業の場(もしくは学習支援システム上)でお知らせします。この成績評価の方法をもとに、本授業の到達目標の60%以上を達成した者を合格とします。

なお、レポートの作成に際しては、典拠となる文献に必ず当たり、実証的な内容になるよう心がけてください。

[Changes following student comments]

学術的でありながら、同時に本学で学ぶ自分自身の生き方の参考になるような、興味深い授業を目指します。

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

とくにありません。学習支援システムを積極的に活用します。

[Others]

上述のように、「大学を知ろう <法政学>への招待」で学んだ内容を前提に進めます。したがって、原則として同科目の既修者か、それと同程度の前提知識がある方が受講対象者になります。無い方の受講も認めますが、この授業と並行して、自ら積極的に補うよう努めてください。

「大学を知ろう <法政学>への招待」とこの「法政学の探究 LA」を履修し、さらに学びを深めたい方には、より演習に近い少人数の科目として、「法政学の探究 LB」(春学期)も用意されています。ただし、2023年度に限り、休講です。

[Outline (in English)]

This intermediate class aims to explore the history and the spirit of Hosei University, by following the achievements and personality of several specific individuals.

Please refer to the documents mentioned by the lecturer in the class. Also, please make use of the newly opened HOSEI Museum and Digital Archives for preparation and review.

Final grade will be calculated according to the following process. Reaction papers for each class 40%, and term-end report 60%.

【Outline and objectives】

フランス語で書かれた文章の正確な理解と内容についての考察を行う授業です。フランス語の文章を和訳しながら読んでみると、本文に含まれている文法事項を復習します。次に、関連事項をクラスで話し合い発表します。

【Goal】

1年間でフランス語検定4級レベルの文法を復習することができます。単語の意味を調べれば、フランス語で書かれた簡単な新聞記事などを自力で読み解き、意見をまとめることができるようになります。

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

【Method(s)】

2回の授業で、4ページ構成の1レッスンを終える速度で進みます。授業1回目は、語彙とコラムを参考にフランス語文を和訳しながら内容を理解します。授業2回目は、文法事項を確認しながら練習問題を解き、右ページにあるキーワードや短い質問を使ってグループで話し合いその結果を発表します。日本語だけではなく、フランス語でも簡単に自分の意見が言えるように練習しましょう。授業内に行う小テストはその場で答え合わせをします。ウェブ上に提出する課題については、プリントアウト後採点したものを教室で返却する予定です。

【Outline (in English)】

This is a class for students to accurately understand sentences written in French and consider their content. After reading the French text while translating it into Japanese, review the grammatical items included in the text. Then, discuss and present relevant matters in class. In two lessons, you will progress at a speed that allows you to finish one lesson of 4 pages. In the first class, students will understand the content by translating French sentences into Japanese with reference to vocabulary and columns. In the second class, students solve practice questions while checking grammar items, discuss them in groups using keywords and short questions on the right page, and present the results. Practice not only Japanese, but also in French so that you can easily express your opinion. Answers to test in class are checked on the place. Assignments posted on the web will be graded after printing out and returned in the classroom.

Grading:

Normal points (participation in classes, discussion and presentation) 50%

Final exam (oral and written exam held on the last day of classes): 50%

Test method:

This class is a "pre-term exam". Final exams are not held "during the examination period", but during the class hours on the last day of regular classes.

【Outline (in English)】

In the spring term the course will be held online, in real time using ZOOM.

In this course students will practice communicating familiar topics to others. Model sentences will be created to explain important expressions and practice replacing them. The goal is to be able to write your own sentences by replacing expressions based on the model sentences.

Grading criteria

Students will be judged on the basis of regular scores, assignments and final examinations.

Regular point evaluation: 30%.

A score based on the student's response when pointed out in class. Also, your attitude and active participation in class. Regular points will be accumulated, so if a student is absent, the regular points for that day will be zero.

Assignments: 30%.

Final exam: 40%.

In this course, students will practice communicating familiar topics to others. After replacing model sentences and memorize the expressions you have learned, you will practice them with your pairs in the Break Out Room. Next, rewrite the model sentences using the memorized expressions and present them in the Break Out Room. I will confirm what you have learned by asking some of you at the beginning of the next week's lecture. The number of short sentences to be memorized each time is about 6.

After two sessions on a single topic, the students will submit a piece of writing about themselves in Hoppii as an assignment. Read the Feedback you receive carefully, memorize the document, and present it to your peers.

Every week begins with a review of the previous week. Students will practice in pairs using the Break Out Room, so they are expected to prepare well and actively participate in class. Students are required to understand the model sentences and their Japanese translations well in advance of each class. For post-lesson study, students are expected to check about 6 short sentences memorized in the lecture and memorize them perfectly by the next lecture. Confirmation will be done in the next class. The estimated study time is about 60 minutes for each class.

【Outline (in English)】

In the fall term the course will be held online, in real time using ZOOM.

We will practice communicating familiar topics to others. Model sentences will be created to explain important expressions and practice replacing them. The goal is to be able to write your own sentences by replacing expressions based on the model sentences.

Grading criteria

Students will be judged on the basis of regular scores, assignments and final examinations.

Regular point evaluation: 30%.

A score based on the student's response when pointed out in class. Also, your attitude and active participation in class. Regular points will be accumulated, so if a student is absent, the regular points for that day will be zero.

Assignments: 30%.

Final exam: 40%.

In this course, students will practice communicating familiar topics to others. After replacing model sentences and memorize the expressions you have learned, you will practice them with your pairs in the Break Out Room. Next, rewrite the model sentences using the memorized expressions and present them in the Break Out Room. I will confirm what you have learned by asking some of you at the beginning of the next week's lecture. The number of short sentences to be memorized each time is about 6.

After two sessions on a single topic, the students will submit a piece of writing about themselves in Hoppii as an assignment. Read the Feedback you receive carefully, memorize the document, and present it to your peers.

Every week begins with a review of the previous week. Students will practice in pairs using the Break Out Room, so they are expected to prepare well and actively participate in class. Students are required to understand the model sentences and their Japanese translations well in advance of each class. For post-lesson study, students are expected to check about 6 short sentences memorized in the lecture and memorize them perfectly by the next lecture. Confirmation will be done in the next class. The estimated study time is about 60 minutes for each class.

[Outline and objectives]

This course explores the modern and contemporary history of Japan with a focus on its foreign relations. We examine the interrelated history of Japan with China, Korea, Ryukyu, Southeast Asia, and the Western world from the Seventeenth century to the 1910s.

[Goal]

To enrich participants view of the modern and contemporary history of Japan by providing an outline and a framework to better understand the events that shaped the modern and contemporary history of Japan.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

[Method(s)]

The style of each class of this course consists of the instructor's lecture and an open-ended discussion. In the first part of the lesson, I will give a lecture on a given subject, and in the second, we will discuss a paper, which the students are required to read in advance. Comments for assignments are given during office hours.

Japanese Social Problems

David Slater

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 金 3/Fri.3

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

We will draw on a "social constructionist" framework and examine how certain social problems have been discovered, defined, and dealt with in post-war Japan. We begin the course by providing an overview of sociological approaches, in particular, a social constructionist approach to social problems, and critically examining Nihonjin-ron (theories of Japanese-ness) to provide frameworks for approaching Japanese social problems. We will then discuss specific Japanese social problems around the family, education, youth, gender, work, and aging Japan.

The aim of this course is to take critical perspectives into representations of Japanese social problems, particularly in the media, through taking a constructionist approach.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will be able to explain the "social constructionist" framework and apply it for making sense of Japanese social problems in post-war Japan. It is expected that students will develop a nuanced understanding of contemporary Japanese society through critically examining the social problems from sociological/ anthropological perspectives.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

[Method(s)]

Classes will primarily be based on discussions rather than lectures. It is therefore expected that students come to class having done the assigned reading and ready to discuss them. There will be some reading or thinking notes due for each class to aid students in class discussion and their final assignment. Every student will make a presentation or write a paper on a chosen topic. Feedback will be given on the Learning Management System for assignments submitted on the Learning Management System, and in class for work done in class (e.g. presentations).

Global and Transnational Japan

Kei TAKATA

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 水 3/Wed.3

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

This course looks at Japanese society through the lens of globalization and its transnational relations with foreigners and foreign societies. On the one hand, Japan's relative geographical isolation as an archipelago surrounded by the sea has cultivated a unique aesthetic culture that attracts people across the world in recent times, as well as being one of the driving forces behind its economic development. Yet, at the same time, this could also be a critical factor in generating a peculiar social system and norms that sometimes generate a considerable gap with the "global standards." Hence, in theory, the global process would be an agency that shapes, reshapes, and alters the social structure in both positive and negative ways. As such, how does globalization - the closer integration of the countries and peoples of the world, especially after the 1980s - affect the change in contemporary Japanese society? The course will explore this question through reading and discussing the effect of transnationalism - both inbound/import and outbound/export - on migration, work, civil society, tourism, education, family, culture, identity, language, Olympics, among others. The course also introduces theoretical approaches to understand globalization and transnationalism.

[Goal]

The primary goal of this class is to gain an alternative understanding of Japanese society that could not be seen only observing from the perspective of the nation-state. Taking the transnational and relational approach would then provide us with insights into why and how Japan is changing in this contemporary era. Students are expected to gain skills and knowledge to critically analyze Japanese globalization through a comparative approach with other countries from East Asia, North America, Europe, among other regions that you are familiar with.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

[Method(s)]

The course follows a mixed lecture-seminar format, combining short lectures, discussions, and group work designed for ESOP students at Hosei. In the class, followed by the instructor's lecture, participants are expected to discuss the topics through a critical reading of the assigned materials. There will be a group project to work on, and we will allocate time to discuss the project with your group members. Each group will make a short presentation on the final week of the class, and students will write a final assignment individually based on the findings from the group work.

The instructor will provide feedback on the presentations during the class. Students can also access the instructor during office hours (prior appointment needed).

Journalism in Japan I

Robert SAKAI-IRVINE

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 金 5/Fri.5

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

This course asks you to think about and discuss the principle of press freedom through its expression here in Japan. Over the 14 weeks of the course, you will delve into the Japanese free press' sometimes troubled history and present reality, while grappling with questions that go to the heart of not just journalism, but to definitions of the "public good" and the health of democratic systems. For example: Is state control of the news media ever justified? Looking at real-world situations for context, your own responses to that question may surprise you. Like any good journalist, be curious and critical.

[Goal]

Using historical and present-day case studies, you will examine what press freedom actually means in practice, and the different ways it can be restricted. For example, does keeping secrets and imposing penalties for reporting them count as limiting press freedom? You will do this by:

- examining the early days of print news in Japan, and the dark days of the descent into war;
- discussing types of information control, and present-day law and attitudes to official secrecy;
- questioning, through actual examples, whether there are any ethical limits to freedom of the press and expression;
- comparing coverage of the same issues in different publications;
- a midterm essay and end-of-term team debate on a question related to press freedom or freedom of speech;
- and talking about how news is covered from day to day, through class analysis of at least one real-time news article per week (of your choosing).

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

[Method(s)]

In Class

Each class will start with a discussion on one or two articles (chosen by you the student) from the previous week, focussing not just on the content of the news but on how it is presented and why.

We will then move on to the topic of the day, starting the class discussion with points from that week's readings and treating each as a case study, and attempt to draw conclusions about the role and responsibility of journalism in each situation.

This is a heavily discussion-based course (as is reflected in the grading structure), and you will get feedback on your comments from the instructor in real time. While participation is necessary, quality of contribution is more important than volume; well thought-out ideas are appreciated, and will be acknowledged in class.

After Class

By the end of the Monday after each class, students will post their personal thoughts on the topic discussed in the course discussion forum on Hoppii, and comment on at least one other student's reflections, to keep the discussion fresh and moving forward. The instructor will also read and comment on the students' posts.

Final Paper and Presentation

The final project is a research paper (approx. 3,000 words) plus presentation to the class on a major issue of journalism, information literacy or freedom of expression. For the presentation, the instructor will be looking at the quality of the argument, strong evidence, and the student's ability to answer questions on their topic. The instructor will provide topic suggestions on request.

Other Written Work

The instructor will provide feedback on written work in the form of extensive comments and constructive criticism, as well as a number grade.

[Outline and objectives]

News plays a significant role in forming what we all think we know about the world. Through the lens of print news here in Japan, This course asks students to question and discuss the ethics of reporting, tackling issues including anonymous sourcing, privacy vs. public interest, and cozying up to information sources. Hopefully, you will never look at news articles the same way again.

NOTE: You may enroll in this course without having taken Journalism in Japan I.

[Goal]

To achieve the above, you will explore the ins and outs of news reporting by:

- exploring how print news media operates in Japan, especially the big national dailies;
- learning the basics of writing articles and penning a few of your own, from a simple crime story to a major news feature;
- looking at real-world examples from both the past and more recent times, and discussing ethical problems and solutions for each case with classmates and the instructor;
- and choosing real-time news stories to dissect in class, asking the basic but important questions: What happened? And is it news?

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

[Method(s)]

In Class

Each class will start with a discussion on one or two articles (chosen by you the student) from the previous week, focussing not just on the content of the news but on how it is presented and why.

We will then move on to the topic of the day, starting the class discussion with points from that week's readings and treating each as a case study, and attempt to draw conclusions about what it means to behave as an ethical journalist, editor or publication in each situation.

This is a heavily discussion-based course (as is reflected in the grading structure), and you will get feedback on your comments from the instructor in real time. While participation is necessary, quality of contribution is more important than volume; well thought-out ideas are appreciated, and will be acknowledged in class.

Articles

The bulk of the written work for this course is made up of three news articles the students will have to write based on provided information and, for the last two, their own research. The articles will rise in complexity from a basic news report to a news feature on a major social issue. The instructor will be looking for structure, efficient presentation of information, and adherence to newswriting ethics such as source accreditation.

Other Written Work

The instructor will provide feedback on written work in the form of extensive comments and constructive criticism, as well as a number grade (where applicable).

Media Representations

Müge IGARASHI

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 月 3/Mon.3

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

When you follow media outlets from different countries, you will notice that very similar events or concepts can be elaborated upon in very different ways. Some issues that are covered widely and positively in one country could be ignored or covered negatively in mainstream media of other countries.

This is because societies have dominant ideologies that are formulated through institutions of power and diffused through mainstream media outlets.

Consequently, we are subject to stereotypical media representations formulated by the dominant culture and ideology that we live in.

Repetitive and stereotypical media representations have a significant impact on how we think about ourselves and "others" even if we do not always realize or question these.

Lectures throughout the semester will combine theories from cultural studies, media studies, and gender studies to analyze stereotypical representations in mainstream media outlets of Japan. Through this class, students will gain academic skills to identify stereotypical media representations and to question or challenge these with a critical perspective.

[Goal]

Each class will be focused on media chosen by students and theoretical introduction from either cultural studies, media studies or gender studies to analyze the media.

The analysis of various media will allow class discussion on mainstream ideas, what is over represented and what is under represented in the media and why.

At the end of the semester, students will be equipped with enough knowledge to identify the discourse formulated by power institutions that sustain dynamics of how minority groups and disadvantaged groups are portrayed in mainstream media. Although difficult to find, sharing positive representations of minority cultures and subcultures in the media are encouraged.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

[Method(s)]

Students are required to participate in class discussion and share their views and ideas with their classmates while respecting different views and cultures. All students are required to actively participate in discussion throughout the semester.

General feedback will be provided at each class whereas individual feedback on weekly homework will be provided through Google Classroom system.

There will be two discussion sessions throughout the semester during which students will have the opportunity to work in small groups and discuss theories learned in class before the mid term exam as well as the final exam.

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 火 3/Tue.3

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

The last decades of the 20th century witnessed a great shift in the landscape of East Asian media and popular culture. Border-crossing visual cultural flows in conjunction with trans-Asian co-production among East Asian countries have not only strengthened the imaginary bond of "Asia," but also have cultivated a wider pan-Asian identity. This course will engage the interdisciplinary field of visual media and popular culture studies of East Asia. In this course, students will learn about the trans-Asian flow of Hong Kong films since the 1950s, the dissemination of Japanese popular culture during the 1970s-90s, and the recent popularity of Korean Wave.

[Goal]

Students will also develop an understanding of the processes that enabled Asian entertainers to become part of the larger Western media flows. Students will develop a critical awareness of how visual media and cultural globalization has engaged with the East Asian region and how the local visual media flow has influenced the global.

By the end of the course, students will be able to

- understand the historical development of visual media flows within East Asia
- learn through examples of East Asian visual media flows how culture and socio-political forces help shape hybridized trans-national identities
- cultivate a better understanding how East Asian visual cultural flows border cross and interact with globalization

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

In the "Hospitality in Practice" session, a role play was included to learn how to handle complaints as part of the hospitality communication. However, it seemed that the Japanese-style procedure did not fit for many of the international students. Therefore, in the next year's program, I would like to incorporate elements of complaint handling from a global perspective while encouraging students to understand the characteristics of Japanese communication styles.
