Academic Writing Skills I(Class 3)

Mark Birtles

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 金 1/Fri.1

Notes : Not Available for ESOP Students.

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

Academic Writing Skills I introduces the formal structures and styles of academic writing. The course focuses on two primary areas. The first is essay organization: we will examine the fundamentals of outlining and structuring essays as well as practice writing a variety of essay forms. The second is academic language: we will study the specific vocabulary, conventions, and styles of writing particular to university research. Additionally, this course will build confidence and competence in writing more generally, preparing you for Academic Writing Skills II, in which you will write a formal research paper.

The related activities and tasks are completed mainly through such communicative approaches as presentation and discussion in order to facilitate students' thorough engagement in active communication in English. This will cultivate their listening and speaking skills in the target language as well as those of reading and writing.

【Goal】

This course aims to build competence in the following areas:

1. Organizing a variety of essay styles clearly and logically
2. Using academic vocabulary and styles of prose effectively
3. Citing and referencing sources correctly
4. Proofreading, editing, and revising multiple essay drafts

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1" and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

Each class consists of two basic parts: one is a short exercise building fundamental aspects of academic writing, such as vocabulary, sentence structure, or style; the second is longer, including a discussion on the week's lesson and exercises to illustrate its central components. Often we will work together on exercises, both in small groups and as a class. We will also share and edit each other's writing, so students should be prepared for both giving and receiving constructive feedback on assignments.

Instructors will provide general feedback in class, and students will receive written feedback on submitted assignments.

[Outline and objectives]

Academic Writing Skills IA provides an overview of academic writing with a focus on understanding the writing process. In particular, this course focuses on the comprehension of foundational principles of writing that are helpful in developing academic papers. The related activities and tasks are completed through various interactive approaches in order to facilitate students' thorough engagement in active communication in English. This will cultivate their reading, listening, and speaking skills in the target language as well as those of writing.

[Goal]

By the end of this course, students will be able to (1) describe the general steps to write academic papers, (2) explain specific techniques and strategies used in the process of developing papers, (3) apply what they learned to academic writing in other university-level courses, and (4) build confidence and competence in academic writing more generally, preparing them for Academic Writing Skills II.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1" and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Each class consists of two main parts: one is a short interactive lecture on writing concepts, such as paraphrasing, thesis statement, or paper outline; the second is longer, including a discussion on the week's lesson and exercises to illustrate its central components ("now you try"). A variety of active learning techniques, such as in-class writing exercises, neighbor/class discussions, and comment sheets, are used to accommodate diverse student learning styles. Often we will work together on exercises, both in small groups and as a class. Verbal and written feedback on assignments is given during class discussions and through using other tools as appropriate. Also, a quick recapitulation of the previous class is given at the beginning of each class in order to reinforce students' understanding of the connections between lessons.

[Outline and objectives]

Academic Writing Skills II builds on the skills learned in Academic Writing Skills I and applies them to the organization and writing of a major research paper (in either the humanities or social sciences). Students are expected to take responsibility in choosing a theme and thoroughly researching it for the final paper, no less than 2500 words, excluding a bibliography (Times New Roman, 12-pt.font, double spaced [10 pages]). Course content includes essay organization, research strategies (collecting and evaluating references, conducting web searches, using electronic databases), bibliographic organization, and citation styles: footnotes, endnotes, or in-text forms of MLA and APA.

The related activities and tasks are completed mainly through such communicative approaches as presentation and discussion in order to facilitate students' thorough engagement in active communication in English. This will cultivate their listening and speaking skills in the target language as well as those of reading and writing.

[Goal]

This course aims to build competence in the following areas:

1. Planning and organizing a major research paper
2. Choosing, evaluating, and using academic sources
3. Building on previous research in developing an original research contribution
4. Proofreading, editing, and revising research papers

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1" and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Each class consists of a short lecture or demonstration of academic writing principles and a number of writing or editing exercises. Often we will work together on exercises, both in small groups and as a class. We will also share and edit each other's writing, so students should be prepared for both giving and receiving constructive feedback on assignments.

Instructors will provide general feedback in class, and students will receive written feedback on submitted assignments.

[Outline and objectives]

Academic Writing Skills II builds on the skills learned in Academic Writing Skills I and applies them to the organization and writing of a major research paper (in either the humanities or social sciences). Students are expected to take responsibility in choosing a theme and thoroughly researching it for the final paper, no less than 2500 words, excluding a bibliography (Times New Roman, 12-pt.font, double spaced [10 pages]). Course content includes essay organization, research strategies (collecting and evaluating references, conducting web searches, using electronic databases), bibliographic organization, and citation styles: footnotes, endnotes, or in-text forms of MLA and APA.

The related activities and tasks are completed mainly through such communicative approaches as presentation and discussion in order to facilitate students' thorough engagement in active communication in English. This will cultivate their listening and speaking skills in the target language as well as those of reading and writing.

[Goal]

This course aims to build competence in the following areas:

1. Planning and organizing a major research paper
2. Choosing, evaluating, and using academic sources
3. Building on previous research in developing an original research contribution
4. Proofreading, editing, and revising research papers

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1" and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Each class consists of a short lecture or demonstration of academic writing principles and a number of writing or editing exercises. Often we will work together on exercises, both in small groups and as a class. We will also share and edit each other's writing, so students should be prepared for both giving and receiving constructive feedback on assignments.

Instructors will provide general feedback in class, and students will receive written feedback on submitted assignments.

【Outline and objectives】

This course reinforces the basic reading skills and strategies that are needed for academic success at the university level, and moves up through critical reading of more advanced texts toward the reading and understanding of academic papers.

These objectives are achieved via the use of such communicative methods as discussion and presentation in pairs, groups and at class level. This will ensure students actively communicate in English, helping them to enhance skills in listening and speaking as well as in reading and writing.

【Goal】

To improve students' reading speed and accuracy, enhancing their critical thinking skills, and exposing them to academic material, in order to prepare them for the department's demanding course of study.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

Through the textbook and its academic reading selections and exercises, students will explore real-world issues, discuss academic topics, read and study content-based and thematic materials; interact in pair work, small group work, and whole class activities that present opportunities for real-world use of language; acquire tools that promote the critical thinking skills crucial to success in the academic world; expand their vocabulary; and gain familiarity with the ingredients of widely used tests of English proficiency. This will occupy the first half of the course. During the second half, students will be introduced via more demanding material intended for non-specialists to a topic of academic concern, and then shown how best to approach and digest an academic paper on this topic.

Students will receive written and spoken feedback in class for both homework and exams that address areas needing improvement.

【Outline and objectives】

This course reinforces the basic reading skills and strategies that are needed for academic success at the university level, and moves up through critical reading of more advanced texts toward the reading and understanding of academic papers.

These objectives are achieved via the use of such communicative methods as discussion and presentation in pairs, groups and at class level. This will ensure students actively communicate in English, helping them to enhance skills in listening and speaking as well as in reading and writing.

【Goal】

To improve students' reading speed and accuracy, enhancing their critical thinking skills, and exposing them to academic material, in order to prepare them for the department's demanding course of study.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

Through the textbook and its academic reading selections and exercises, students will explore real-world issues, discuss academic topics, read and study content-based and thematic materials; interact in pair work, small group work, and whole class activities that present opportunities for real-world use of language; acquire tools that promote the critical thinking skills crucial to success in the academic world; expand their vocabulary; and gain familiarity with the ingredients of widely used tests of English proficiency. This will occupy the first half of the course. During the second half, students will be introduced via more demanding material intended for non-specialists to a topic of academic concern, and then shown how best to approach and digest an academic paper on this topic.

Students will receive written and spoken feedback in class for both homework and exams that address areas needing improvement.

*Class 1 (Professor Evans) will be held online.

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed to equip students with the essential skills needed to engage and persuade audiences through presentations and public speaking. Students will embark on a journey to develop their communication abilities, enhance self-confidence, and acquire the tools necessary for clear, engaging, and impactful public speaking. Using hands-on practice supplemented by communication theory, students will learn how to structure compelling speeches, deliver them with poise, and captivate their audience. This course is taken in conjunction with Presentation and Public Speaking 1B.

[Goal]

Upon completing this course, students will have gained: (1) hands-on presentation delivery skills, (2) skills in creating effective and clear presentation visuals, (3) skills in creating a presentation based on an engaging narrative, (4) skills in translating written research into communicable information.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1” and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course is primarily a practical skill-based course. Feedback will be provided by the instructor either in person or via Hoppii. Students will be responsible for actively participating in classroom activities, preparing and presenting their presentations, and reviewing the course material outside of class.

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed to help students develop foundational skills required for informed, persuasive, and analytical communication. Whether students aspire to excel in academic debates, engage in constructive discussions, or make sound decisions in their personal and professional lives, this course will empower them to think critically, communicate effectively, and engage in structured debates. This course is taken in conjunction with Presentation and Public Speaking 1A.

[Goal]

Upon completing this course, students will have gained: (1) critical thinking skills, (2) skills in constructing effective and persuasive arguments, (3) enhanced communication skills, (4) an understanding of debate structures, (5) research skills in collecting, selecting, and interpreting source material.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1" and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course is primarily a practical skill-based course. Feedback will be provided by the instructor either in person or via Hoppii. Students will be responsible for actively participating in classroom activities, including in-class debates, activities, and discussions.

[Outline and objectives]

Being able to take command of a room and speak confidently in front of other people is a vital skill, but one many people have difficulty with. The primary aim of this course is to build confidence and competence in public speaking, with the main focus on the preparation and delivery of two kinds of speech: informative and persuasive. This course will not only have relevance in an academic sense, but the skills learned can also be applied in both business and social settings.

[Goal]

Upon completing this course, students will have gained:

- ・ Competency in identifying and analysing basic communication theory
- ・ The ability to put this theory into practice
- ・ Confidence in presentation and public speaking on a variety of topics
- ・ Key skills in both verbal and non-verbal aspects of public speaking
- ・ The ability to be an active listener and ask meaningful questions.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 2” and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Although there is some theoretical analysis, Presentation and Public Speaking is primarily a practical, skills-based course, with students producing meaningful class content. Submission of assignments and feedback will either be in-person or via the Learning Management System. Students will prepare and deliver speeches and learn essential skills along the way: how to select, organize and use materials to support an idea, delivery techniques, and how to effectively utilise multimedia tools in presentations.

【Outline and objectives】

Being able to take command of a room and speak confidently in front of other people is a vital skill, but one many people have difficulty with. The primary aim of this course is to build confidence and competence in public speaking, with the main focus on the preparation and delivery of two kinds of speech: informative and persuasive. This course will not only have relevance in an academic sense, but the skills learned can also be applied in both business and social settings.

【Goal】

Upon completing this course, students will have gained:

- ・ Competency in identifying and analysing basic communication theory
- ・ The ability to put this theory into practice
- ・ Confidence in presentation and public speaking on a variety of topics
- ・ Key skills in both verbal and non-verbal aspects of public speaking
- ・ The ability to be an active listener and ask meaningful questions.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 2” and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Although there is some theoretical analysis, Presentation and Public Speaking is primarily a practical, skills-based course, with students producing meaningful class content. Submission of assignments and feedback will either be in-person or via the Learning Management System. Students will prepare and deliver speeches and learn essential skills along the way: how to select, organize and use materials to support an idea, delivery techniques, and how to effectively utilise multimedia tools in presentations.

【Outline and objectives】

English Test Preparation for IELTS is designed to teach language skills, effective test-taking techniques, and strategies for the IELTS examination.

【Goal】

This course is designed for students who are interested in improving their English test scores or who want to study in the United Kingdom, Australia or New Zealand in the future. Its purpose is to help you attain advanced command of English, which shall be reflected in your IELTS test scores.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】
Will be able to gain “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Students will learn effective strategies for increasing scores in each section of the IELTS through class discussion and exercises throughout the course. These include becoming familiar with the test format, understanding question types, and learning how to expand speaking and writing responses. Personal advice on methods of individual study (which is strongly recommended) will be given as required. As this is a skills-based course, emphasis will be placed on practical skills rather than class lectures. To this end, students will also participate in regular vocabulary and idiom quizzes, as peer review activities. Feedback on coursework will be given during class.

Introduction to Statistics

Adam Randall Smith

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1~4

Day/Period : 木1/Thu.1

Notes : Not Available for ESOP Students.

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course introduces students to fundamental statistical concepts and methods used in data analysis. Students will learn how to organize, summarize, and interpret data using statistical techniques. The course covers descriptive and inferential statistics, including probability, hypothesis testing, and correlation. The focus is on real-world applications in a variety of disciplines, preparing students to use statistical reasoning in decision-making and research.

[Goal]

By the end of this course, students should be able to:

1. Understand and apply descriptive statistics, including measures of central tendency and variability.
2. Interpret data visualizations such as histograms, scatter plots, and bar graphs.
3. Conduct basic inferential statistical tests, including t-tests and regression analysis.
4. Use probability concepts to make informed decisions.
5. Differentiate between population vs. sample and understand the significance of sample distributions.
6. Apply statistical reasoning in various fields, including business, social sciences, and health sciences.
7. Gain familiarity with statistical processing software, especially Microsoft Excel, R, and ChatGPT.
8. Enjoy statistics; if you can truly understand basic statistics, you will see the world in a new and beautiful way!

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course uses a lecture-based approach combined with interactive problem-solving activities. Students will engage in real-world examples, in-class exercises, and discussions. The use of statistical software and spreadsheets will be introduced but a full understanding of these programs is not required (i.e., you will only be taught as much as is necessary for each topic). Homework assignments reinforce concepts covered in class, and students are encouraged to actively participate and ask questions.

No.	Theme	Contents
1	Introduction to Statistics & Course Overview	What is statistics? Why does it matter? Overview of course structure, grading, and key concepts. Basic introduction to data types.
2	Descriptive Statistics (1)	Understanding measures of central tendency (mean, median, mode) and their significance. Data visualization techniques (histograms, box plots).
3	Descriptive Statistics (2) & Variability	Understanding variability: range, interquartile range (IQR), variance, and standard deviation. The importance of data spread.
4	Correlation & Scatter Plots	Understanding relationships between two variables. How to interpret scatter plots and calculate correlation coefficients.
5	Population vs. Sample & Probability Basics	Introduction to probability concepts. Understanding populations, samples, and the importance of representative sampling.
6	Probability Distributions & Z-scores	Normal distribution, standardization, and Z-scores. How to compare individual scores to a population.

7	Hypothesis Testing: Concepts & Framework	Understanding null vs. alternative hypotheses, Type I & Type II errors, and p-values. Interpreting statistical significance.
8	Midterm Exam (In-Class)	Assessment covering descriptive statistics, probability, correlation, and hypothesis testing. Designed to gauge progress before moving into inferential statistics.
9	T-tests (1): Understanding Mean Comparisons	When and why we use t-tests. Introduction to one-sample and independent-samples t-tests.
10	T-tests (2): Paired Samples & Applications	Understanding paired t-tests and how they apply to repeated measures. Practical examples and real-world applications.
11	Regression Analysis (1): Understanding Relationships	Introduction to simple linear regression. How to interpret regression equations and coefficients.
12	Regression Analysis (2): Multiple Regression & Predictions	Expanding to multiple predictors. Interpreting R-squared, coefficients, and making data-driven predictions.
13	Common Statistical Misconceptions & Real-World Applications	Exploring how statistics are misused in media, politics, and research. Common pitfalls in data interpretation and how to spot misleading statistics.
14	Preparing for the Final Exam	Review of key topics. Practice problems, common mistakes, and strategies for success on the Final Exam. Q&A session.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students are expected to complete weekly homework assignments that reinforce key concepts covered in class. These assignments will involve problem-solving, data analysis, and interpretation of statistical results. Additionally, students are encouraged to review their lecture notes and handouts after each class.

Students should expect to spend at least 2 hours per week on assignments, reviewing concepts, and practicing problems outside of class.

Regular practice is essential for developing a solid understanding of statistical methods and their applications.

[Textbooks]

No textbook will be used. Handouts and reading materials will be provided by lecturer.

[References]

References will be introduced in class.

[Grading criteria]

Students will be evaluated on the basis of active participation and assignments given in each class (40%). There will also be two exams, a Midterm Exam (30%) and Final Exam (30%). The purpose of the Midterm Exam is to assure you are learning at a suitable pace, and identify any potential learning problems early.

No credit will be given to students with more than two unexcused absences.

[Changes following student comments]

Not applicable

[Others]

This course is strongly recommended for students interested in various disciplines in the social sciences. It will be particularly useful for students intending to conduct their own research as part of a seminar, psychology courses, or related fields.

Additionally, students will be encouraged to use AI tools such as ChatGPT and statistical software to enhance their learning. AI can assist with data visualization, summarizing concepts, and generating study resources. However, its use should remain supplementary—not a replacement for critical thinking and problem-solving.

Rules regarding AI use:

1. AI-generated responses must be fact-checked and not used blindly.
2. AI tools may not be used during exams.
3. If AI is used, students must cite AI contributions in assignments (e.g., "ChatGPT was used for initial topic brainstorming").

By engaging critically with both statistical methods and modern tools such as AI, students will develop a deeper understanding of data analysis and research design while strengthening their ability to navigate technological advancements in the field.

Final note: I am an Assistant Professor of Psychology at ICU; I typically teach over 150 students in my Introductory Statistics Courses. Therefore, I am very much looking forward to teaching a smaller group of students at Hosei! Either way, please feel free to reach out to me any time.

[Outline and objectives]

In this course, students learn basic concepts and skills of statistical methods and data analysis.

[Goal]

The objective of this course is twofold. First, students learn basic concepts in statistics (e.g., mean, standard deviation, normal distribution, t-test and regression analysis). Second, practical skills for visualizing data and conducting appropriate statistical tests are introduced and students practice them using statistical software.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This is an introductory course on statistical methods and data analysis. It explains the basic ideas behind statistical testing and covers various statistical methods for survey and experimental data. Each class combines a lecture with hands-on exercises (free statistical software are used). In addition, an assignment is given after every class. At the beginning of class, feedback for the previous class is given using some comments from submitted assignments. Students are encouraged to ask questions and to be actively involved in the class.

【Outline and objectives】

Communication is one of the key skills employers look for in potential employees. The rapid diversification of global communications and the collapse of traditional professional working practices in the first two decades of the twenty-first century have made these skills even more salient; modern employers increasingly demand transferrable skills, interdisciplinary knowledge and an ability to address a diverse audience. At their very heart, these competencies are enhanced by an ability to understand, construct and manipulate written information in order to use them in a variety of situations.

【Goal】

Graduates with a good command of English are likely to end up in the global job market, so this course aims at giving students a competitive edge when embarking upon their chosen career path. This course will help students prepare for the English-language job hunting process and provide an overview of the key professional communication styles, as well as a chance to see how these have a real application in the professional world.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 2” and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The first half of the course will look at the English-language job hunting process, from analysing a job advertisement to creating a CV (résumé) and cover letter. Students will learn how to make their application documents stand out from the crowd and then participate in a mock interview for the job. These documents and skills can be used in a real-life job, or internship, application. The second half of the course then aims to build familiarity in some of the key forms of professional communication, such as press releases, emails and business documents. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

[Outline and objectives]

The purpose of this course is to familiarize students with contemporary Australian society. With Australia as a case study, we also understand the diversity of cultures around the world and the significance of enhancing communication with people from other cultural backgrounds.

[Goal]

The course will examine key social issues such as reconciliation, immigration and Australia's cultural links to Europe, the United States and Asia. The course will also present an overview of Australian history in order to provide context for present-day cultural concerns.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Weekly lectures will focus on different aspects of Australian culture and will be followed by classroom discussion. Students are expected to participate in these discussions and share their thoughts on the material with the rest of the class. They are also required to give a class presentation based on their own research. Finally, students will write an essay to be turned in during the final class.

On completion of the course, students will have an understanding of the issues facing contemporary Australia, as well as an insight into its past. Students can also expect to improve critical thinking and presentation skills.

Comments on activities will be given in class. Submission of assignments and feedback will be on the Learning Management System.

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The classes will consist of lectures and interactive presentations by students. Time will also be given for students to work on projects using computers in the classroom and to obtain personal guidance.

- (1) For student presentations, feedback will be given after each presentation.
- (2) For responses to the general quiz near the end of the semester, feedback will be given in the final class.

ART100ZA (芸術学 / Art studies 100)			2	Gesture drawing	This class emphasizes capturing the energy and movement of a subject through quick, expressive sketches. Students will explore gesture drawing as a way to convey the essence and action of a scene. Practical Exercise: Using a variety of live models or reference images to create a series of quick gesture drawings, focusing on capturing the overall movement and flow of the subjects.

【Outline and objectives】			3	Shapes and forms/ light and shadow	Building on the foundations of Weeks 1 and 2, this class delves into the use of shapes and forms in drawing. Students will experiment with geometric and organic shapes, under various lighting conditions, understanding how they contribute to creating a sense of volume and three-dimensionality. Practical Exercise: Drawing a still life with a strong light source
In this course, students will develop their knowledge of fine art actively by exploring the fundamental principles of drawing. The course is structured to provide a comprehensive overview of various drawing techniques, materials, and concepts, catering to individuals with diverse backgrounds and interests.
The outline of the course encompasses a progression from basic line drawing to more complex compositions, through reference to contemporary and art historical examples and live demonstrations, encouraging students to develop their observational skills and artistic intuition. Through guided practice, discussions, hands-on exercises and engaging projects, participants will gain a solid foundation in drawing while fostering their personal expression and visual communication abilities.			4	Tools of mark making	This session encourages students to experiment with a variety of drawing tools and mark-making techniques to describe forms, express emotions and convey a sense of energy and movement in their drawings. Practical Exercise: Choose a subject that evokes a specific emotion and create a drawing using expressive marks to capture the mood and atmosphere.
【Goal】			5	Understanding proportions and scale	This week focuses on honing observational skills by exploring proportions and scale in drawing. Students will engage in exercises aimed at accurately representing the relationships between objects and their sizes in a composition. Practical Exercise: Self-portrait
The primary goal of this introductory course is to provide a comprehensive foundation in drawing skills, working toward both technical proficiency and individual expression. Throughout the course, students will engage in a series of progressively challenging exercises and projects aimed at developing their observational abilities, understanding of composition, and creative mark-making techniques. A key focal point of the course is the cultivation of a personal portfolio, wherein students will compile a selection of their best works across various themes and techniques explored during the semester, and have an opportunity to benefit from a discussion/critique with their peers on the work. The ultimate objective is for students to present a cohesive and compelling portfolio that reflects their artistic growth, visual literacy, and the application of learned concepts, showcasing the diverse ways in which drawing can be a powerful tool for communication and self-expression.			6	Introduction to perspective drawing	Students will delve into the basics of linear perspective, learning how to create depth and space in their drawings. This class introduces one-point, two-point, and unconventional perspective techniques. Practical Exercise: Construct a simple interior or exterior scene using one-point or two-point perspective, applying the principles learned in class.
【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】			7	Exploring texture and detail	This session emphasizes the importance of texture in drawing and introduces techniques for capturing fine details. Students will explore various mark-making methods to convey different textures realistically. Practical Exercise: Choose an object with interesting textures (e.g., fabric, tree bark, or a feather) and create a detailed drawing, focusing on the texture and surface qualities.
Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.			8	Creative composition	This class focuses on the principles of composition in drawing, including balance, harmony, and focal points. Students will explore how these elements contribute to the overall visual impact of their work. Practical Exercise: Compose a drawing using found objects, arranging them in a visually interesting way, and paying attention to the overall balance and flow of the composition.
【Method(s)】
Classes will begin with a brief lecture, slideshow, or screening introducing the week's topic, with reference to artists and/or artistic traditions. This will be followed by a guided practical activity, involving an extended focus on a given subject.
Students will be expected to keep a sketchbook and journal, and weekly drawing/writing assignments completed outside of class will form an important part of the structure of the course.
Students will receive critical feedback on their work in the form of in class critiques, group discussions, and grades or written comments on assignments submitted online.

1	Introduction to drawing	This session provides an overview of the course, introducing basic drawing materials and techniques. Students will engage in simple line exercises to familiarize themselves with the act of mark-making and begin developing hand-eye coordination. Practical Exercise: Creating a series of contour drawings focusing on everyday objects, emphasizing the importance of observation and the relationship between eye and hand.

9	Negative space and figure-ground relationship	Students will explore the concept of negative space and how it contributes to the overall composition. This class also introduces the figure-ground relationship and its importance in creating dynamic and visually engaging drawings. Practical Exercise: Create a drawing that emphasizes the negative space, incorporating both positive and negative shapes to define the subject matter.
10	Color in drawing	Introducing color into the drawing process, this class explores the use of various drawing media to add vibrancy and dimension to artwork. Practical Exercise: Experiment with colored pencils, pastels, gouache, or watercolor to add color to a previously created drawing, exploring the effects and possibilities of each medium.
11	Portfolio preparation	Group discussions reviewing drawings produced so far.
12	Portfolio review	In class portfolio presentation and critique for all students. Individual presentations to the class.
13	Portfolio review	In class portfolio presentation and critique for all students. Individual presentations to the class.
14	Portfolio review/ interdisciplinary applications	Individual presentations and critiques continue, followed by a discussion and reflection on drawing as a mode of thought, and how it might be applied in situations outside the scope of fine arts.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

【Outline and objectives】

This course is aimed to help students understand how to use programming from basic to intermediate level as well as learn how to apply programming in business with the practice of multiple examples throughout the semester.

【Goal】

Students will 1) learn main components of programming, 2) use major programming patterns, 3) learn and practice knowledge a popular programming language Python, and 4) be prepared for the more advanced programming courses such as Big Data and Analytics and Database Utilization.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2” and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course will proceed with lecture, software practice and Q&A sessions. Students are required to review what they have learned every week so as to be prepared to take a mini test every week before the class starts.

At the beginning of every class, a brief review and feedback for the previous class will be given.

【Outline and objectives】

Today, computers and computer programs (software) are omnipresent in the world around us. This course is an introductory course on computer programming. Programming is a creative activity, and the course emphasizes hands-on computer programming. The course aims to familiarize students with fundamental programming concepts such as Variables, Strings, Arrays, Operators, Conditional Statements, Loops, Functions, and so on. The course also aims to apply these basic programming concepts to computer-based problem-solving methods.

【Goal】

By the end of the semester, students should: (i) understand fundamental programming concepts shared by most programming languages, (ii) be able to apply these concepts to a wide range of problem situations, and (iii) have gained an understanding of the popular Python programming language.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2” and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The main elements of the course are lectures, assignments, programming exercises, and in-class discussions. The lectures relate to the topics mentioned in the course schedule below. A class typically provides feedback and guidance on assignments. In addition, each class provides various programming exercises that allow students to engage actively, discuss, and practice current issues in computer programming.

【Outline and objectives】

The primary objective of this course is to provide students with a deep understanding of entrepreneurship, and careers in both Japanese global companies and foreign affiliated companies. The knowledge and insights based on the real-life experiences of GGLI Fellows will assist students in learning the necessary skills, strategies, and thought processes for success in today's business environment. This course covers everything from the fundamentals of starting a business to actual business case studies, with the aim of integrating theory with practice. Furthermore, the global perspectives offered by GGLI Fellows, who come from diverse cultural backgrounds, will deepen students' understanding of how to thrive in international markets. Through this course, students will learn about adapting business models in different markets, the importance of intercultural communication, and ways to demonstrate leadership in various business environments. Additionally, for students aspiring to pursue entrepreneurship or careers in the global arena, this course will also provide opportunities for contemplation on career paths through these experiences.

【Goal】

The key learning objectives to be achieved through this course are as follows:

1. Understanding Entrepreneurship: Students will understand the skills, strategies, and mindset required to be a successful entrepreneur and learn how to actualize their own ideas.
2. Adaptability in a Global Business Environment: Students will grasp the complexities of conducting business across cultures and acquire the knowledge and skills necessary for adapting business models in international markets.
3. Leadership and Problem-Solving Skills: Students will learn how to exhibit leadership and propose innovative solutions to complex problems in real business scenarios.
4. Discovering and Planning One's Career Path: Based on their strengths and interests, students will learn how to plan their career path as entrepreneurs or in Japanese global corporations and multinational companies, and take the first steps toward it.
5. Adapting to Real Business Environments: Students will learn how to respond to challenges in real business environments through actual business case studies.

Upon completing this course, students will have established a foundation for thriving in the modern business environment and will be able to take practical steps toward shaping their future careers.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

The teaching method of this course emphasizes a practical and interactive approach. GGLI Fellows will bridge the gap between theory and practice by sharing their own experiences and expertise. Through lectures and interactive discussions, students will have opportunities to analyze real business scenarios and develop problem-solving skills.

This course encourages active participation and self-expression from students, and has the aim of deepening their thinking and enhance their skills. Each week, following the lecture by a Fellow, the instructor will facilitate interaction between the Fellow and the students. By the end of the course, students will have acquired practical knowledge and confidence for success in a global business environment.

【Outline and objectives】

This course will provide an introduction to the culture and society of contemporary Britain. Students will acquire knowledge about Britain: its geography, climate, history, traditional culture, religion, political system, society, Britishness, and so on. The course will survey British society following globalization after Thatcher's government. Britain in the 70's was a nightmare, economically crippled, politically in a quagmire, and yet culturally vibrant. Thatcher, as prime minister (1979-1990), changed Britain drastically in the 80's. She insisted on free enterprise and deregulation, employed monetarist policies, privatized nationalized industries, passed legislations to weaken trade unions' political power, and was tenaciously skeptical about the deepening of European integration. However, socially, she was conservative and put an emphasis on the importance of traditional family, a self-help work ethic and community. Whether her policies worked well or not is still in discussion, but she is commonly thought to have prepared the way for globalisation, economic success, and the rise of so-called Cool Britannia. Political issues are often related to nation, religion, immigration, ethnicity, class, globalisation, gender, youth culture, and so on.

With UK as a case theme, we also understand the diversity of cultures around the world and the significance of enhancing communication with people from other cultural backgrounds.

【Goal】

Students will (1) acquire the general knowledge of the society and people in contemporary Britain, (2) learn how one of the most globalized nations has gone through the changes, and (3) think about the new realities and the implications of the changes. By comparing the situations in Britain and Japan, students will gain clearer perspectives on complex issues common in the most advanced and affluent countries.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

Students will attend lectures, read related materials, write short essays, watch videos and films, and have two written examinations.

Feedback will be given through Hoppii.

【Outline and objectives】

This course is designed for beginners (or more advanced students). The aim of this course is to help students acquire basic skills of communication. In our epoch of "globalization", knowledge of only one foreign language (for example, English) is far from sufficient.

By learning French, students will have more opportunities to work on the world stage.

【Goal】

The goal of this course is to develop basic daily communication skills:

asking for information, answering questions, speaking about oneself, and understanding simple texts.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 3”.

【Method(s)】

Mr.Okamura (French BI) and I will use the same textbook (see below) and conduct the class in relay. The students will learn all basic skills - speaking, listening, reading and writing although learning of practical skills takes precedence in this course. (Mr. Okamura will rather focus on learning the grammar. It is therefore required that the students attend both of the courses). Active participation is necessary not only for the acquisition of communicative skills through various means (e.g., role-playing), but for an understanding of French culture or that of other French-speaking countries.

The students will get information about the course by way of Learning Management System (LMS).

During the semester, the students are required to submit several assignments through LMS. They will get them back equally through LMS.

【Outline and objectives】

Basic Spanish grammar and conversation.

【Goal】

By the end of the semester, students should be able to write, speak, and understand basic Spanish, in the simple present and past tense.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 3”.

【Method(s)】

This course begins with the Spanish alphabet. Basic Spanish grammar will be explained during each weekly lesson. After an explanation of grammatical principles, students will be asked some practical questions. This class advances slowly. In order to prepare, students should do the review exercises at home and bring their textbook and a Spanish-Japanese dictionary to class (see below). To foster a deeper appreciation of Spanish and Latin American cultures, some Spanish songs and movies will be shared, time permitting.

The feedback for homework will be given through Hoppii Learning Assistant System.

[Outline and objectives]

Basic Spanish grammar and conversation.

[Goal]

By the end of the semester, students should be able to write, speak, and understand basic Spanish, in the simple present and past tense.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 3".

[Method(s)]

This course begins where "Spanish AI" and "Spanish BI" ended. Basic Spanish grammar will be explained during each weekly lesson. After an explanation of grammatical principles, students will be asked some practical questions. This class advances slowly. In order to prepare, students should do the review exercises at home and bring their textbook and a Spanish-Japanese dictionary to class (see below). To foster a deeper appreciation of Spanish and Latin American cultures, some Spanish songs and movies will be shared, time permitting. The feedback for homework will be given through Hoppii Learning Assistant System.

【Outline and objectives】

Over 2,000 years ago in ancient Greece, Socrates introduced a new mode of general and abstract inquiry, which he described as "the love of wisdom" or "philosophy." This course focuses on two areas of the history of philosophical inquiry in ancient Greece and early modern Europe: metaphysics and epistemology. Metaphysics deals with the first principles of being, causation, and identity. Metaphysical questions covered in this course include: What is most fundamental about reality? What does it mean for one thing to cause another thing to happen? What does it mean for something to be the same thing over time? Epistemology deals with the nature and possibility of knowledge. Questions surveyed include: What is knowledge? Do we know anything? If so, what do we know? Philosophers surveyed in this course include Plato, Aristotle, René Descartes, John Locke, George Berkeley, David Hume, and Immanuel Kant.

【Goal】

This course has four primary learning goals. First, students will learn about various and diverging views throughout the history of philosophy with a focus on metaphysics and epistemology. Second, students will improve critical thinking skills when engaging with abstract philosophical reasoning. Third, students will improve their reading skills when confronting nuanced and challenging text. Finally, students will improve their writing skills to communicate complex ideas clearly and confidently.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

Classes will sometimes begin with a short quiz to assess comprehension of weekly readings. Feedback for these will be provided at the beginning of the following class. There will be an interactive lecture for each class, except exam days. There will also be several breakout small-group discussions throughout the lecture. Each small-group discussion is followed by a class-wide discussion. The mid-term and final exams will be a combination of multiple-choice, short, and long-form essay questions. These exams will be written in class during exam days. Students will receive written feedback on their exams for the midterm. For the final exam, they will receive feedback via Hoppii.

Introduction to Ethics

【Outline and objectives】

We make decisions every day, but some decisions are better than others. This raises some important questions: Which decisions should we make? And more generally, what kind of life is worth living? Ethics is the rational inquiry into these questions. In this course, we will explore two central dimensions of ethics. First, we will consider the nature of well-being or what it means for one's life to go well. However, we not only care about our own well-being. We should also consider other people's interests. Therefore, the second main topic we will explore in this class will be morality. Morality is concerned with making the right decisions regarding the interests and lives of others.

【Goal】

This course has four primary learning goals. First, students will learn about various and diverging views on the philosophy of well-being and moral philosophy. Second, students will improve critical thinking skills when engaging with abstract reasoning in ethically challenging scenarios. Third, students will improve their reading skills when confronting nuanced and challenging text. Finally, students will improve their writing skills to communicate complex ideas clearly and confidently.

[Outline and objectives]

Philosophy tackles topics of fundamental interest and importance such as the nature of knowledge, the mind, and free will. This introductory philosophy course is designed to provide students with a comprehensive foundation in the fundamental concepts, questions, and methodologies of philosophy. Through critical thinking, analysis, and discussion, students will engage with some of the most enduring and thought-provoking questions ever posed by humans. The content of this course focuses on Western Philosophy.

[Goal]

This course has five primary learning goals. (1) Develop critical thinking skills: Learn to analyze and evaluate arguments, identify fallacies, and construct well-reasoned arguments. (2) Develop active reading skills: Acquire the ability to read nuanced and challenging texts effectively. (3) Enhance communication skills: Develop the ability to articulate complex philosophical ideas both verbally and in writing. (4) Explore philosophical traditions: Gain an understanding of major philosophical movements in Western Philosophy. (5) Investigate fundamental questions: Delve into classical philosophical questions such as the nature of reality, knowledge, and the mind.

[Outline and objectives]

The primary purpose of this course is to expose students to some of the major questions in the scholarly study of religion. What is religion? What do religious symbols mean? Why do religions exist? How should we account for the differences among religions? Can or should we make judgments about religions, especially given our own commitments and biases? How does or should religion relate to morality? What is the relation of religion to culture? The selected readings will provide an introduction to the many approaches found in the study of religion, and provide examples of the various theories that arise when considering the complexity of religious experience. We will further discuss the early development of religion, and provide overviews of major and minor religions from Islam to Shinto.

[Goal]

The course aims to:

1. promote an enquiring, critical and sympathetic approach to the study of religion.
2. introduce students to the challenging and varied nature of religion, and to the ways in which this is reflected in experience, belief and practice
3. help students to identify and explore questions about the meaning of life, and to consider such questions in relation to religious traditions

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Outline and objectives]

This course introduces basic topics/theories of developmental psychology, specifically focusing on how “typical” individuals develop from infancy to adolescence as well as sharing characteristics of individuals following “atypical” development. Students will also develop skills for analyzing social phenomena and reflecting their own personal experiences from the perspective of developmental psychology.

[Goal]

Through this course, students are expected to:

- understand how “typical” individuals develop from infancy to adolescence, in different aspects (cognitive and social/emotional)
- learn some fundamental theories proposed by developmental psychologists, such as Piaget and Bowlby
- acquire some knowledge about developmental disorders and childhood mental disorders, including autistic spectrum disorders, attention deficit and hyperactivity disorder (ADHD), learning disorders, Down's syndrome, etc.
- develop skills of analyzing social and personal experiences from perspectives of developmental psychology
- build abilities to apply what one learned in classrooms to understand real-world psychological phenomena
- increase skills for expressing ideas about human behavior in English, through oral discussions and reflection papers

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Each week, students will learn concepts/theories of developmental psychology through a lecture and an oral discussion. When sharing ideas during oral discussions, students are expected to integrate knowledge acquired through the lecture as well as their own insight from daily life experiences. At the end of each class, students are asked to write a brief reflection paper, which is graded and returned by the beginning of the next class, with a comment from the lecturer. In the reflection paper, students are also encouraged to ask questions, which are shared anonymously and answered in the next class. Exams are held in the middle and at the end of the semester.

Introduction to Psychology I

[Outline and objectives]

This is an introductory course in psychology. Students will learn the basic theories, research methods, and important findings from various sub-fields of psychology, and will develop a scientific understanding of how we think, feel, and act. Contemporary psychology is a very broad and diverse area. By necessity, then, the course will not be able to pursue all the topics in great depth. Introduction to Psychology I will focus primarily on the cognitive aspects of psychology, including brain functions, cognitive and sensory processes, state of consciousness, learning, and memory. Introduction to Psychology II will focus on the question of genes and environment, intelligence, personality, and psychological disorders. These two classes will complement each other to provide the basic knowledge for more specialized courses in psychology (e.g., social psychology, educational psychology, clinical psychology).

[Goal]

This course aims at providing an overview of the history, concepts, research methods, and empirical findings in the field of psychology, focusing on how people perceive and construct their surrounding “realities.” Students will acquire the ability to analyze human thoughts and behaviors through a scientific mindset. At the end of this course, students will be able to answer the following questions: How do our brains affect our behavior? How do we get to see and understand the world around us? Why do we sleep? How do we learn? How does memory work and how reliable is it?

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Methods of instruction include lectures, films, small group activities, and discussions. Students will engage in various hands-on activities to experience the concepts they learn in class. In these activities, students will also be asked to reflect on their daily experiences and share examples that illustrate these concepts. Quizzes are held occasionally and returned in the next class so that students understand their own level of understanding of the course materials at the moment. At the beginning of class, feedback for the previous class is given using some comments from submitted slips.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Before each class, students are expected to review their notes from previous classes and do the assigned readings. They must also download and print out handouts prior to each class and bring them to class to take notes. Occasionally, students will also be assigned homework (worksheets, questionnaires, etc). Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Textbooks]

Handouts and reading materials will be provided on Hoppii.

The reference book is available in the library and in the GIS Reference Room for those who wish to learn about each topic in more detail. Handouts and reading materials will be on the course website.

[Grading criteria]

Students are evaluated based on midterm and final exams (35% each), in-class activities and quizzes (20%), and class participation (10%).

[Changes following student comments]

Students usually find this course interesting and eye-opening. I hope to continue engaging students with materials through various hands-on activities and discussions.

[Others]

Introduction to Psychology I and II can be taken in reverse order (II and then I), simultaneously, or independently (just I or just II). Students are strongly encouraged to take this class if they intend to enroll in 200 and 300 level courses in psychology. Students who have taken and passed Introduction to Psychology I or II may be given priority in the selection for Social Psychology I and II.

[Outline and objectives]

This is an introductory course in psychology. Students will be introduced to the basic theories, research methods, and important findings from developmental, personality, and clinical psychology.

[Goal]

This course aims at 1) providing an overview of the concepts, research methods, and empirical findings in the field of psychology and 2) developing a scientific understanding of how the human mind works. Students are expected to acquire a dynamic perspective of the human mind, i.e., learn how we constantly react and adapt to the external world. Through this course, students' employability skills in assessing and adapting to new situations are also expected to be improved.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course will focus on how nature and nurture interact to shape individuals and how people respond and adapt to their environment. Topics covered include human development, personality, intelligence, emotion, psychological disorders and their treatment. Instructional methods include assigned readings, lectures, videos, small group activities, and discussions. Weekly, students are asked to submit a Learning and Reflection Paper, which is used by the instructor to assess understanding of the class content.

Feedback to students will be provided mainly by the instructor's responses in the following week to comments and questions written by students on their Learning and Reflection Papers.

【Outline and objectives】

This course is designed for students interested in exploring second language (L2) educational issues within comparative education. It specifically focuses on motivational issues in L2 education on a global scale. Its purpose is to give an insight into the significant variables of L2 motivation as core elements in L2 education from a global perspective. It explains how L2 motivation is affected by globalisation and local settings related to L2 learners, such as their ethnic background, age, language preferences, L2 learning conditions, etc. It provides a comprehensive exploration of L2 motivation, particularly considering both Japanese and global contexts, and encourages critical thinking about the practical implementation of motivational strategies to support the learning of L2 learners in Japan and overseas. Students can expect to engage with a rich body of research and contribute to discussions on effective L2 education.

【Goal】

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to do the following:

- (1) Develop a foundational understanding of conceptual frameworks related to L2 motivation.
- (2) Explain various factors that influence building conceptual frameworks of L2 motivation.
- (3) Consider global perspectives and their effects on L2 education.
- (4) Discuss appropriate strategies for addressing motivational aspects in L2 education within the Japanese and overseas contexts.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

For the completion of this course, students are required to have Q&A/discussion sessions on a topic related to lecture contents and consolidate it as a daily task every week. A presentation, final exam, and writing assignment are also required at the end of the course; students are required to choose one of the course topics, make a presentation, and submit a writing assignment on it. The final requirements and feedback will be submitted on the learning management systems (WebClass, etc.).

[Outline and objectives]

The course provides an overview of second language (L2) learning; in particular, it provides basic studies and theories of how languages are learned from different perspectives such as first language (L1) acquisition and individual differences (ID). It also covers issues on characteristics of L2 learners and learning through the observation of L2 classrooms and discussion about it.

[Goal]

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to do the following:

- (1) Learn important concepts, perspectives, and theories in second language learning, including influence by first language acquisition and its studies
- (2) Understand basic factors influence on of second language learning
- (3) Explain basic factors that influence building theoretical frameworks of L2 learning.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain “DP 2” and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course looks at how languages are learned: based on the lecture giving explanation of terms of SLA in the first half of the course, students are to make a presentation of core issues on L2 learning in the classroom with their L2 learning experiences in the second half of the course.

[Outline and objectives]

The course is for students intending to teach English; it is an introduction to second language (L2) acquisition and pedagogy. It encourages students to raise their awareness as language teachers.

[Goal]

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to do the following:

1. Explain the core issues in L2 acquisition research.
2. Examine the connection between L2 research and pedagogy.
3. Conduct research on instructed L2 learning, and relate the findings to L2 learning and teaching in Japan.
4. Conduct research on L2 pedagogical approaches integrated with ICT
5. Understand what is needed to qualify as an English teacher.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The course focuses on the teaching and learning of English. Students will learn theories of first and second language acquisition and a range of opportunities to explore research studies and pedagogy on EFL/ESL education. The course will be highlighted by the students' individual performance: they are to choose one of the course topics and then make a presentation on it. They are required to practice their ICT pedagogical skills through the presentation as well as learning its content. Students are also required to take a final exam and submit a written assignment on a related issue.

Submission of the final requirements and feedback will be on the learning management systems.

【Outline and objectives】

We live in a world where cinema dominates our everyday lives, whether we know it or not. Some skeptics view cinema as a dying medium, however, to the contrary, we are witnessing a new Renaissance of cinema with the rise of streaming platforms where media has become a ubiquitous part of our daily lives. This course introduces students to the terms and theories they need to know in order to analyze films in a more structural and critical manner. Lectures, in-class discussions, and assignments are designed to help students understand issues raised within film studies, and make sense of the films they encounter in their everyday lives.

【Goal】

- 1.Students will develop analytical skills in reading cinematic texts.
- 2.Students will learn key theories, terms, and arguments of film studies.
- 3.Students will develop discussion skills to exchange ideas with others.
- 4.Students will become familiar with important films in the history of cinema.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Each week will focus upon a different concept within film studies and instruct students on how to apply that topic to individual texts. Along the way, students will familiarize themselves with landmark films, filmmakers, filmic technologies, and filmmaking traditions by studying cinema from various eras, genres, and industries.

Classes combine lectures, film clips, discussions, analytical exercises, and student presentations. In addition, students will conduct research projects. As the history of cinema covers approximately 120 years and involves many regions, the list of the films examined in this course is eclectic. Some examples are as follows: A Trip to the Moon (1902), The Battleship Potemkin (1925), Citizen Kane (1941), Bambi (1942), Singing in the Rain (1952), Tokyo Story (1953), Psycho (1960), and Nobody Knows (2004).

[Outline and objectives]

We live in a world where cinema dominates our everyday lives, whether we know it or not. Some skeptics view cinema as a dying medium, however, to the contrary, we are witnessing a new Renaissance of cinema with the rise of streaming platforms where media has become a ubiquitous part of our daily lives. This course introduces students to the terms and theories they need to know in order to analyze films in a more structural and critical manner. Lectures, in-class discussions, and assignments are designed to help students understand issues raised within film studies, and make sense of the films they encounter in their everyday lives.

[Goal]

- 1.Students will develop analytical skills in reading cinematic texts.
- 2.Students will learn key theories, terms, and arguments of film studies.
- 3.Students will develop discussion skills to exchange ideas with others.
- 4.Students will become familiar with important films in the history of cinema.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Each week will focus upon a different concept within film studies and instruct students on how to apply that topic to individual texts. Along the way, students will familiarize themselves with landmark films, filmmakers, filmic technologies, and filmmaking traditions by studying cinema from various eras, genres, and industries.

Classes combine lectures, film clips, discussions, analytical exercises, and student presentations. In addition, students will conduct research projects. ## 【Outline and objectives】

What are the effects of computers, smart phones, and the internet in our lives? Does the way we receive news or other information alter our perceptions of current events? Do our relationships with friends change depending on how we communicate with them?

The way we interact is mediated by communication technologies. This class is an introduction to media studies focused on how media has evolved and how it has come to shape and transform the way we communicate.

【Goal】

1. Introduce the history of major media and communication technologies.
2. Provide students with theoretical frameworks to understand and interpret media effects.
3. Build fundamental skills of media literacy.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Each course focuses on the historical introduction of a medium for media for a better understanding of mass communication and its evolution.

We will discuss a variety of media forms such as print, sound, film, internet, as well as their evolution, and their impact on culture.

The last few weeks will focus on changing trends in media culture by looking at topics such as advertising, gaming, and virtual reality.

Students are always encouraged to share their views and interesting media content during class or through the Google Classroom stream.

Students are always welcome to send in questions by e-mail, these will be addressed at the beginning of each class.

Individual feedback on assignments and examinations will be provided through Google Classroom.

Introduction to Media Theory

【Outline and objectives】

We live in a media-saturated world, where every part of our lives is deeply interconnected with some type of media: smartphones with us at all times, the vastness of the internet, our regular media diets of films, series, videos, tweets, SNS, music, and more. Increasingly, living life is done mainly through media, but how do we go about analyzing this media-filled world around us? With this point of departure, this class will give an overview of the foundational concepts for contemporary media theory, examining some of the ideas from the most influential thinkers of media. These theories explore not just the technical operations of media, but how they function in society, how media work on us and how we work with and through them. In examining the theories about media, students will learn different methods to examine and analyze the media around us and the society we live in. By studying these theories, students will gain a general understanding of how to think about media, helping them to better navigate our media-saturated world.

【Goal】

In addition to teaching the students about media theory, this class aims to develop critical thinking and analytical skills. Throughout the semester students will: 1) learn various methodologies for approaching media; 2) examining the theories about various media; 3) explore how to apply these theories and concepts to other subjects; 4) learn how to conduct analyses of different media.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will be lecture-based, with visual material such as clips of films and images. Students will be asked to have group discussions and analyses on certain themes. Each week students will be provided with an academic reading relevant to the topic. These readings will be important background information and/or will be directly addressed as the topic of the lecture and discussion. Lectures will explain in detail and through examples the topic for that class. Discussions based on the lecture will be facilitated by questions from the instructor to help the students explore and develop their critical and analytical skills for that topic. Students will be assessed on their understanding of the lectures and readings through their presentations and papers. Students will receive feedback in class and in written form, based on a grading rubric.

[Outline and objectives]

This class will provide an introduction to the field of manga studies. Here we will explore how manga operates as a type of media, analyzing manga from a multidisciplinary perspective. This means that we will look at manga from a variety of different perspectives, including its modes of reading/viewing, economics, aesthetics, and political history while considering its place in Japanese society and abroad. We will learn what makes manga specific as a type of media and how that allows us to delve into its particularities. This includes examining how manga mediated different shifts in Japanese society, as we explore the differences in the major manga genres, and how they cover various topics, from gender to memory. Beyond the local, we will ask what manga made outside of Japan can tell us about global the spread of media. We will also ask what manga, a media form that developed from paper and print, can tell us about other issues regarding the digitalization of our world as it moves into new formats for the 21st century.

[Goal]

In addition to teaching the students information about manga, its surrounding cultures, and business practices, this class aims to develop critical thinking and analytical skills. Throughout the semester students will: 1) learn the specific history of manga; 2) how to analyze manga as media; 3) examine how manga interacts with other media and society; 4) explore how to critically engage with manga.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Classes will be lecture-based, with visual material such as clips of films and animation. Students will be asked to have group discussions and analyses on certain themes and specific manga. ## [Outline and objectives]

Students will learn about the history and aesthetic conventions of Japanese traditional performing arts, presented as living traditions in the context of contemporary Japanese society, using a combination of textual and audiovisual materials. The course will provide ample opportunities to watch videoed performances as well as information regarding live performances. The first half of the semester will focus on ritual performance and noh-gaku. In the second half we look at kabuki, bunraku and contemporary theatre. This class will also feature guest lectures from master craftsman and performers depending on their availability.

To complement the academic background about the arts this class will also feature a direct, hands-on approach to the topics covered as well.

[Goal]

By the end of this course, students will have a good overview of how Japanese performing arts is continually evolving from tribal ritual, to modern stage performance.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

1. This course will employ a number of teaching methods relevant to the subject, ranging from activity based classes, group discussions, research assignments and culminating in a final project that can be either literary (traditional essay, original script in a style learned in class) or performative (students can stage an original performance of their choosing)
2. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via email, the Learning Management System and/or Google Classroom.

14	Final presentations part 2	Students will be required to make a presentation based either on an essay they have written or an original script.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students must complete any homework tasks given prior to or following certain classes.

Reading assignments must be read before each class. Students will watch some video in class, but there will also be assignments to watch online content outside the classroom.

In addition, students must keep a viewing journal which describes performative events they witness each week. Whether it is an actual live performance or an everyday interaction (such as: transaction at a convenience store, observing a couple arguing, someone reading sleeping on public transport etc.) The performative journal should try and reflect on how the traditions are echoed in the contemporary.

Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

Watching on screens is a weak substitute for the live event. While it is not required or possible for the whole class to attend performances, I believe students will benefit immeasurably from going to see the traditional arts in person. For students interested in going on their own to performances around Tokyo, the instructor can give further information on the best ways to attend.

13	Final presentations part 1	Students will be required to make a presentation based either on an essay they have written or an original script.
14	Final presentations part 2	Students will be required to make a presentation based either on an essay they have written or an original script.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students must complete any homework tasks given prior to or following certain classes.

Reading assignments must be read before each class. Students will watch some video in class, but there will also be assignments to watch online content outside the classroom.

In addition, students must keep a viewing journal which describes one performative event they witness each week. Whether it is an actual live performance or an everyday interaction (such as: transaction at a convenience store, observing a couple arguing, someone reading sleeping on public transport etc.)

Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Textbooks]

Material - when necessary - will be provided by the instructor and distributed in class or online.

[References]

A list of related references - when necessary - will be provided by the instructor.

[Grading criteria]

Participation 40%

Weekly live event journal 30%

Final assignment (paper or performance): 30%

[Others]

Watching on screens is a weak substitute for the live event. While it is not required or possible for the whole class to attend performances, I believe students will benefit immeasurably from going to see the traditional arts in person. For students interested in going on their own to performances around Tokyo, the instructor can give further information on the best ways to attend.

Introduction to Visual Communication

Gary McLeod

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 1~4
Day/Period : 土2/Sat.2

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

Images seen on walls and in public spaces are rarely random. Most are designed to grab attention and make the viewer want to do something, whether it be desire a car, a drink, a movie, or to share in an idea such as a political message or charity. If images always carry messages, this course explores such message through the practice of making images.

【Goal】

During this course, we will learn how visual messages are conveyed through the acquisition of essential skills (e.g. use of grids, balance, rhythm, typography). We will also develop a working understanding of the impact that images have upon contemporary society. In doing so, the course aims to encourage students' critical awareness of surrounding visual environments.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

Blending theory and practice to introduce the basics of Visual Communication Design, the first part of the course looks at how and why we "read" images in different ways. The second part looks at supporting students through the process of designing an advertisement. To develop a contextual understanding of the subject, students also create a dedicated Instagram account for collecting advertisements seen around Tokyo. Final submission comprises a final project (advertisement) and evidence of participation (Instagram posts). Attendance is recorded weekly using visual media (e.g. photograph). Feedback is given via dialogue and discussion of work in class.

[Outline and objectives]

What is music, how is it made, and what does it mean to 'appreciate' it? In this course we will investigate these and other questions surrounding music-making and musical experiences. Each week students will participate in directed listening and music-making activities as we explore various genres of music with an emphasis on Western music traditions.

[Goal]

Students will be able to:

- (1) develop vocabulary to talk about music;
- (2) develop listening skills;
- (3) develop ability to interpret, appreciate, and critique music in a variety of forms and contexts.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The course is taught through a combination of lectures, guided listening sessions, musical activities, and group discussions. The course will facilitate self-learning through required weekly reading and listening assignments that will be assessed through short writing assignments, as well as collective learning through a final group presentation. Feedback will be given collectively in class or through the Learning Management System (Google Classroom), depending on the nature of the assignment.

[Outline and objectives]

The advent of digital photography and the present ubiquity of high speed internet and camera phones has sent most of us into a frenzy of image production and consumption. We simply recognize when a particular picture or video "hits the spot", but how is that effect achieved? Is everyone a photographer now? Are our memes real art? This course invites participants to answer those questions through a practice-based inquiry into image making in both "documentary" and "artistic" modalities.

[Goal]

What special conditions make an image get closer to being seen as "art" or at least "artistic"? Is the way we document our daily life on social media the same as a "real" documentary? How often do you look at the images you post online afterwards, and have you ever printed them? This course aims to foster a critical eye towards camera use and the imagery it generates. Among other topics, it will explore basic techniques in image making which the participants will experience practically during the semester, including camera operation (full manual operation) and the basic handling of subjects and locations (lighting, composition, editing) gaining insight into what documentary or art photography is/isn't. Students will learn the basics of 'making' photographs and gain practical experience in working with real-life subjects. Drawing upon these experiences, students will prepare a final project based on a theme and methodology to be decided in class.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course uses a practice-based learning approach centered around the production of still photography with some video. Workshops, assignments and supporting lectures are designed to develop students' basic understanding of image making using examples from many eras and contexts.

Students create an Instagram account for the course and post one photograph daily in response to a host of weekly class projects.

Final submission comprises a project portfolio, a written project statement, and evidence of participation (i.e., weekly assignments, class discussion).

Feedback is given constantly, both face to face and via email. Group critiques and personal assessments of the students' development are the main thread of the class.

9	Project Proposals	Discussing and preparing project proposals. First Presentation.
10	The Logic of Images	Exploring and developing strategies for addressing a theme throughout multiple images across time.
11	Editing is Key	Discovering the power of editing as a second moment of creation where we recognize (or falsify) patterns, narratives and motivations.
12	Peer Review: The Gaze of Others	Assembling and reviewing of project drafts with peer groups.
13	Final Project Review and Submission	Reviewing final portfolios and technical challenges prior to submission.
14	Final Presentation and Wrap-up	Final students' presentation on their projects and feedback session.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students must regularly take photographs and or videos, and concentrate on organizing them coherently in groups. Every week students are expected to participate in a camera-based assignment, which will be discussed in class. In order to track progress, students are expected to create a new Instagram account and post a single image taken daily (7 days x 12 weeks = 84 images). They are also expected to use the photobook resource in the library and do assigned readings. Preparatory study and review time for this class are about 2 hours each.

[Textbooks]

No textbook will be used. Handouts and reading materials will be distributed in class.

[Grading criteria]

Participation: this applies to daily posts (or multiple image posts for a project) to Instagram for weekly photo projects (minimum of 84 images total for projects). More than 2 unexcused absences will result in failure of this course.

Main Project: Each student must produce a portfolio (booklet) of 8-12 images selected from photographs made of one subject (or theme) during the course. Students are free to choose their subject but it must be discussed with the instructor and peers. A written project statement will be required. A template for the portfolio will be provided but students' proposals about using other templates or presenting video (or alternative printed formats) will be considered by the instructor on a case by case basis.

Presentation: each student must make short presentations (3-5 minutes) when they settle the plan for the project and when they conclude it. Additional casual presentations connected to assignments may be requested.

The final grade is based on: Participation 30%, Class Presentations 20%, Main Project 50%.

[Changes following student comments]

Changes have been made to help students to produce photographs of a higher conceptual and practical skill as well as design and present their projects.

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

Students will need a laptop, a camera (mobile-phone cameras are the minimum) and general stationary (e.g. pen, pencil, glue, tape, paperclips). Please note that the use of a smartphone camera is acceptable for this course. However, if you have regular access to a better camera, please bring it and the instructor will show you how to use it. For several of the assignments you will need to print out your images as contact sheets and booklets. Convenience store laser prints are acceptable.

【Others】

Students are expected to come to class on time, participate and show interest in class topics, and develop enthusiasm about the subject of their projects.

The instructor is a practicing artist and filmmaker whose work across disciplines (visual arts, music, installations, film and photography) has been shown at venues, publications and exhibitions around the world.

【Outline and objectives】

This course discusses and examines cultural and ethnic diversity in Japan as institutional, interpersonal and internalized experiences.

【Goal】

At the end of this course, you should be able to:

- Explain such concepts as race/ethnicity, nationalism, minority and diversity
- Think cross-culturally, critically, and collaboratively about cultures and practices of “Japan” in specific and changing sociocultural contexts.
- Analyze, apply, and extend conceptual material both informally and formally through discussion and writing.
- Think critically about the relationship among cultural difference, personal experiences, and power dynamics.
- Understand and analyze a complex set of privileges we live with and how differently we are situated in the society accordingly
- Converse civilly with people whose backgrounds, social position, and beliefs are different from yours.
- Envision different ways to realize equality and equity

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Although the instructor will provide the basic framework in a lecture format, students are expected to actively participate in and contribute to class discussion. This includes asking questions, seeking clarification and offering your critical ideas and interpretation. In addition, a small group of 3-5 individuals will work on 1 presentation on weekly readings. Further directions will be given in class. Verbal and written feedback will be given on assignments.

【Equipment student needs to prepare】

None.

【Others】

Students are allowed 2 absences. These include medical reasons, job interviews, family emergency and train delays. If you arrive late or leave early, each will be counted as one ½ absence. If you miss 20 min of class time, it will be considered as 1 absence. 3 or more absences will result in not-passing. You must complete all the assignments to pass the course. Students with special needs should notify the instructor as early as possible, no later than the third week of the semester.

Our goal in this class will not be to memorize or master a series of clear-cut answers; rather, by engaging in lively discussions, we aim to hone our ability to ask critical questions so as to further develop our skills as writers, readers and thinkers. In order to create such a learning environment, students should speak to each other and the instructor with respect. Abusive and harsh language will not be tolerated.

Introduction to Social Research Methods

Daiki Hiramori

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1～4

Day/Period : 火 1/Tue.1

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed to provide an introductory overview of social research methods. This course begins with conceptual issues in research, such as how theory is used in the research process and ethical issues in social science research. Then, building blocks of empirical research, such as hypotheses, measurement, reliability, validity, and sampling, are covered. The course also touches on a variety of research approaches, such as survey research, experimental research, content analysis, in-depth interviewing, cognitive interviews, and ethnography. In this course, students will learn how social scientists design social research, collect the data, and conduct the analysis. Details of specific research methods will be covered in more advanced courses, such as "Qualitative Research Methods" and "Quantitative Research Methods."

[Goal]

By the end of this course, students will be able to: (1) identify and describe the key concepts of social research methods (remembering/understanding), (2) apply those concepts to a context different from one in which it was learned (applying), (3) compare and contrast various approaches to social research (analyzing), and (4) choose appropriate research methods to propose a research project of their own (evaluating/creating).

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course is taught primarily through interactive lectures. A variety of active learning techniques, such as in-class writing assignments, small group discussions, and comment sheets, are used to accommodate diverse student learning styles. In-class quizzes are held occasionally so that students understand their own level of understanding of the course materials at the moment. Verbal and written feedback on assignments is given during class discussions and through using other tools as appropriate. Also, feedback for the previous class is given at the beginning of each class. Students are encouraged to visit the instructor during office hours for more personalized feedback.

【Outline and objectives】

Accounting is often called "the language of business". Basic accounting knowledge is fundamental to becoming a successful business manager. In this course, students can learn basic accounting concepts and key financial statements. The financial statements covered in this course are balance sheets, income statements and cash flow statements. It also covers important accounting topics such as the globalization of accounting standards and the double-entry bookkeeping process.

【Goal】

Students will be able to become familiar with the basic concepts and principles of accounting, and to understand corporate financial statements in order to analyze the overall business performance of corporations. Also, students will be able to learn the basic processes of double-entry bookkeeping. The processes include journal entries, posting, preparing trial balances, adjustments and closing entries.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

This course is taught through lectures, discussions and exercises. At my discretion, I may assign several mini-projects (and exercises) to be completed during, or outside of, the class. Students are encouraged to ask questions and to request that particular points be explained if they remain confused or uncertain about items discussed during the class. Feedback on the students' performance in the assignments during the course will be given regularly.

【Outline and objectives】

Information is now a fundamental feature of the human experience: we consume, produce, and use it to make important decisions. In this course, we will be approaching information studies from the lens of human-computer interaction, data visualization, and analytics. We will be introducing the students to various aspects of information and society: our changing views, how we utilize it, the effects of technological advancements, and our responsibility.

【Goal】

At the end of this course, the students are expected to apply critical thinking to exercise responsible digital citizenship. They should be able to discuss how information affects them as individuals and as a society, evaluate information credibility, and exercise caution in presenting information.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Course materials will be provided at least a week in advance via the learning management system. Each class will be kicked off with a short review from the previous week. This will be followed by lectures, discussions, and activities covering the topics given in the weekly schedule. Each class will close with a short retention quiz that students can choose to work on individually or collaboratively. A reminder of the assigned study materials and other announcements for the following week will also be given.

2	Evolution of Information	A historical overview of the evolution of information will be presented: how was it disseminated and how has it grown through time.
3	Information Stakeholders	Custodianship, ownership, and access will be discussed.
4	Argumentation and Information	Critical thinking concepts such as fallacies will be reviewed. Examples where information was used for faulty argumentation will be presented.
5	Human Factors of Information Consumption	Cognitive biases will be reviewed and methods on how these biases were used to influence information consumption will be presented.
6	Information and Public Opinion	Landmark cases where information has swayed public opinion, both for the good and for the bad, will be discussed.
7	Midterm Reflection	Students will write a short reflection paper in advance on the lessons learned thus far and will be given a few minutes to explain portions of their reflections in a guided discussion manner.
8	Big Data and AI	Big data in key sectors such as healthcare, education, and national security will be introduced. Enablers of big data (e.g., increased computing power, internet) will also be discussed. A demonstration of big data technology will be done with generative AI applications.

9	Information Security	Information security (confidentiality, integrity, and accessibility) along with its related concepts (cybersecurity, cryptography) will be introduced.
10	Digital Footprint	Landmark cases where digital footprints were used, both for the good and for the bad, will be discussed.
11	Data and AI Ethics	Examples of algorithms and practices used with information and how they can potentially threaten the society will be presented. Depending on current technological developments, demonstration of ethical risks will be done with generative AI applications.
12	Future of Information	Expert predictions on how the future will change as we advance in the knowledge economy will be explored.
13	Responsible Digital Citizenship	Protective and ethical measures to prevent misinformation and promote healthy information activism will be debated.
14	Final Examination and Wrap-up	An open-book closed-response timed exam will be administered.

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Students are expected to read the relevant material for the week prior to class to promote lively discussion. Students may optionally prepare short reports for knowledge sharing in advance. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Outline and objectives]

Information study is an interdisciplinary science with a wide range of interests and goals. A major element in the field is concerned with fundamental information processes such as the acquisition and collection of information, the classification and storage of information, the manipulation and retrieval of information, as well as the analysis, dissemination, usage, and maintenance of information. Although information has attained a very important role in the world around us, it is a concept that is very difficult to define. This course tries to familiarize students with the history and evolution of the field of information study. Students completing the course will recognize the aims and goals of fundamental information processes. They will learn to analyze, evaluate, and appreciate the value information study provides, and they will understand today's information society and modern technology from an information perspective.

[Goal]

By the end of the semester, students should: (i) be familiar with the history and evolution of the field of information study, (ii) understand fundamental information processes, (iii) have acquired an understanding about the notion of information from various points of view, and (iv) be able to reason about modern society and modern technology from an information perspective.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The main elements of the course are lectures, assignments, and in-class discussions. The lectures relate to the topics mentioned in the course schedule below. A class typically provides feedback and guidance on assignments. In addition, each class provides an opportunity for students to engage actively in a discussion related to current issues in information studies.

Introduction to Development Studies

Norio Usui

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1～4

Day/Period : 月 5/Mon.5

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

Why do we need to extend aid to developing countries? If needed, how can we support growth and development of recipient countries? Do we really know what prevents growth and development (poverty reduction) in developing countries? If not, how can we know them, and then how to develop aid strategy based on the identified constraints? If development aid contains lending, how can we assess debt repayment capacity of a recipient country? Can projects financed by our aid attain expected goals? How can we measure the impact of an aid-funded project that can be attributed to the project? The course aims to answer these critical questions in development aid policy. After reviewing the traditional development paradigms — Structural adjustments and Washington consensus (confusion), the course focuses on the emerging 3rd generation of development paradigm, which emphasizes “diagnostics” and “evaluation” in formulating an effective development aid policy. A unique feature of the course is its intensive uses of case studies to deepen students’ understanding.

[Goal]

Students who have taken this course should be able to:

- (1) understand how development aid is designed to resolve challenges in developing countries;
- (2) understand how development paradigms have been evolving and how the changes in development paradigms have affected development organizations’ operational strategies;
- (2) develop analytical skills to analyze development challenges and formulate an effective aid (and development) strategy.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The intent of this course is to expose the student to a range of ideas and issues in aid and development policy through an interactive learning process. Students will be provided an opportunity to learn, think and discuss broadly and deeply about aid and development issues through lectures, discussions, group work, presentations and homework. Comments will be provided to assignments. Good works will be presented in class.

Collaborative Engagement and Reflective Activities: 10%

Midterm Exam: 20%

Final Exam: 40%

Quizzes will be completed on Hosei University LMS.

Midterm and final exams will be paper test.

Students are required to meet satisfactory grades for each element to receive a grade.

[Changes following student comments]

In response to student feedback and my own reflections, I made the following changes to the course:

Enhanced Practical Learning: Traditional essay assignments have been replaced with hands-on environmental appraisals within the university and the local community. This shift aims to provide students with experiential learning opportunities that connect theoretical knowledge to real-world applications.

Increased Collaborative and Reflective Activities: The syllabus now includes more collaborative projects and reflective exercises to foster teamwork and encourage deeper personal engagement with the material.

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed to provide an introduction to the study of International Relations (IR). It mainly examines key concepts and theories of IR, as well as contemporary issues in world politics.

[Goal]

The course objectives are: (1) To enable students to develop a broad understanding of the concepts and theories of IR; (2) To enable students to utilize the concepts and theories of IR for analyzing enduring questions in IR, such as war and peace, conflict, the rise of non-state actors, the role of international laws and organizations, the management of international economic relations, and globalization and economic development; (3) To enable students to acquire the ability to form their own answers to enduring and contemporary questions in international relations.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course provides the foundation for all other IR related courses, such as Foreign Policy Analysis, International Security, the International Relations of the Asia-Pacific, and Seminar in International Relations. The first half of the course will explore key concepts and theories of IR, such as Realism, Liberalism, Constructivism to enhance students' understanding of the dynamic mechanisms of world politics. The second half of the course will examine contemporary issues in world politics, such as war and conflicts, the roles of international law and organizations, the rise of non-state actors, interaction between states and markets in the world economy, and the prospects of international order.

【Outline and objectives】

The primary objective of this course is to provide students with an introduction to the field of comparative politics by delving into fundamental concepts, theories, and illustrative case studies from various countries.

【Goal】

The first goal of this course is to provide students with the foundational knowledge of concepts and theories to compare political systems across countries. The second goal is to deepen the understanding of differences and similarities across different countries.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course will consist mainly of lectures and open discussion. Students will be asked - and encouraged - to express their views on topics being discussed. Audio-visual aids (short videos) will be used to help make issues and events much more concrete and vivid to students and to help stimulate discussion and debate.

【Outline and objectives】

Albert Einstein noted that "more people will die from bad politics than bad physics." From that statement, one can see the importance of politics, but many people do not actually know what politics really is, let alone political science. In short, politics deals with power, and political science studies politics, scientifically. This course will serve as an introduction to this incredibly important field.

【Goal】

The course has 3 main goals:

- 1) to introduce students to the major questions in political science;
- 2) to acquaint students with the discipline's best answers to those questions, and;
- 3) provide the students with the tools to think critically about those answers.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

The course will consist mainly of lectures and open discussion, independent study and groupwork.

Introduction to Modern Asian History

Chris Park

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 1~4
Day/Period : 火3/Tue.3

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

This course employs two perspectives to understand the histories of modern China, Japan, Korea, and Taiwan in the context of tradition and globalization from the late 19th century to the present. It examines the struggles of these four countries to preserve or establish their boundaries, identities, and cultures in a rapidly emerging modern world order. The course also looks at how individuals respond to and are shaped by the variety of modernity(ies).

The main questions that will be asked and addressed are:

What and why does the history of East Asia matter where capitalism has reached into all corners of the world and the term 'globalization' has become a cliché?

What are the major transformations and lines of continuity in East Asian history?

What factors in the historical development of modern China, Japan, Korea, and Taiwan explain changes and continuity?

【Goal】

This course has some basic goals including: 1) To familiarize students with some fundamental concepts of reconciliation, peace, and coexistence in a range of historical contexts; 2) To encourage students the capacity to analyze and to interpret historical theories and case studies in the local and global context of East Asia (China, Japan, Korea(s), and Taiwan) to ensure a transnational perspective; and 3) To help students develop an in-depth understanding of national, regional, and global dimensions in the makings of modern East Asia and interactions by shedding particular lights on human agency, nongovernmental organization, and local dynamics in East Asia to think critically about historical narratives.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

This course highly encourages students to engage in discussion and debate, and the capacity to interpret historical theories and case studies in the local and global context.

In addition, it is possible that some comments from the reaction papers may be introduced in class to elaborate on each lecture and to facilitate discussions.

Comments for assignments and the final reports are given through email.

Introduction to Modern European History

Markus Winter

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 1~4
Day/Period : 月 1/Mon.1

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

The world we live in is a world of sovereign (nation-)states. It seems as if those countries we know today have always been there, at least in some form. This course will critically examine this view and look at the major developments in Western history from the 18th to the 20th century that shaped modern Europe:

The emergence of modern states, 1789, the idea of the nation and nationality; the Industrial Revolution; colonisation and imperialism; the idea of 'balance of power'; the onset of mass democracy; and two world wars.

【Goal】

1) Gain an in-depth understanding of the origin of European state-and-nation-building, its impact on the world, and how it still shapes our perceptions today; 2) Identify the major intellectual, economic, and political developments from 1789-1945; 3) understand how 'modernity' and 'modern life' took shape in Western Europe and why; 4) Train your academic writing and speaking skills.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

Each class has three components: 1) The main component of the class is a series of lectures. 2) Each class will begin with a discussion part where students will pre-discuss the week's topic. 3) Lastly, at the end of the course, depending on the number of students, you will be asked to sit a final exam or give a brief presentation.

Feedback will be given to each individual student's graded work in writing.

Introduction to Tourism Studies

John Melvin

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 1～4

Day/Period : 火2/Tue.2

その他属性 : 〈実〉

【Outline and objectives】

The purpose of this course is to provide students with an introduction to the field of tourism. You will gain an overview of the scale, scope and organization of the tourism sector and consider both the positive and negative impacts of tourism on destinations. Through a range of international case studies, we will learn about the development of destinations' natural, built and cultural resources and how these can be managed and enjoyed sustainably. Students will engage in additional learning opportunities such as in-class discussions and a group project, focusing on tourism-related issues at a particular destination. This includes consideration of how tourism is recovering from the coronavirus pandemic in 2025 and beyond. As an introductory 100-level class, students will encounter some of the fundamental issues and theories relating to the study of tourism.

【Goal】

At the completion of this course, students should be able to:

1. Describe the structure and organisation of the tourism sector and the interrelationships between the various stakeholders (governments, local communities, companies, NGOs, etc.)
2. Identify processes to enable the sustainable development of a destination's natural, built and cultural resources
3. Identify factors facilitating the growth of travel and tourism at the global, national and local level
4. Discuss consumer behavior trends and the implications for tourism managers
5. Describe the impact of technology, particularly social media, on both tourism organizations and tourists

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

The course is designed to facilitate a free exchange of ideas and information. Lectures will take place in an interactive environment, with students contributing through discussions and a group presentation. These are important elements of the course and will aid in your learning. The group project on a given case study will provide you with in-depth understanding of the unique challenges facing your group's destination. You will be required to analyze this and present your solutions and recommendations via a report and presentation.

Assignments will be submitted via Hoppii; insightful answers will be shared in class to facilitate discussion.

【Grading criteria】

Evaluation will be based on

1. Class participation & homework assignments (30%)
2. Group presentation and report (30%)
3. Exam (40%)

Students are expected to complete all the assigned reading and homework to enable them to get the most benefit from the lectures.

To help develop students' group-working skills and to encourage and reward cooperation and hard work, the group project is assessed on an individual basis through peer assessment.

【Changes following student comments】

Following reflection, there will be a case study on overtourism, given its growing prevalence in popular destinations around the world. The lecture on technology will have a greater focus on the influence of social media.

【Others】

I can draw from my experience as marketing director of a tourism business and as an event organizer in the UK to help provide students with examples and to illustrate issues.

Introduction to Tourism Studies

【Outline and objectives】

The purpose of this course is to provide students with an introduction to the field of tourism. You will gain an overview of the scale, scope and organization of the tourism sector and consider both the positive and negative impacts of tourism on destinations. Through a range of international case studies, we will learn about the development of destinations' natural, built and cultural resources and how these can be managed and enjoyed sustainably. Students will engage in additional learning opportunities such as in-class discussions and a group project, focusing on tourism-related issues at a particular destination. This includes consideration of how tourism is recovering from the coronavirus pandemic in 2025 and beyond. As an introductory 100-level class, students will encounter some of the fundamental issues and theories relating to the study of tourism.

【Goal】

At the completion of this course, students should be able to:

1. Describe the structure and organisation of the tourism sector and the interrelationships between the various stakeholders (governments, local communities, companies, NGOs, etc.)
2. Identify processes to enable the sustainable development of a destination's natural, built and cultural resources
3. Identify factors facilitating the growth of travel and tourism at the global, national and local level
4. Discuss consumer behavior trends and the implications for tourism managers
5. Describe the impact of technology, particularly social media, on both tourism organizations and tourists

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】
Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course is designed to facilitate a free exchange of ideas and information. Lectures will take place in an interactive environment, with students contributing through discussions and a group presentation. These are important elements of the course and will aid in your learning. The group project on a given case study will provide you with in-depth understanding of the unique challenges facing your group's destination. You will be required to analyze this and present your solutions and recommendations via a report and presentation. Assignments will be submitted via Hoppii; insightful answers will be shared in class to facilitate discussion.

【Outline and objectives】

In this course, you will learn how Contrastive Linguistics is defined as an academic subject. By drawing on topics related to variations within a language (i.e. dialects) or between related languages, this course provides an accessible and engaging overview of Contrastive Linguistics.

【Goal】

The development of practical skills through the acquisition of a basic knowledge of Contrastive Linguistics. Three main skills are emphasized: 1) finding similarities and differences between dialects or related languages; 2) compiling data for documentation and analysis; and 3) gaining basic knowledge of under-documented and endangered languages.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

After an introduction to the topics in the form of mini-lectures, examples from target languages are presented for discussion and analysis. This course contains assignments and writings outside of class, which may be presented in class. Note that the suggested topics may vary slightly depending on the number of registered students and their interests. Finally, submissions of assignments and their feedback will be via Google.docs (unless students are notified previously).

【Outline and objectives】

The aim of this course is to provide students with an essential understanding of linguistics, with examples drawn from the English language; the course begins by outlining diachronic, synchronic and contrastive perspectives, while illustrating the history and regional diversity of English. As an introduction to 200/300 level linguistics-related courses, subsequent lectures are dedicated to surveying phonetics, phonology, morphology and syntax, followed by semantics. The last part of the course deals with language typology and universals, and refers to some of the key topics in sociolinguistics.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) have an understanding of linguistics as a scientific study, distinguished from language learning for practical purposes,
- (2) understand key terminology, concepts and theories in the major fields of linguistics, and
- (3) acquire basic research skills needed in more advanced linguistics courses.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course is a combination of lectures and discussions about pre-assigned topics. The lectures are delivered using PowerPoint slides and Internet sources. Students have to address review and application questions given in advance. Attendance at the first class is mandatory. Submitted assignments and tests are reviewed in detail and commented on in the following week's lecture.

Introduction to Syntactic Theory

Yuta Sakamoto

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 1~4
Day/Period : 木2/Thu.2

【Outline and objectives】

Syntax is the scientific study of sentence structure, investigating how well-formed sentences are created by arrangements of words and phrases. In this course, we introduce basic concepts on syntax especially in the context of generative grammar, providing students with a chance to consider not only how we can "easily" create grammatical sentences but also how it is possible that we uniformly acquire such an ability.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students will: (1) acquire basic key terminologies and concepts in syntax, (2) understand the importance of sentence structure, being able to analyze basic language data syntactically, (3) understand what Generative Grammar is.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

We follow the three textbooks listed in References, learning the basics of Generative Grammar, sometimes highlighting several problems with traditional grammar (e.g. the definition of parts of speech). We'll discuss excerpts from each book and related exercises in class. You are very welcome to come up with counterexamples to what's written in the books, and so forth.

English Grammar: The Basics

Yuta Sakamoto

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 1~4
Day/Period : 木2/Thu.2

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

The most important ingredients of the grammar of the English language.

[Goal]

A major step toward the ability to understand how sentences of English work.

For why you might want this ability, see the course description for English Grammar Extended, which you should consider taking after English Grammar: The Basics.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

We follow Huddleston, Pullum and Reynolds’ textbook, which is based on (but is very much smaller and simpler than) the earlier book The Cambridge Grammar of the English Language (CGEL). Both are descriptive grammar books, saying how sentences of English are constructed (and not how the authors imagine they should be constructed). As its publisher says, CGEL “is firmly based on research in modern linguistics and rejects many errors of the older tradition, supporting its departures from traditional grammar with reasoned argument”. So the textbook will almost certainly disagree with any grammar or other textbook that you’ve used in any previous English course.

The book and course are only theoretical where necessary. (There are very few tree diagrams.) So if other syntax books alarm you, don’t worry. Before each class, you have to read and digest ten or so pages of the textbook. We’ll discuss that part of the book, and related exercises, in the class. You are very welcome to come up with apparent counterexamples to what’s written in the book, and so forth.

Students both submit work for assignments and get comments on this work via “Hoppii”.

[Grading criteria]

Evaluation will be based on two examinations (50% + 50%). Both examinations will be “open book”, and will test real understanding and ability to analyze (as opposed to mere memorization).

[Changes following student comments]

A further slight reduction in the quantity of what’s shown on screen during the class, a further slight increase in the quantity of annotations that can be examined outside the class.

[Others]

Each class slideshow will be openly available on the web. The slideshows are usable on computers, tablets, and most phones.

[Prerequisite]

None.

【Outline and objectives】

The objectives are to introduce English literature in the historical context and provide a general knowledge of literature for foreign students.

【Goal】

Students will study facts and ideas of English literature, learn how to read literary works, and widen the cultural frame of reference around the English speaking world.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

English Literature may be an unfamiliar subject to many Japanese students. In this course, the approach to literature is traditional. Students will acquire basic knowledge of literary terms, works, authors, literary movements, and its history. Commentary will be made on various related aspects about Britain, including geography, race, religion, society, politics, and so on, to help students have a deeper understanding and appreciation of the works. At the same time, students will consider how ideas about literature and its interpretations have changed in post-war Britain when many British colonial states became independent. During this period, the UK went through drastic shifts and changes, and became more multi-racial and multi-cultural. Reference will be made to critical theory and topics including nationalism, post-colonialism, globalisation, and ethnicity. Students will read literary works, see film adaptations, and have discussions.

Feedback will be given through Hoppii.

【Outline and objectives】

What is literature? What happens when we are reading a novel or studying a text? At its base, the study of literature is an ongoing conversation about these questions. This course prepares students to take part in that conversation by introducing the major concepts, tools, and theories of literary research. Students will broadly explore the historical issues that shape the field and cultivate an approach to critical reading that can be utilized in upper-level literature classes. In particular, this course will cover concepts of canonization, genre, close reading, and historical and comparative methodologies.

【Goal】

Students will gain an understanding of the basic methodologies and approaches of literature research. Students will also develop critical reading and writing skills.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will consist of lectures focused on specific concepts of literary theory followed by group discussions. Students will also utilize the methods we cover through reading and responding to selected texts. Short quizzes will be occasionally given to assess comprehension of readings. Students will also be evaluated through a midterm paper and final paper. In-class feedback will be provided for weekly response papers and other assignments.

Political Philosophy

Joel Van Fossen

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 木1/Thu.1

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

Humans are deeply social creatures. Unlike other social creatures, humans create and exist within complex and dynamic political arrangements with laws, customs, institutions, and designated sources of authority. This situation presents us with the question of how we should arrange ourselves politically. The rational inquiry into this question is the primary task of political philosophy. In this course, we will explore a variety of topics in political philosophy with an emphasis on the social contract tradition and theories of justice.

【Goal】

This course has four primary learning goals. First, students will acquire knowledge about the various and diverging views on political philosophy. Second, students will improve critical thinking skills when engaging with abstract reasoning about political philosophy. Third, students will improve their reading skills when confronting nuanced and challenging text. Finally, students will improve their writing skills to communicate complex ideas clearly and confidently.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will begin with a one-hour lecture with interactive slides. In many meetings, an in-class activity will accompany the lecture. These activities are interactive and require active participation. Each class will end either (1) with a discussion about the course content or (2) an open discussion about the in-class activity for that day. Students will prepare questions for the discussion period as homework before coming to class. Finally, there are two in-class exams. These exams will include multiple choice, short answer, and essay questions. Students will receive written feedback on their exams.

【Changes following student comments】

Students evaluated this class positively in the previous year. One small change is that slides will be provided online before class rather than posted afterward.

【Prerequisite】

There is no prerequisite for this course. Students who intend to register for this course are required to attend the first class (online). A screening will be conducted in the class if necessary.

[Outline and objectives]

Philosophy &amp; Aesthetics

Whether in nature or art, humans love beauty. In fact, appreciating and taking pleasure in beautiful things seems central to what it means to be a human. But what is beauty? What is art? Does art need to be beautiful? What is the value of art and beauty? What's the relation between the value of beauty and other values, like moral value? Why is art so important to us? These questions are the primary concern for the branch of philosophy called "aesthetics." In this course, we will investigate these questions in depth by exploring various texts on aesthetics from the history of philosophy. Philosophers surveyed in this course include Plato, Aristotle, Francis Hutcheson, David Hume, Immanuel Kant, G.W.F. Hegel, Arthur Schopenhauer, Friedrich Nietzsche, Leo Tolstoy, and Ludwig Wittgenstein.

[Goal]

This course has four primary learning goals. First, students will learn about various and diverging views on aesthetics. Second, students will improve critical thinking skills when engaging with abstract reasoning. Third, students will improve their reading skills when confronting nuanced and challenging text. Finally, students will improve their communication skills to present complex ideas clearly and confidently in written and spoken forms.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Classes will begin with a one-hour interactive lecture that includes discussion periods. Students will prepare questions for the discussion period as homework before coming to class. However, for meetings 5-13, student presentations will precede the lecture. Each student must present once throughout the semester. Student presentations apply the course's various theoretical topics and ideas to analyze the students' choice of some piece(s) of art. The instructor will provide more detailed instructions on Hoppii. In addition to presentations, there will be a final exam in the last meeting. The final exam will consist of essay questions. Students will receive written feedback on the presentation. Feedback for the exam will be provided on Hoppii.

[Outline and objectives]

This course focuses on how psychology is applicable to our own life. Students will acquire new perspectives to analyze and conceptualize themselves and world. They will also acquire various psychological skills that can be useful to improve the quality of their daily life.

[Goal]

Upon completion of this course, students will have

- (1) learned some psychological concepts and theories that are applied to tackle the issues in various settings in our life, including schools and workplaces
- (2) acquired a basic knowledge about how one's psychological characteristics are assessed and mental and behavioral problems are treated, and
- (3) developed an array of skills that can be used to understand one's psychological characteristics and handle mental and behavioral problems in daily life

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course is taught primarily through lectures and in-class activities students are expected to be engaged in. At the end of each class, students complete a brief reflection paper, which will be graded and returned with feedback comments from the lecturer by the beginning of the next class. In the middle of the course, students are also asked to work on a small project, which is directly related to the contents of the final exam.

[Grading criteria]

The following show approximate activity-by-activity percentage points toward your final course grade: (a) active participation, preparation, and engagement (10%); (b) Reflection papers and assignment (40%); (c) Final exam (in-class report) (50%)

[Changes following student comments]

For the final exam, students are expected to start preparation well in advance, as they need to develop their own answers through experiences of practicing what they learned in the classes in on their own lives. For this purpose, the questions are shared in the beginning of this course.

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

Bringing one's computer/tablet to the classes is recommended.

【Outline and objectives】

This course will introduce students to important ideas, basic theories, classic and current research studies in key areas in the field of educational psychology, such as learning, memory, motivation and human development. It also will help students to connect these theories and research findings to their daily lives now as students and in their futures as life-long learners.

【Goal】

This course aims at developing students' 1) basic knowledge of educational psychological concepts, theories and important research findings, 2) understanding of their own learning histories, including how they know what they know, and 3) psychological literacy skills to apply the knowledge learnt in their own current and future lives. Students will become better able to develop their own learning skills, and to help others learn in a wide variety of situational roles, such as teachers, trainers, group leaders, or parents.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】
Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course will focus on human learning, and will include important areas related to learning, such as intelligence, memory, motivation, and self-concept. Methods of instruction include lectures, audio-visual materials, such as videos, TED Talks, student presentations, small group activities, reflection and discussions.

I respond to students' questions, comments, concerns, ideas they write on the Reflection Papers weekly /regularly.

I see quizzes and mid-term exams as learning opportunities for students, so ask students for input and for their reactions afterwards.

【Outline and objectives】

The goal of this course is to introduce the students to various quantitative research methods used in the social sciences. When making important decisions, be it choosing a strategy to increase the sales of a product, implementing an intervention program to boost people's well-being, or selecting a school program to increase students' learning, people can rely on their intuition and experience, or they can base their decisions on facts: data. In this course, students will develop skills to obtain valid and reliable data through experimental and survey methods. The course will also cover topics related to research ethics, some basic statistics, and APA-style writing.

【Goal】

This course provides an overview of the 'how's and 'why's of quantitative research in social sciences, and it covers such topics as design, ethics, and APA-style writing and such strategies as field experiments and surveys. Students will develop the ability to design, conduct, evaluate, and report empirical studies. By developing hypotheses and critically assessing information, students will improve on their critical thinking skills.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course consists of lectures, in which general ideas and methods of research will be presented, and hands-on applications of the methods, in which student's research projects will be planned and presented. Although some of the class time will be set aside for planning students' research, the majority of it will be done as assignments to be completed outside class. Feedback for research will be given during class time. Comments for papers will be given via the Learning Management System.

12	Data Analyses II	Computing reliabilities and correlations

13	Data Analyses III	Data analysis workshop using a statistical software
14	Students Poster Presentations	Poster presentations of group research

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Students will have to complete the assigned homework on time to successfully complete the class. They will be asked to do the readings, create research materials, collect data, etc. outside the class. Please bear in mind that the course will require that students spend a considerable amount of time outside class (at least 2 hours every week, sometimes more). Most work will be done in small groups, suggesting that students need to be flexible in finding time to meet other students during the week. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Outline and objectives]

This is an introductory course in social psychology, the scientific study of how we view and influence one another. Students are introduced to the theories, research methods, and seminal findings of social psychology. Social Psychology I will primarily focus on how we think about the social world, how we come to understand others, and how we exert influence on others' thoughts, feelings, and behaviors. Topics include perceptions of others and the self, attitudes, conformity, obedience, and persuasion. Social Psychology II will focus on social relations and intergroup dynamics, covering topics such as helping and aggression, group influence, self, emotion, and prejudice. These two courses will complement each other to provide an overview of the main content areas of social psychology.

[Goal]

This course will introduce students to the perspectives, research methods, and empirical findings in the field of social psychology and cultivate skills in analyzing the social situations and events that we encounter in our everyday lives. By the end of the course, students will be able to (1) identify and understand major theories, principles, and research findings in the field of social psychology, (2) apply social psychological theories and principles to real life experiences, and (3) critically evaluate social psychological theories and research. In Social Psychology I, students will be able to answer the following questions: How are we influenced by our environment and by other people? How do we explain others' behavior? What are attitudes and how do they affect us? What leads to conformity and obedience? When are people persuaded by differing opinions and when are they not?

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Methods of instruction include lectures, films, individual and small group activities, and discussions. Students will engage in various hands-on activities and experiments to experience the concepts they learn in class. Students will be asked to reflect on their daily experiences and share examples that illustrate these concepts. Feedback for the quizzes and midterm exams will be given in class. Students are also encouraged to take advantage of the office hours should they wish to get more personalized feedback on how to improve their performance.

14	Review & Final Exam	What have we learned so far? Multiple choice and short-essays

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students should review their notes and read the assigned readings before each class and be able to explain the major concepts and theories they have learned. If there are any parts they do not fully understand, students are encouraged to consult the instructor during class, email the instructor, or go through related references. They must also download and print out handouts prior to each class and bring them to class to take notes. Occasionally, students will also be assigned homework (worksheets, questionnaires, etc). Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Students should review their notes and read the assigned readings before each class and be able to explain the major concepts and theories they have learned. If there are any parts they do not fully understand, students are encouraged to consult the instructor during class, email the instructor, or go through related references. They must also download and print out handouts prior to each class and bring them to class to take notes. Occasionally, students will also be assigned homework (worksheets, questionnaires, etc). Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

【Textbooks】

No textbook will be used.

The reference book is available in the library and the GIS Reference Room for those who wish to learn about each topic in more detail. Handouts and reading materials are on the course website.

【Grading criteria】

Students are evaluated by means of two exams (25% each), in-class activities/online quizzes (20%), group work (20%), and class participation (10%).

【Changes following student comments】

Some students found the readings for the group presentation challenging. I hope to encourage students to start their preparation early so that they can ask me questions beforehand.

【Others】

Social Psychology I and II can be taken in reverse order (II and then I). Students who have taken and passed Statistics and introductory courses in psychology (e.g., Introduction to Psychology I/II, Developmental Psychology) may be given priority in the selection. Students are strongly encouraged to take this class if they intend to enroll in Self and Culture seminar or Advanced Topics in Social Psychology (300-level).

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed for students interested in exploring the multifaceted landscape of teaching English to young learners (TEYL) within the context of primary English education. Specifically, it focuses on primary pupils to provide a historical and theoretical overview of their second language learning (SLL) within the Japanese context and on a global scale, particularly concerning primary English as a foreign language (EFL). It gives an insight into a range of SLL theories to feature primary pupils from psychological, educational, and linguistic perspectives. Integrating these perspectives ensures a holistic understanding of TEYL, fostering consistency in language education across primary and secondary levels. By examining theoretical frameworks, practical considerations, and global trends, students are expected to be familiar with valuable insights into effective TEYL practices. They will also be encouraged to develop their own perspectives on the teaching of English in primary schools in Japan and overseas.

[Goal]

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to do the following:

1. Understand the core issues of SLL theories of young learners.
2. Explain different perspectives on the core issues of L2 education in primary school.
3. Examine the connection between the core issues of young learners' SLL and L2 pedagogy in primary school within the Japanese and overseas contexts.
4. Utilise the theoretical knowledge of L2 education for young learners to give an insight into cultivating L2 pedagogy in primary school from a micro-perspective.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

For the completion of this course, students are required to complete daily tasks by choosing topics related to lectures every week. A presentation, final exam, and writing assignment are also required at the end of the course; students are required to choose one of the course topics, make a presentation, and submit a writing assignment on it. The final requirements and feedback will be submitted on the learning management systems (WebClass, etc.).

[Outline and objectives]

The course is mainly provided for students intending to teach English. Its purpose is to give an insight into the basic issues in teaching methodology for L2 education. It will also encourage students to develop their own teaching performance with a consideration to make consistency in language education from the primary to secondary levels.

[Goal]

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to do the following:

1. Understand different types of L2 teaching methods and approaches.
2. Learn how to apply some findings of linguistic studies to L2 English teaching.
3. Consider L2 education in relation to crucial issues of semantics and pragmatics.
4. Grasp the knowledge and skills for teaching languages as well as L2 pedagogy through ICT to qualify as an English teacher.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 2" and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The course will focus on theoretical and practical aspects of the methodology of teaching EFL/ESL. It will also provide opportunities to explore a wide range of EFL/ESL teaching scenes in different countries with reflections on those in Japan; for example EFL/ESL classrooms for learners who vary in age, gender, nationality and occupation can be examined. The students will relive EFL/ESL teaching scenes by following principles and techniques discussed and suggested in a range of teaching methods and approaches: they follow the model English lessons and demonstrate them in the form of micro-teaching. They are also required to create the related teaching materials including ICT along with the lessons. The final exam and a written assignment are required for the completion of this course and, in a written assignment, they demonstrate their study of the model lessons.

Submission of the final requirements and feedback will be on the learning management systems.

【Outline and objectives】

The course is for students intending to teach English. Its purpose is to give an insight into syllabus design and lesson planning for L2 education. It encourages students to examine, discuss and create L2 resources with a consideration to make consistency in language education from the primary to secondary levels.

【Goal】

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to demonstrate the following:

1. Identify the components of a language course.
2. Design course materials that match educational objectives.
3. Employ a principled approach to the design, creation, and implementation of EFL/ESL course syllabi and teaching materials.
4. Grasp the knowledge and skills for teaching languages as well as L2 pedagogy through ICT to qualify as an English teacher.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course focuses on issues in planning and conducting EFL/ESL lessons: it encourages student teachers to take into consideration the importance of lesson planning when designing an EFL/ESL course. It also provides opportunities for the exploration of a wide range of ideas and examples in the syllabus design from different countries, with reflections on those in Japan. Students are expected to acquire a basic understanding of how to create a lesson plan with materials including ICT needed for managing the language classroom. Students are also required to create their own English lessons and teaching materials, with the opportunity to put them into practice. Students will complete a writing assignment and a final examination that reflects their work on teaching plans, performance and lesson materials. Submission of the final requirements and feedback will be on the learning management systems.

Digital Writing and Publication

Mark Birtles

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

Technological advances have pushed society toward an ever-more participatory global culture; we both consume and create vast quantities of the written word on our phones, laptops and tablets. These digital texts have expanded the definition of what we call writing and what we can do with it. This course will look more closely at how this kind of digital copy is produced and the way it impacts our daily life. Together, we will examine the planning, writing and publication stages of digital content creation, as well as the practical and ethical issues that are involved.

【Goal】

Frederich Nietzsche once said, “it is my ambition to say in 10 sentences what others say in a whole book,” and that is what we will aim to do: produce clear and concise written communication. As part of this process, we will:

- Examine how technology has profoundly altered traditional writing practices
- Learn how to deliver content to a brief, within set style guidelines
- Be engaged in the analysis and production of digital writing, both individually and as part of a team
- Consider the fundamentally new set of ethical issues the online world has created.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Digital Writing and Publication has a focus on quality rather than quantity; in today's digital world, information must be conveyed quickly and attractively. An assignment may be as short as 50 words, but students will learn how to make those 50 words count. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System. We will look at practices that promote a collaborative approach toward a common goal via technology. Students will also learn industry-standard practices, such as writing to a specific style guide and for a specific audience.

East Asian Popular Culture

Kukhee Choo

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 水3/Wed.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This class will examine popular culture across Asia, focusing on the region of East Asia, specifically media and cultural practices in South Korea, China, Taiwan, and Japan. Over this semester we will examine how various media — music, film, TV dramas, and internet videos — are part of local cultural practices in each place. This will include an examination of their histories in the area, their connections to society, and what cultural practices they accompany. However, instead of focusing exclusively on different countries, we will concentrate on how these cultural products work across borders, operating transnationally. By close examination of the production, distribution, and consumption of these media across East Asia, students will gain insight into connections beyond the countries they are usually associated with. In other words, this class will analyze the links between these countries that are facilitated by the media. With this in mind, this class will ultimately consider how media flows across national boundaries and engages with cultural regionalism.

【Goal】

In addition to teaching the students about contemporary East Asian societies and media, this class aims to develop critical thinking and analytical skills. Throughout the semester students will: 1) learn methodologies to examine popular culture from Asia; 2) explore the histories of various popular cultural products from Asia; 3) examine how cultural practices cross national boundaries and interact; 4) consider how these cultural products engage with regionalization in Asia.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will be discussion-based, with visual material such as clips of films and animation. Each week students will be provided with an academic reading relevant to the topic. These readings will be important background information and/or will be directly addressed as the topic of the class content and discussion. Discussions based off of the reading material will be facilitated by questions from the instructor to help the students explore and develop their critical and analytical skills for that topic. Feedback will be given throughout the course via discussion topics. Students will be assessed on their understanding of the readings and discussions through their presentations and exam.

[Outline and objectives]

This class will examine popular culture across Asia, focusing on the region of East Asia, specifically media and cultural practices in South Korea, China, Taiwan, and Japan. Over this semester we will examine how various media — music, film, TV dramas, and internet videos — are part of local cultural practices in each place. This will include an examination of their histories in the area, their connections to society, and what cultural practices they accompany. However, instead of focusing exclusively on different countries, we will concentrate on how these cultural products work across borders, operating transnationally. By close examination of the production, distribution, and consumption of these media across East Asia, students will gain insight into connections beyond the countries they are usually associated with. In other words, this class will analyze the links between these countries that are facilitated by the media. With this in mind, this class will ultimately consider how media flows across national boundaries and engages with cultural regionalism.

【Outline and objectives】

When asked to speak about Japan, individuals often turn to pop-cultural phenomena, such as manga, anime, or cosplay. This implies a link between culture and nation that is vital, yet ambiguous. What do folks mean when they say they like Japanese culture? Why has Japan become so popular?

Drawing on cultural and media studies, this course will explore the historical and theoretical study of Japanese popular culture. Lectures and discussions will engage with media forms and case studies from many eras, covering topics ranging from Takarazuka theater and pre-war radio culture to anime fandom and the so-called “golden age of Japanese cinema.” The course culminates with students delivering a presentation and submitting an essay on a pop-cultural phenomenon not covered in depth during a class session.

【Goal】

Students will learn many of the key theories, terms, and arguments of cultural studies, especially as those ideas relate to Japan. Students will practice analyzing, historically contextualizing, and writing about specific pop-cultural phenomena. Students should leave the course with a refined ability to define and discuss abstract concepts such as nation, culture, and what it means for something to be “Japanese.”

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will combine lectures, discussions, and student presentations. In addition to reading critical and theoretical texts, students are expected to experience, or refer back to their past experiences with, cultural objects and practices in question, and analyze them in a global context in their final papers. Students will also conduct research for the final paper. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System. In-class oral feedback will be provided for presentation assignments.

[Outline and objectives]

Art and design play important roles in society. This is true not only for the 21st century, as art and design have been formative in the shaping of the history of societies throughout the world for centuries. This course introduces students to the fields of art and design, identifying and exploring the differences and the overlaps between them.

[Goal]

Through this course, students will learn about the relationship between art and design and society, while also gaining an understanding of concepts relating to aesthetics, media studies, art history and contemporary art and design. Through the ideas introduced in this course, students will become more aware of the impact of art and design in the world around them, and equip themselves with the knowledge and vocabulary to engage in discussions related to the topics raised.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3" and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

In addition to attending lectures on art and design, students will engage in weekly tasks in response to the subjects of the lectures. As the first half of the course concludes, the students are expected to choose a topic for their final presentation.

The presentation of the project will be a combination of oral presentation, slides(optional) and presentation of preparatory notebook work.

Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

Feedback on presentations will be given in class. Separate feedback will be given via email or the Learning Management System if required.

[Grading criteria]

Participation:

Includes classroom activities, assigned readings, weekly submitted tasks/response.

Final Presentation: Students choose examples of "innovative" art or design they have experienced or engaged with directly. The presentation should include key points such as innovation, value, authorship, the user/viewer experience, and also logically reason the work's appeal to them and to the general public. In addition to the presentation itself, preparatory work in a notebook will be assessed to form the final grade. Students are free to choose their topic, but must present the chosen topic in class during the first half of the semester.

Final assessment is based on:

Active participation 60% (including weekly tasks submitted through Google Classroom = 50% and mid-term presentation/discussion = 10%), Final Project 40% (Presentation = 30% preparatory notebook work = 10%)

[Changes following student comments]

Not applicable.

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

Students will need a computer, a notebook (e.g. sketchbook/notebook), and general stationery (e.g. pen, pencil, glue, tape). A digital notebook/tablet is also acceptable.

Students will need access to a camera or scanner to submit digital images of their notebook work online.

【Outline and objectives】

This course is a practical, semester-long practice of noh-gaku.
We will have hands on experience of the following:

1. Noh dance
2. Noh chant
3. Noh instruments
4. Kyogen style speech
5. Writing a new noh

【Goal】

By the end of this course, students will have:

1. Memorized the movement and chant for one noh shimai (short dance) and one kyogen komai.
2. Be familiar with the flute, and hand drums of noh.
3. Be able to chant in a group of a short excerpt from a full noh.
4. Be able to differentiate between noh and kyogen.
5. Have and outline and numerous parts of an original "shinsaku" (new) noh.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

1. This course will use traditional teaching methods of hands on experiential practice.
2. Students will be using their voices and bodies to repeat the techniques learned in class and express themselves.
3. Traditional techniques of noh instruction will be utilized. For instance, students will be required to sit on the floor (seiza) (exemptions will be made for those with physical limitations).
4. Feedback from the teacher will be given in class as well as to the students in response to their journal submissions.

[Outline and objectives]

How old is photography? Can you imagine visually recording your lunch without a mobile-phone camera? Will you do it even if each shot cost you serious money? How can you share a photograph without Instagram, Twitter, or LINE? Photography was born out of a desire to capture moments, people and landscapes, but to many people, the details of the process are still 'magic' that happens behind a lens. This course looks at the history of photography to help us re-evaluate how digital images evolved and came to be an integral part of our lives.

[Goal]

Photography was developed through a process of scientific study and creative experimentation. This course will give students an insight into the problems that a large number of photographers overcame to make images. Knowledge gained of methods and approaches during the course will also help students better understand the production of images today, helping them to become more informed consumers/producers.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course uses a practice-led learning approach to guide students through a history of photographic processes and their effect in modern societies. Each week, a workshop is conducted that evokes technological and sociological developments in the medium. These are supported with periodic lectures relating to examples of past and contemporary photographers. Students document class activities and self-directed research projects using a workbook. Working towards an individual approach, students are required to make their own photographic projects, and to present them in the form of portfolio books (booklets). To create a portfolio book, students are expected to use an online book printing service(suggestions will be given). To evidence the creative process, students are also expected to document the classes and activities in a workbook.

Submission of assignments and mutual feedback are expected to be part of a continuous offline/online dialogue. Feedback regarding student work progress will be provided in two ways: direct guidance from the instructor, and peer-review sessions including classmates.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students are expected to prepare required materials for class (instructions will be given each week), as well as download and do assigned readings. The final project (photo project) and most assignments will require students to make photographs outside of class hours. In addition, students must maintain a workbook that keeps track of questions for self-directed research assignments and describes/reflects upon their creative activities across the semester (no strict format will be enforced, but seriousness is expected and will be rewarded). Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Grading criteria]

Participation: This applies to taking part in the weekly activities, as well as weekly assignments at class. More than 2 unexcused absences will result in failure of this course.

Workbook: Weekly contribution to their workbooks will start at a minimum of 2 pages per week including documentation of class activities and self-directed research works.

Final Project: Each student must produce a personal photo project (min. of 10 solid (self-curated) images). Please note that each student will be asked to pay for an online book printing service to produce his/her portfolio book. Printing may cost around 4,000 yen according to size, number of pages, and print quality. Further details will be explained in class.

The final grade is based on: Participation 20%, Workbook 30%, and Final Photo Essay Project 50%.

[Changes following student comments]

The course has been modified to encourage more practical engagement with the history of photography.

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

Students will need a laptop, a smartphone, a camera (mobile-phone camera will do), a workbook (e.g. blank sketchbook/notebook), and general stationary (e.g. pen, pencil, glue, tape, scissors). Students will also need access to a printer (either at home, on campus, or at a convenience store). Details of other items required will be given each week.

[Others]

Students are expected to come to class on time, participate and show interest.

The instructor is a practicing artist and filmmaker whose work across different disciplines (starting with photography) has been shown at international exhibitions and media.

[Outline and objectives]

What do terms like 'tradition,' 'modernity,' 'postmodernity,' and 'contemporary' really mean, and how do these concepts shape our understanding of a nation or its people? This course explores the intersection of art, aesthetics, tradition, modernity, and postmodernity in Japan. By examining the development of art history in Japan, we aim to address key questions related to these concepts. Our focus spans from the Meiji period to the present, highlighting key artists, movements, and cultural expressions.

We will study the paradigm shifts that occurred during both the pre-war and post-war periods, exploring how the introduction of modernity transformed Japanese aesthetics. This will involve analyzing the interpretations and manifestations of this change. At the same time, we will critically assess how ideas of tradition, modernity, and Japaneseness have been utilized in nation-building and identity formation.

Additionally, we will examine the work of prominent scholars who have theorized the creation of Japan as a cultural space and the role of art in Japan before and after the advent of modernity.

Throughout the course, students will develop the tools for visual analysis and critical thinking, equipping them with the skills needed for in-depth cultural analysis.

[Goal]

General Objectives:

- Differentiate between modern and contemporary Japanese art: Explore the transformation of aesthetics in Japan from the Meiji period to the present, focusing on how modernity and postmodernity have been introduced and interpreted within Japanese art.
- Critically engage with culture and art: Evaluate scholarly perspectives on modernity, postmodernity, and the transition between them in the context of Japanese visual arts. Challenge conventional ideas of 'art,' 'tradition,' 'modernity,' and 'contemporary culture.'
- Identify key political and historical events that shaped art movements: Analyze the major shifts in Japanese art within specific historical and political contexts, exploring the relationship between politics and aesthetics in the development of artistic movements.
- Develop skills in visual analysis and critical thinking: Cultivate the ability to analyze visual form and think critically through the study of key art movements, events, and cultural expressions in Japan, enabling deeper engagement with the subject matter.

Specific Objectives:

- Recognize major art movements, events, and artists in Japan: Identify the key artists, movements, and cultural expressions in Japanese art history, understanding their role in shaping modernity and postmodernity within Japanese aesthetics.
- Understand the global context of Japanese art: Explore the broader cultural, linguistic, and geographic contexts in which Japanese art developed, recognizing the interconnectedness of the global art world and how international exchanges influenced Japanese aesthetics.
- Analyze the relationship between politics and aesthetics: Examine the impact of political and historical events on Japanese art, and explore the complex ways in which politics and aesthetics intersect in shaping artistic developments in Japan.
- Compare modern and contemporary art in Japan: Compare and contrast the characteristics and processes of modern and contemporary Japanese art, focusing on the transition between artistic periods and the influence of global trends and popular culture on Japanese art practices.

Each session will be divided into two parts. The first part of the session is comprised by the lecture on the assigned topic/theme. The second part of the session is devoted to class discussion. *During the discussion, students will follow the lead of the student in charge of the assigned reading. After the initial discussion, the instructor will join to answer and pose questions to students. (*Contingent on the number of students enrolled in the course.)

At the beginning of each class, individual and general feedback will be given to students regarding their assignments. The subsequent questions will be part of the class discussion and students will be able to address the questions of their peers.

[Outline and objectives]

What is our relationship to music? How do we participate in musical activity? How are our musical practices a reflection of our society? In this course we will investigate music from a global perspective. We will pay special attention how musical practices have been influenced or shaped through the movements of people, the movement of music through mediating technologies, and combinations of these factors. Each week students will contemplate specific musical practices in relation to concepts introduced through assigned readings.

[Goal]

Students will be able to:

- (1) develop vocabulary to talk about music;
- (2) develop an awareness and appreciation of various musics of the world;
- (3) develop an ability to recognize how their own musical behavior reflects contemporary society;
- (4) think critically about the complex cultural workings within a piece of music or musical practice.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The course is taught through a combination of lectures, documentary-viewings and group discussions. The course will facilitate self-learning through required weekly reading and listening assignments that will be assessed through short writing assignments, as well as collective learning through a final group presentation. Feedback will be given collectively in class or through the Learning Management System (Google Classroom), depending on the nature of the assignment.

[Outline and objectives]

This course will introduce students to the culture and society of the United States, focusing primarily on events of the 20th and 21st century. A central theme will be the idea of America as a place of unlimited possibility and opportunity. This idea presents the United States as a new type of social experiment, where true freedom is available and where everyone can look to a better future. As we examine this perspective on America, we will further explore the conflict between American ideals and social reality as seen in the tensions between continuity and change, individualism and community, consensus and diversity.

[Goal]

Students will acquire knowledge about various aspects of America and American life, including its history, geography and political system, as well as its economic, educational, social and foreign policy. Students can then expect to (1) acquire general knowledge of the society and people in contemporary America, (2) learn how America developed from a small British colony into a major superpower, and (3) examine the new realities facing America and its global influence. We will be especially interested in understanding the consequences of the current US administration.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Students will attend lectures, read related material, give a class presentation and have two written examinations. Concerning assignments, students will receive feedback in class.

【Outline and objectives】

This course looks at Asian Americans and their experiences in the USA beyond the image of the economically successful "model minority". Focusing on the two oldest Asian minority groups, Japanese and Chinese Americans, but paying attention also to the many other groups included in the category "Asian Americans," students will study the history of Asian immigration to the United States and trace the process and extent of integration of Asian Americans into mainstream society by exploring a range of topics, including the history of immigration and exclusion, the "model minority" thesis, discrimination at work and in education, media images, gender and sexuality, hate crime and violence, relations with other minority groups, and social activism. Through these topics, students will consider critically the meaning of assimilation, citizenship, and "American" as an identity and a classificatory category and will reflect upon their own identities.

【Goal】

Students will learn the multifaceted history and current situations of Asian Americans, and as a result acquire a deeper and more nuanced understanding of race relations in American society. Students can expect to develop skills of written communication and reading comprehension through engaging in critical thinking, analysis, writing, and discussion in this course.

[Outline and objectives]

Cultural studies analyzes the relationship between representation and power. It provides a variety of theoretical perspectives to understand how culture in the form of movies, advertising, music, everyday commodities, and other mediums combines with institutions of power in shaping how we communicate with others, interpret our social world, and formulate our identities.

In this class we will analyze things such as how media becomes a communication tool; how the commodities you consume communicate your social status to others; and how discourse and ideologies formulate your ideas on race, ethnicity, and gender.

[Goal]

Equip students with a variety of theories through which to interpret and critique the language, symbols, and visual images that we encounter and unconsciously internalize in our everyday lives.

To examine how economics, politics, and culture exert power over what and how we think.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Classes consist of lectures and discussion. Much of class time is devoted to examining images, videos, and other media forms. Each class will introduce a major theory from cultural studies, which students will apply both individually and in groups to a particular cultural case study. Individual and detailed feedback will be provided through google classroom for each student.

【Outline and objectives】

This course will introduce learners to a broad range of theories, issues and debates about the societal roles and functions of schools, universities and education systems around the world. Taking a sociological perspective, the objectives of the course are to:

- Introduce learners to a range of theories and approaches to critically analyze the roles of education in society
  - Examine academic achievement and student well-being through international comparisons
  - Explore debates on diversity, inclusion and decoloniality in educational contexts
  - Critically examine the intersections of education and technology
  - Explore debates about social mobility and reproduction through education in the context of gender, race and social class, and consider the role of cram schools in contributing to social inequality
- In addition to the acquisition of content knowledge, students will develop skills for critical online reasoning, understanding lectures given in English, and improve their communication skills through critical engagement with a wide range of topics.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students will gain an understanding of a range of issues related to education and society, and be able to critically engage with debates on education through a solid grounding in education theory and contemporary research.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The primary mode of instruction will be through pre-recorded lectures and readings and in-class discussions. Emphasis will be placed on critical thinking, group and whole-class discussions, and independent research. Assessment will take the form of written assignments and in-class participation.

Feedback will be given by rubric-based grading of weekly reflective assignments, and a final research paper.

【Outline and objectives】

This course serves as an introduction to the sociology of gender and sexuality. The first half of the course covers the sociology of gender, and the second half of the course covers the sociology of sexuality. While a range of issues relevant to gender and sexuality will be taken up, this course focuses on the perspectives offered by relevant social science theories and concepts to interpret findings from social science research. In this course, students will learn to look at gender and sexuality issues critically and understand the subtle social processes through which taken-for-granted ideas and practices about gender and sexuality are created.

【Goal】

By the end of this course, students will be able to: (1) identify the difference between sex, gender, and sexuality, (2) define the key theories and concepts of gender and sexuality (remembering/understanding), (3) apply those concepts to understand how gender and sexuality affect individuals' experiences embedded in structures of power (applying), and (4) analyze the ways in which sex, gender, and sexuality are socially constructed (analyzing).

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3" and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

This course is taught primarily through interactive lectures. A variety of active learning techniques, such as in-class writing assignments, small group discussions, and comment sheets, are used to accommodate diverse student learning styles. In-class quizzes are held occasionally so that students understand their own level of understanding of the course materials at the moment. Verbal and written feedback on assignments is given during class discussions and through using other tools as appropriate. Also, feedback for the previous class is given at the beginning of each class. Students are encouraged to visit the instructor during office hours for more personalized feedback.

Media Effects

Muge Igarashi

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 木2/Thu.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

Media such as news, movies, and the Internet affect us both individually and socially. On the one hand media shapes our everyday lives at the individual level through our inspirations, career goals, and consumption patterns. On the other hand, at the social level, media can influence our perceptions on political decisions, leaders, economic performance, our global allies and/or enemies.

This course examines both of these individual and social effects of media, offering students a toolbox of terms and theories in order to recognize, analyze, and personally manage the pervasive effects of media in our lives.

【Goal】

- 1) Introduce basic terms and theories of media effects research.
- 2) Provide case studies on major topics in media effects research such as violence, consumer desire, nationalism, gender, and culture industries.
- 3) Equip students with basic skills to recognize and manage media effects on a personal level.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course focuses on the impact of the mass media on individuals and society. An overview of the history of media effects research will be presented and dominant theories in the field will be introduced.

Classes will also often include the textual reading of a particular media such as advertisements, TV shows, films, or web pages.

Students should be eager to participate in class discussion and share their ideas and experiences.

Students are required to submit three assignments and to participate in a group presentation.

Feedback on each assignment will be provided individually through Google Classroom.

[Outline and objectives]

This class sees our society through the lens of race, class and gender to understand how privilege and inequality are produced, maintained, naturalized and challenged. The course will look at how various inequalities are connected to one another through examining global, national and local issues. Students will learn to analyze how race, class and gender are connected to each other as intersecting inequalities in a society and the world, and on that basis, consider the possibility of an equal but diverse world.

[Goal]

Through lectures, discussion and written assignments, students will learn concepts and theories to analyze how race, class, gender, sexuality and disability affect individuals and society. They will learn to apply these analytical tools and knowledge to form critical opinions on current issues related to various bases of inequalities. Students will acquire skills in critical thinking, analysis and writing that can be applied in other academic fields as well as future careers.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Outline and objectives]

This course is broadly concerned with the sociological analysis of work and society. Frequently, the first question we ask when we meet someone is “What do you do?” For many, the routine cycle of getting up, getting dressed, going to work and returning home to repeat the cycle the following day is common in contemporary industrialized economies. We devote many hours on the job. Work has powerful effects on both economic and social wellbeing. This course explores the sociological study of both the structure and nature of work, major economic changes including globalization, and concerns of workers such as earnings, promotions, personal finance, the “gigged” society, unemployment and the balance between work and family. We will examine broad topics including: education, the social organization of work, employment trends, inequalities at work, and the purpose of work as it relates to opportunity and rewards. Critical reading of texts, cogent writings, articulate oral presentations, and full participation in dialogue are all mandatory. Class assignments will measure your ability to grasp and apply the sociological perspective from readings and from information emerging from class discussions. Analytical projects provide opportunities to pursue interests in greater depth.

[Goal]

Through this course, students will acquire the basic sociological tools to analyze the development and impact of work and employment by learning the key concepts and theories used in social analysis and applying them in written assignments and discussions. Through the various assignments in this class, students will develop critical thinking, writing, discussion, and research skills.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Lectures are conducted weekly to introduce students to key concepts, theories, and research related to each topic. Students will interview professionals outside of the classroom setting. Short discussions are also integrated into the lectures to help students learn and apply the concepts and theories. In addition, there are also formal small group discussions for which students have to prepare in advance. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System

【Outline and objectives】

The course will help students develop an understanding of the relationship between crime and society. The course explores how crimes are defined, explained, and controlled in society. An overview of the components of justice systems, their development, and processes are explored to offer a comparative approach. The topics in this course include crime trends, theories of crime and behavior, law enforcement, courts, corrections, and crime policy and prevention.

【Goal】

After completing this course students will be able to: Understand the relationships between crime and society; Identify significant crime and victimization patterns; demonstrate the role of theory in understanding crime; explore theoretical hypotheses and research support; Identify and define the roles and functions of law enforcement, the effectiveness of law enforcement strategies and challenges; Demonstrate an understanding of the importance of court systems, including the organization and processes of courts, and the participants in courtroom matters; Describe methods of sentencing and the goals of punishment and rehabilitation; describe the nature of incarceration and community corrections; Discuss the extent of juvenile crimes; describe the treatment of juveniles in the justice system; Comprehend crime policies and prevention initiatives and challenges.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This is a lecture-based course that integrates activities to elicit student interaction. Throughout the semester, participation and discussion activities are also used to actively engage students. Students also demonstrate their knowledge of the content of the course upon completion of the assessments. Each assignment will receive graded feedback and comments on strengths and weaknesses of the submission (this will be available on the classroom online dashboard). During lectures, comments are given on students' insights to further clarify and develop our conversations.

【Outline and objectives】

The course will help students develop an understanding of the relationship between crime and society. The course explores how crimes are defined, explained, and controlled in society. An overview of the components of justice systems, their development, and processes are explored to offer a comparative approach. The topics in this course include crime trends, theories of crime and behavior, law enforcement, courts, corrections, and crime policy and prevention.

【Goal】

After completing this course students will be able to: Understand the relationships between crime and society; Identify significant crime and victimization patterns; demonstrate the role of theory in understanding crime; explore theoretical hypotheses and research support; Identify and define the roles and functions of law enforcement, the effectiveness of law enforcement strategies and challenges; Demonstrate an understanding of the importance of court systems, including the organization and processes of courts, and the participants in courtroom matters; Describe methods of sentencing and the goals of punishment and rehabilitation; describe the nature of incarceration and community corrections; Discuss the extent of juvenile crimes; describe the treatment of juveniles in the justice system; Comprehend crime policies and prevention initiatives and challenges.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This is a lecture-based course that integrates activities to elicit student interaction. Throughout the semester, participation and discussion activities are also used to actively engage students. Students also demonstrate their knowledge of the content of the course upon completion of the assessments. Each assignment will receive graded feedback and comments on strengths and weaknesses of the submission (this will be available on the classroom online dashboard). During lectures, comments are given on students' insights to further clarify and develop our conversations.

【Outline and objectives】

Every aspect of our lives is directly or indirectly regulated by various laws. In this course, students are introduced to the study of law and society from a multidisciplinary and comparative perspective. We will discuss why people (and corporations and other institutions) obey or do not obey laws, and how they act when resolving disputes. We will also study in-depth the ways in which law shapes society, how society influences law, and effectively bringing about social changes.

【Goal】

Upon completion of this course, students should have a better understanding of the role of law in society, and its impact (or lack of it) on individuals as well as society as a whole. Students will learn to analyze and apply abstract principles, and organize new information and their thoughts. Through group discussion and student presentations, students will develop their skills of communication and cooperation, as well as experience the importance of peer-learning.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】
Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

Throughout the semester, we will discuss specific topics related to law and social change, and the impact of law on society. Students will be expected to read materials concerning the basic concepts and ideas in sociology of law, attend and participate in classroom discussions, and complete assignments based on the readings. Students will also be required to make presentations, and engage actively in class discussion. Students also demonstrate their acquisition and mastery of the course content upon completion of the assessments. For assignments, discussions, and exams feedback is given in the form of comments which is available on the classroom online dashboard; during the lectures, students will also receive feedback to further clarify and develop conversations that arise from the lectures.

[Outline and objectives]

The main objective of this course is to theoretically and practically understand the new trends in accounting: accounting for sustainability and social impact. After taking this course, students will gain relevant knowledge about accounting for corporate sustainability and social impact. More specifically, students can learn the basics of how to recognize, measure, and report corporate sustainability and social impact.

[Goal]

This course consists of accounting for sustainability and social impact, both of which have recently gained prominence in corporations and attracted stakeholders' attention. By taking this course, students can understand theories and academic findings regarding accounting for sustainability and social impact. Moreover, students can discuss practical topics such as specific institutions (some frameworks to calculate sustainability and social impact) and real leading companies' practices.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course is taught through lectures, discussions and exercises. At my discretion, I may assign one or more mini-projects to be completed during, or outside of, the class. Occasionally, students are required to submit reaction paper (mini-essay) at the end of the session. Students are also encouraged to ask questions and to request that particular points be explained if they remain confused or uncertain about items discussed during the class. Feedback on the students' performance in the assignments during the course will be given. At the end of the course, final exam and (individual or group) presentation will be assigned.

【Outline and objectives】

To explore effective management for building a strong corporate / regional brand. Brand strategy has been receiving attention since the 1980s, after the innovative concept of brand equity became an important part of marketing strategy, helping companies and local governments to survive a competitive marketplace. In this course, students will examine some significant theories by Aaker and Keller, who are eminent researchers in this field. Basic /advanced theories by other researchers will also be explored.

【Goal】

The purpose of this course is to develop an understanding of branding and branding strategy. Students will learn effective ways to build a strong brand.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

In this course, students will read theories, discuss and analyze some case studies to find out the most suitable processes for building a strong brand, which will be helpful in increasing domestic and overseas sales. Moreover, as a wrap-up, we will also discuss the future outlook of brand management from a strategic viewpoint.

Feedback can be given verbally, non-verbally or in written form.

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

In this class, we will explore different elements of contemporary creative industries and their surrounding cultures in Japan. This will include examining the differing conceptions of creativity they enable, and how this is connected to changes in media technologies and business strategies. Over the course of the semester we will explore the history of the idea of creative industries, examining specific industries in Japan. We will be focusing on the areas that are currently promoted locally and globally as key cultural industries in Japan. This includes anime, manga, toys, and the character business, exploring how these industries interacted and influenced one another. We will then move on to see how this connects to other industries, such as tourism. Lastly, we will examine the Japanese fashion industry in detail. For each of these commercial industries, we will analyze their production, distribution, and consumption as we examine different approaches to branding and creativity.

【Goal】

In addition to teaching the students information on the cultural production, economics, and marketing of the creative industries, this class aims to develop critical thinking and analytical skills. Throughout the semester students will: 1) critically engage with the concept of creativity; 2) learn the history of different creative industries and their shifts in business strategies and marketing; 3) explore how these shifts reflect societal changes in Japan.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will be lecture-based, with visual material such as clips of films and animation. Students will be asked to have group discussions and analyses on certain themes. Each week students will be provided with an academic reading relevant to the topic. These readings will be important background information and/or will be directly addressed as the topic of the lecture and discussion. Lectures will explain in detail and through examples the topic for that class. Discussions based on the lecture will be facilitated by questions from the instructor to help the students explore and develop their critical and analytical skills for that topic. Students will be assessed on their understanding of the lectures and readings through their presentations and papers. Students will receive feedback in class and in written form, based on a grading rubric.

[Outline and objectives]

This course is an active learning course centered on the fundamentals of entrepreneurship and entrepreneurial management. The course is positioned as an entry point for learners who think that they might want to start their own business “someday,” and want to learn about — and practice elements of — the lean startup process now. Specifically, the course is designed to help learners develop a better understanding of how to find, frame, and solve problems; generate and/or discover business ideas; articulate and evaluate business concepts; convert surviving business concepts into business opportunities through creativity, market analysis and segmentation, design thinking, lean startup customer development processes and business model design while searching for a validated business model; and then prepare to drive sales while leveraging a digital presence and infrastructure.

[Goal]

The learning goal of the course is developing entrepreneurial management competency. The learning objectives for this course include the following: developing an entrepreneurial mindset; understanding various frameworks; developing critical thinking, communication, leadership, teamwork, and ethical reasoning skills; developing a practice of reflection.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

- Preparation. Students must complete the assigned reading and take the pre-class quiz before each class.
- Class. In the first half of each class, there is a lecture. After the lecture, students break into groups to complete experiential exercises that require students to apply key concepts from the lecture and the assigned reading.
- Review & Reflect. After each class, students must complete a journal entry describing their key takeaways from the class. Teams must submit the results of their experiential exercise.
- The Mid-Term is a Short Paper that includes a description of a Business Concept and a 5Cs analysis.
- The Final Deliverable in the course is a Business Model Canvas and Executive Summary.
- Feedback. Feedback is provided via the grade book feature in the Learning Management System (LMS) used by the Professor. Additionally, when warranted, comments are provided by the Professor via the LMS.

14	Course Wrap Up	This session is a review of the course.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Before each class, participants complete the assigned reading(s) and complete an online quiz. After each class, students summarize their key takeaways in an online journal entry; teams submit the results of their experiential exercise. In accordance with MEXT guidelines for 2-credit courses, I recommend allocating at least 150 minutes to read the assigned reading, and at least 150 minutes to review, reflect, and write the post-class journal entry after each class.

[Textbooks]

The instructor will create an online coursepack of readings from the Harvard Business School Publishing repository. The cost of the coursepack is approximately US $60. (Note: Payments for the coursepack can be made with either a credit card or a debit card).

【休講】 General Topics II: Business Ethics

休講

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 集中・その他/intensive・other courses | Year : 2~4

Day/Period :

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

Business Ethics covers a variety of contemporary case studies which demonstrates the dynamics between what could be called opportunity and misconduct. Over the years this has led to conflicts of interest, even more regulation to try and separate rule-makers from the rule-enforcers and the players and, where that fails, often catastrophic results ensue. This course aims to provide students with a framework to understand and deal with the fundamentals of ethics applied to the business world. We will look at various case studies to observe how companies operate within the grey area and/or have not acted responsibly in a highly competitive environment. This course will delve into specific areas that touch upon business ethics such as sustainability, ESG and technology. Students are encouraged to gain awareness of the interconnectedness of organizations and nations in a globalized world and how their actions as managers will affect different stakeholders, nations and the world as a whole.

【Goal】

Using the critical thinking assignments and class discussions, students will be able to apply their knowledge to case-studies and group work. Skills they acquire through this course should prepare them to understand key technical terms and give a better understanding of the business world.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Lessons will be structured with an initial lecture covering key themes and then a discussion of one or two case studies and examples. Students will be assigned three graded assignments, will sit two quizzes and one final exam.

Written feedback will be provided to the student individually on each graded assignment, quiz results will be shared also individually. The grades of the last exam will be sent back after grading, inclusive of personalized comments.

Marketing Research

Kayhan Tajeddini

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 木 5/Thu.5

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This course will provide an introduction to market research as a business decision-making tool. The primary goal of this course is to equip students with an understanding of how market research can help them make business decisions and how they can transform research findings into actionable business insights. The course also aims to help students gain the ability to evaluate and interpret research designed and conducted by outside providers. During the course, we will discuss a wide range of research methods, including in-depth interviews, focus groups, surveys and modeling, and their application to the services and non-profit sectors. We will also discuss data sources and data collection methods. Students will have the opportunity to define a business problem, develop a research plan, collect and analyze data and present findings and their implications as a class project.

This course aims to help students:

- (1) Discuss what market research is and how, why, and when it's useful.
- (2) Identify a range of market research tools (e.g., focus groups, interviews, surveys), consider their strengths and weaknesses, and discuss when it would (and wouldn't) make sense to use each.
- (3) Use these tools to solve business problems and craft business strategies.

【Goal】

At the completion of this course, students are expected to be able to:

- (1) Understand the importance of marketing research
- (2) Formulate a research problem
- (3) Design a questionnaire
- (4) Collect respondent data
- (5) Enter respondent data into a computerized spreadsheet
- (6) Analyze respondent data with statistical software
- (7) Write a research report
- (8) Make a in-class presentation about the findings

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course will be lecture, case, and discussion based. The assignments are designed to help students build skills that cover scientific, information, and communication literacy. Effort will be made to make the class both challenging and exciting.

We will use a combination of text and cases to explore and apply the topics. It is vitally important that you come to class prepared and ready to discuss the topics. If you read and prepare the materials you will learn more during the discussions and will be successful at the assignments.

Regarding the presentation and case studies, it will be explained in the first class with all guidelines, expectations and standards. The strengths and weaknesses of each presentation and reports will be discussed individually.

Organizational Behavior

Junko Shimazoe

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 金5/Fri.5

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

In this course, students learn (1) why modern organizations behave as they do, (2) how the behavior emerges from inside the organization, and (3) how exogenous forces influence formation of the behavior. Since studies of organizations are fundamentally cross-disciplinary, this course approaches organizations from sociological, social psychological, public policy, and psychological perspectives about organizational behavior. For the same reason, examples covered in this course include organizations in the public, private, and non-profit sectors. At the end of this course, students will develop a multifaceted view of their own to explain various problems of modern organizations.

[Goal]

This course has three goals. First, students are expected to understand the scientific approach to study organizations. For example, what does it mean to study organizational behavior in a scientific manner? What are the objects of studying, organizational structure, performance, routines, or interactions among people and organizations? How is it possible to explain the relationship between behavior of people and organizational behavior? Second, students are expected to understand “organic aspects” of organizations. Organizations are more than machines whose structures and rules repeatedly generate intended results. Members interact with each other and in organizational contexts, from which unintended outcomes may emerge. In addition, organizations are influenced from temporal, geographical, and other environmental conditions. It is important for students to understand organizations as evolving and interactive actors with members and other organizations. Finally, students are expected to become able to explain problems caused by modern organizations in their own words. Regardless of their career after graduation, organizations are everywhere in modern life, and students may encounter minor to major issues caused both in and by organizations. It is essential for students to apply concepts that they learn in this course to organizational behavior that they observe in real life.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

In each class, I will assign readings to explore the topic of the next class. Finish them before class.

Active participation in class is required. In this course, we will use lectures by the instructor, audiovisual materials, discussion, and group presentations. The contents covered in class will go beyond assigned readings of the week. In the case of being unable to come to the class, send an e-mail in advance to the lecturer unless the reason is that you are sick.

In this course, students work together to study and make a presentation about organizational accidents. In the group presentation, explain the probable causes of the accidents and their implications to society using the knowledge from this course. Do not simply repeat what the internet sources, books, or other authorities say about the problems. Build your own explanation based on what you learn in this course. Students will receive feedback on their presentations in class.

Development Economies

Delgado Narro Augusto Ricardo

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2～4

Day/Period : 木4/Thu.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This is an introductory course to the field of Economic Development. This course aims to understand the main issues of development economics, analyze the economic problems of developing countries, and discuss strategies for achieving inclusive growth and reducing poverty and extreme inequality. This understanding will help the students answer key questions: Why do some countries achieve high levels of economic development and others do not? What policies can governments implement to change their countries' growth path? This course will start from a "macro" perspective and later introduce a "micro" viewpoint of the problems to explore the socioeconomic factors that affect economic development. This course will cover economic growth, agricultural development, food security, population, education, migration, poverty reduction, informality, and more.

[Goal]

1. Understand: (1) why some emerging countries have been successful in catching up with rich countries in per capita income while others are left behind, (2) why half of humanity remains poor, and many of them are living with less than $2 per day, and (3) why environmental degradation and resource exploitation are commonly associated with income growth.
2. Understand: what can be done to promote development through policies. Learn to analyze the economic and social impacts of specific initiatives.
3. Use data to conduct development analyses such as growth diagnostics, poverty assessments, impact analysis of development projects.
4. Encourage students to explore alternative paths of economic development that promote the well-being of individuals and communities.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The course combines lectures and student presentations. The first part of the course will be conducted through lectures with the objective of learning, understanding, and using the fundamental concepts of development economics. Additionally, we will analyze some applications of our learned concepts. Students are encouraged and expected to participate in classes.

In the last part of our course, we will have presentations depending on the number of students. Feedback will be given to students at the end of each presentation.

【Outline and objectives】

This course will provide students with more knowledge of the core theories in macroeconomics, particularly on the economics of open economies, unemployment, monetary growth and inflation, and the model of aggregate demand and supply. Moreover, the role of fiscal and monetary policy to stimulate the economy will be discussed.

To prepare students for embarking confidently on their journey in the world of economic analysis and for seriously analyzing the economic signals and data we all face daily to be able to justify views and opinions with sound economic reasoning.

【Goal】

By the end of this course, students should be able to:

1. Apply macroeconomic knowledge to analyze contemporary macroeconomic issues and real-world problems.
2. Learn and apply the theory of the open economy to understand the factors that affect the economy's trade balance and exchange rate.
3. Understand the determinants of inflation, and apply the money-demand-and-supply model and the quantity equation to explain increases in the level of prices as well as its consequences.
4. Understand unemployment and the main factors that contribute to structural and frictional unemployment.
5. Learn the most important macroeconomic (Keynesian) model that is used by governments (policymakers) to formulate fiscal and monetary policies that stimulate the economy.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course will be mainly conducted through lectures, with analysis of appropriate case studies related to each topic. Students are expected to read the required material prior to the lecture to discuss and solve problems in class. Assignments and related feedback will be given via the learning-management system. Additionally, midterm-exam and in-class-assignment feedback will be provided in class.

[Outline and objectives]

This is the second part to an introductory course in microeconomics. (See prerequisite below.)

In this semester, we will continue covering fundamental concepts and principles in microeconomics. This time, we will focus on producer and consumer theory and the labor market. In the first half of the semester, we will study firm behavior and market structures. In the second half of the semester, we will discuss consumer theory. The labor market and income determination will also be examined.

[Goal]

The intention of this course is to integrate theory and application. At the end of the course, students should grasp and be able to discuss fundamental concepts in microeconomics, i.e. how different market structures affect producers and consumers and how the labor market works. Students should be able to examine issues related to consumption, production, the labor market, income inequality, and poverty.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

At the beginning of class, feedback for the previous class is given using some comments from submitted reaction papers.

Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

【Outline and objectives】

This course aims at helping students to learn the confluence of major technological forces—cloud computing, big data, artificial intelligence, and the Internet of Things—in driving a new digital society. In doing so, students will understand how digital-age companies such as Amazon, Google, Netflix, and Spotify are creating new business models.

【Goal】

Students will understand the role of digital technologies in determining the capabilities of both incumbents and digital-born companies. To do so, students will learn how companies have transformed their business models and how they have embedded new technologies in their organizational fabric. This will be covered from the era of post-industrial society to the digital society. Also, using multiple case studies, students will be able to explore and analyze how contemporary organizations have led their own digital transformation.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 2”, “DP 3” and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course will proceed with lecture, readings, group presentation, and discussion. Students are required to read each chapter of a textbook in advance and submit a summary of it every week. After lecture by an instructor, students will participate in group presentation and subsequent discussion. For the group presentation, students should prepare case studies that are relevant to the content covered in the given week. The instructor will give feedback for each group's presentation in class.

【Outline and objectives】

Big data and analytics is an approach to deal with, and to make sense of, the huge volumes of data that are generated daily, at unprecedented rates, worldwide. The course aims to generate a solid understanding of the wider big data and analytics environment. To deepen this understanding, the course provides an opportunity for students to experience, on a basic level, some of the tools, techniques and frameworks underpinning the rich, and challenging field of big data and analytics.

【Goal】

By the end of the semester, students should be familiar with the history and evolution of the field of big data and analytics and understand fundamental concepts and process of the wider big data and analytics environment. In addition, students should be familiar with some of the main tools, techniques, and frameworks of big data and analytics through various computer-based (programming) exercises. Finally, students should have gained an awareness of the impact big data and analytics has on modern society, humanity, and, perhaps, the world at large.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The main elements of the course are lectures, assignments, computer-based (programming) exercises, and in-class discussions. The lectures relate to the topics mentioned in the course schedule below. A class typically provides feedback and guidance on assignments. In addition, classes provide an opportunity for students to learn and understand current issues in big data and analytics via a range of hands-on, computer-based (programming) exercises.

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Class preparation and review for this class are 2 hours each. Students are expected to read various course related materials carefully to acquire a thorough understanding of the ideas and concepts presented to them in class. In addition, students are given weekly assignments. These assignments are an important element in the course and contribute to the overall mark that a student may achieve.

【Outline and objectives】

This course aims at learning why and how contemporary organizations perform data visualization from a managerial perspective and understanding how to use one of the most popular data visualization tools, Tableau.

【Goal】

By participating in lecture and practice, students will (1) understand the opportunities, implication, and limitations of data visualization in contemporary organizations, (2) learn how to analyze and critically evaluate ideas, arguments, and perspective, and (3) develop skills on a data visualization tool needed by business professionals.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course will proceed with lecture, group presentation, and practice of software. Doing so helps students understand how to use a data visualization tool as well as the role of data visualization from a managerial perspective.

The class involves lecture and group presentation that are aimed to understand the basics of data analytics use (in this course, data visualization tool) in contemporary organizations and how it affects the paradigm of operational work processes in the company.

In addition, the class involves practical learning of Tableau. Students will learn how to use software called Tableau from the instructor and work on multiple examples with using Tableau. The instructor will give a brief review and feedback on the previous class every week.

Environment and Development

Stephen Chitengi Sakapaji

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 水1/Wed.1

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course examines the complex relationship between environmental issues and development processes, focusing on the interplay between economic development, environmental degradation, and social well-being. The course integrates theoretical perspectives from political ecology, sustainable development, and environmental governance with real-world case studies from both the Global North and South. Students will critically explore themes such as climate change, natural resource management, biodiversity conservation, environmental justice, and sustainable development.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will:

1. Understand the key concepts and debates in the field of environment and development.
2. Critically assess the environmental impacts of various development models.
3. Explore the role of international, national, and local institutions in managing environmental challenges.
4. Analyze case studies from different regions and assess sustainable development initiatives.
5. Evaluate policy responses to environmental challenges and their implications for equity and social justice.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3” and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The course will be structured around weekly lectures, class discussions, presentations, debates, and readings from textbooks and articles. Each session will focus on a specific theme or case study, allowing students to delve into the core concepts and engage critically with the material. Feedback will be given through the following:

- Comments from submitted reaction papers and insightful comments from reaction papers will be introduced in class and used in deeper discussions.
- Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.
- In the final class, comments and explanations will be given for assignments (tests and reports, etc.) for all classes taken/held during the semester.

【Outline and objectives】

Students in this course will do a comprehensive exploration of the intricate relationship between human societies and the environment. They will examine the interplay of cultural, political, and economic factors in shaping environmental changes. The ultimate goal of this course is for the students to understand these interactions and help in building environmentally sustainable societies. Through this understanding, students will be equipped to contribute to the development of practices and policies that promote environmental health and sustainability, addressing the urgent need for societies that can coexist harmoniously with the natural world.

【Goal】

- 1.To provide students with an in-depth understanding of the dynamic interrelationship between society and the environment.
- 2.To enable students to critically analyze the impact of culture, politics, and economics on environmental issues.
- 3.To encourage students to develop sustainable solutions to pressing environmental challenges.
- 4.To combine varied perspectives, including ethics and global considerations, for comprehensive sustainable development.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course will be delivered through a combination of traditional lectures and active student participation in class discussions. There will be group presentations based on the design of future societies. Responses to student assignments, quizzes, and mid-term exams, will be provided during classroom sessions or via the Hosei Learning Management System.

【Changes following student comments】

In response to student feedback and my own reflections, I have implemented two key enhancements to the course:

1. Group Project on Designing Future Cities: Students will collaborate to design future urban environments that address current and anticipated environmental challenges. This project encourages innovative thinking and practical application of course concepts.
2. Weekly Discussion Questions: Each week, students will prepare solutions to assigned discussion questions related to course material and present them in the following class. This initiative aims to foster critical thinking, active engagement, and collaborative learning.

Students in this course will do a comprehensive exploration of the intricate relationship between human societies and the environment. They will examine the interplay of cultural, political, and economic factors in shaping environmental changes. The ultimate goal of this course is for the students to understand these interactions and help in building environmentally sustainable societies. Through this understanding, students will be equipped to contribute to the development of practices and policies that promote environmental health and sustainability, addressing the urgent need for societies that can coexist harmoniously with the natural world.

【Goal】

- 1.To provide students with an in-depth understanding of the dynamic interrelationship between society and the environment.
- 2.To enable students to critically analyze the impact of culture, politics, and economics on environmental issues.
- 3.To encourage students to develop sustainable solutions to pressing environmental challenges.
- 4.To combine varied perspectives, including ethics and global considerations, for comprehensive sustainable development.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course will be delivered through a combination of traditional lectures and active student participation in class discussions. There will be group presentations based on the design of future societies. Responses to student assignments, quizzes, and mid-term exams, will be provided during classroom sessions or via the Hosei Learning Management System.

American Politics and Foreign Policy

Jonathan Seth Snider

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 月 1/Mon. 1

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

The purpose of this introductory course is to facilitate a broad understanding of the theories, concepts and issues associated with a sub-discipline of Political Science – American Politics. Research within this large and extensive field of study holds many points of applications, including various inputs into policymaking. Generally, the study of this discipline at the undergraduate level entails a broad range of political, military and institutional issues at a fairly theoretical level. Throughout the course, this approach will be complemented by a deeper dive into several real-world case studies from the perspective of the theoretical tools learned.

【Goal】

- 1) Students are expected to develop an understanding of basic structure of the United States government.
- 2) Students are expected to gain knowledge of the ways in which different branches of the United States government interact and impact foreign policy.
- 3) Students are expected to understand and critically analyze how governmental and non-governmental factors influence American politics and foreign policy.
- 4) Students are expected to understand some of the political ideals that have influenced American politics since the country's founding.
- 5) Students are expected to develop their ability to engage in academic research and writing through the completion of short essays.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course will be structured around lectures.

There will also be discussion questions for each week's lecture topic. Although time will be given in class to answer these questions, the questions will be posted on Hoppii each week. Students will be expected to post answers to these questions.

Feedback: Assignments will be submitted on Hoppii, and feedback will be included.

[Outline and objectives]

This course will address the basic knowledge, theoretical models and perspectives of Chinese domestic politics and foreign policy. For domestic politics, this course will introduce the Chinese political ideology and party-state structure, and analyze the current political institution and leadership system, as well as its political struggle and possible agenda for political reform. For foreign policy, this course will shed some light on the black box of Chinese foreign policy decision-making process, elaborate the hot topics related to Chinese foreign policy including nationalism, maritime ambition, the Belt and Road Initiative (BRI) strategy, and finally provide some detailed analysis on China's most two important bilateral foreign relations: China-US relations and China-Japan relations.

[Goal]

To help students gain basic knowledge, theoretical models and perspectives of Chinese domestic politics and foreign policy. Students will obtain the ability and skills to analyze issues related to Chinese politics and foreign policy. Students will also be able to deepen their understanding about what is happening related to China nowadays.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Lectures will be conducted based on PowerPoint slides every week. Students are required to read related materials to prepare for classes in advance. There will be also time for team discussion in class. Students are also required to do the assignments weekly. Feedbacks and comments for assignments of previous class are given at the beginning of class.

【Outline and objectives】

This course covers the studies of Foreign Policy Analysis (FPA). FPA is the scholarship that explores the processes by which foreign policy decisions are made by governments. It examines the interplay between various individual, domestic, and international factors that shape foreign policy, such as ideologies and personalities of political leaders, the functions and peculiarities of bureaucracies, the roles of the mass media and public opinion, and the structural distribution of state capabilities.

【Goal】

The course objectives are: (1) to enable students to demonstrate an understanding of the processes involved in foreign policy decision-making; (2) to enable students to demonstrate an understanding of the contexts, pressures and constraints with which policy-makers must deal; (3) to enable students to demonstrate their ability to engage in comparative analysis of the foreign policies of major countries.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course will first examine the key concepts and theories in foreign policy analysis (FPA), which are essential for understanding the contexts, pressures and constraints with which policy-makers must deal. These include the Rational Actor Model, the cognitive and psychological approaches, the bureaucratic politics approaches, the role of history and identity in foreign policy, and other internal-external factors influencing foreign policy decisions. After examining the major approaches in FPA, students will conduct case studies. For this reason, students will be required to give a group presentation based on readings relating to the foreign policies of the major states.

Comments for assignments are given during class and office hours.

【Outline and objectives】

This course provides students with the fundamental knowledge of the role and activities of International Organizations, with a focus on the United Nations System.

The course consists of four parts. The first part lays the foundations by discussing the theoretical basis of the study of International Organizations. In the second part, we will examine the activities of the United Nations in the field of peace and security. The third part will deal with human rights. In the fourth part, we examine the impact of the UN in the field of development, including contemporary issues such as climate change and global health governance.

【Goal】

The aim of the course is to provide students with theoretical and empirical knowledge about the role of the United Nations on important issues of relevance to their future roles as global citizens.

Students who have completed this course will be able to -explain the basic theories and approaches in the study of International Organizations,
-explain the main roles and functions of the UN in the field of peace and security, human rights, and development, and
-critically assess the effectiveness and impact of the UN on contemporary issues and real-life global problems.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The teaching method will be based on a combination of lectures and discussion. You will be encouraged to engage in critical debate, thorough textual analysis, guided research and group work.

Classes are generally divided into three parts. The first part consists of a short warming-up discussion of the reading material, where we identify the main issues. This will be followed by a lecture by the instructor about the session's topic. In the third part, discussion activities will give you the chance to ask questions and share your opinions with the class. You will be given timely feedback on your essays through Hoppii.

【Outline and objectives】

This course covers the approaches to security studies, a sub-discipline of International Relations (IR). Security studies mainly examines the causes of interstate and intrastate war; the conditions for international peace; State strategies to guarantee their survival and security, the ways of managing and resolving international and domestic armed conflicts; and the impact of new technologies, weapons and ideas on the ways states engage in war.

【Goal】

The course objectives are: (1) to enable students to develop a broader understanding of the key theories and concepts in security studies; (2) to examine major security challenges in the international arena through the lens of relevant theories and concepts; (3) to acquire the ability to form their own answers to enduring and contemporary questions inherent in international security studies.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course has two segments: First, presenting major theories and concepts in security studies, necessary for understanding contemporary security policies and issues.

Second, examining contemporary security challenges related to armed conflicts, arms trade and military competition, nuclear proliferation, genocide and mass killings, and terrorism.

Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

[Outline and objectives]

This course covers the approaches to security studies, a sub-discipline of International Relations (IR). Security studies mainly examines the causes of war; the conditions for peace; strategies for avoiding conflict, managing and resolving disputes; and the impact of new technologies, weapons, actors and ideas on states' calculations on whether to use force.

[Goal]

The course objectives are: (1) to enable students to develop a broader understanding of the key theories and concepts in security studies; (2) to examine major security challenges in the international arena through the lens of theories and concepts; (3) to acquire the ability to form their own answers to enduring and contemporary questions inherent in international security studies.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course has two segments: First, presenting major theories and concepts in security studies, necessary for understanding contemporary security policies and issues.

Second, examining contemporary security challenges related to armed conflicts, arms trade and military competition, nuclear proliferation, genocide and mass killings, and terrorism.

Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

[Outline and objectives]

This course offers an overview over the main issues that inform Japan's contemporary diplomatic relations. After reviewing theories of international relations and critically discussing their value for analysing international relations in East Asia, a brief historic overview will introduce the main topics of Japan's modern foreign relations. After this, the course proceeds by looking into several case studies of Japan's foreign policy, focussing on bilateral and multilateral relations. Topics discussed include Japan's territorial disputes with its neighbours, Japan's efforts to manage the rise of China, aspects of Japan's efforts in the field of international cooperation, Japanese proposals for fostering regionalization in Asia, and its efforts to tackle the growing global climate crisis.

[Goal]

Students who have completed this course should be able to:

- understand the main issues that inform Japan's international position and develop individual research interests
- understand the variables that shape Japan's present foreign relations
- critically assess the various interests of the major regional powers in Asia, including Japan
- gain an understanding of the most prominent theories of international relations, and be able to relate them to contemporary issues

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Students are required to read mandatory assignments each week. Lectures will be used to introduce each topic; afterwards, a critical discussion will take place where students are strongly encouraged to voice their own opinions. In the second half of the semester, depending on the number of participants, students will have the opportunity to give individual or group presentations on a topic of their interest. Students are required to hand in discussion points for the reading before each class, which will be the basis for the in-class discussion. Teacher feedback will be given during the discussions and after the optional presentations; comments on the results of the two examinations will be given in written form in a timely manner.

[Outline and objectives]

The course centers on Asia, the most dynamic region in the world, to derive core policy lessons for economic development in the global context. Asia has achieved a remarkable growth during the past five decades, and its success has been referred to as a “miracle”. However, not all Asian economies have attained the same degree of success. The objective of this course is to learn how a group of Asian countries made it from low income into high income in a single generation. A key feature of the successful Asian economies has been their focus on structural transformation, that is, their capacity to shift resources from sectors of low productivity into sectors of high productivity, and upgrade the production and export baskets. After reviewing conventional development/growth theories, this course assesses Asia’s development from the lens of changing production and employment structures, and discusses implications for long-term growth and poverty reduction. The course pays due attention to the heterogeneity of Asian economies in their level of development and clarifies major causes of the divergence. This course is unique in its persistent focus on structural transformation and its applications of several new analytical tools originated from the network theory in physics.

[Goal]

Students who have taken this course should be able to:

- (1)understand the main growth mechanism: structural transformation, in the development process;
- (2)understand differences in development through the lens of structural transformation;
- (3)understand what the government can do to facilitate the process of structural transformation.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The intent of this course is to expose students to a range of ideas and issues in economic development. Students will be provided an opportunity to learn, think and discuss broadly and deeply about development issues across various development systems through lectures, discussions, group work, presentations and homework. Comments will be provided to assignments. Good works will be presented in class.

[Outline and objectives]

This course aims to introduce students to key concepts, themes, and approaches to African politics using the interdisciplinary methods of global studies. The course has, among others, objectives such as: a) to create awareness and an understanding of major issues in African politics; and b) to familiarise the students with the approaches and theories applied by political scientists in analysing the political development in Africa.

[Goal]

This course will focus on building academic skills by encouraging students to acquire analytical skills on a variety of issues in the discipline of global studies through the study of politics in Africa. Furthermore, students will be exposed to readings and discussions that will develop and improve academic reading and writing skills in the social sciences, with the goal of sparking an interest in conducting social research. Overall, this course will also encourage students to develop an interest in and inclinations towards Africa-related issues, including areas beyond politics, in order to expand their capacity for wider course selection and career prospects.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3” and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course will focus on building an academic exchange and having discussions on each week's thematic areas. As an exercise to help students acquire reading and comprehension skills for academic articles, students will be expected to submit five key terms and one thesis statement from each assigned reading. The key terms and thesis statement will form the basis for in-class discussions. Students are also expected to familiarise themselves with the contemporary political discourse in Africa via BBC Focus on Africa. Although the instructor will use most of the time to explain the content of the class, students are encouraged to keep in mind that the style of the class is not a monologue but a discussion format. Students' input will be through class discussions and a research-based essay to be submitted for final evaluation. For all written assignments, students will receive written feedback with corrections and recommendations from the instructor. Students are also encouraged to consult the instructor after the class session (the instructor will be available for 30 minutes after class) or make an appointment through email.

14	Conclusion and End-term	Reflections on Africa in global political discourse & End-term evaluation report (an improved version of the mid-term report in essay format).

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

In order for the students to participate and express their thoughts in class and in writing, they need to make adequate preparations. Students are advised to set aside 4 hours of preparatory study and review time for this class. The instructor will issue guiding questions at the end of every class for the next reading. Attempting to answer these questions will help the students grasp the main theme of the assigned readings. At least twice in the semester, students will be asked to watch recommended news items and documentaries outside of class.

[Textbooks]

The following text books will be reserved in the library for students' reference. Those who can manage to purchase the books are encouraged to do so. Cheeseman, N., Anderson, D., & Scheibler, A. (Eds.). (2017). Routledge Handbook of African Politics, Routledge.

[References]

A wide range of diverse materials and recommended readings may be provided in class for every session. Nevertheless, these two texts are highly recommended. a) Thomson, A. (2016). An Introduction to African Politics (4th ed.). London: Routledge. b) Englebert, P., & Dunn, K. (2014). Inside African politics. Cape Town: UCT Press.

[Grading criteria]

20%: Identification of key terms and the main claim of the assigned readings.

20%: Pop Quizzes.

20%: Mid-Term Report.

40%: End-Term Evaluation Report (an improved version of the mid-term report).

The purpose of pop quizzes is to enhance students' comprehension of key concepts covered in the class. There will be five pop quizzes. The dates and timing of the pop quizzes will not be disclosed to the students. Out of the five pop quizzes, only the top four will be used for grading. Pop quizzes will be ten short answer identification questions that will cover the contents discussed in the class.

Both the midterm and end-term evaluations will be a reflection on the topics we have covered in class, emphasising the context, causes, and consequences of political themes from the lecture materials and required readings. While previewing the questions is not encouraged, the themes for essays may be provided ahead of time to allow students to conduct prior research.

[Outline and objectives]

This course aims to introduce to undergraduate students the politics of Southeast Asia, one of the most politically, culturally, and economically diverse regions in the world. A major theme running through this course is the relations between the current state of political affairs in Southeast Asia and its colonial legacy and the prospects of democratization in the region.

[Goal]

The primary objectives of this course are:

To introduce students to the Southeast Asian states and their contemporary political systems.

To explore the connections between the colonial period and modern Southeast Asia, as well as the interactions among Southeast Asian countries.

To enhance students' critical thinking skills by encouraging them to analyze current political issues in Southeast Asia, identify challenges, and propose solutions.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course covers a number of topics about Southeast Asia through a historical lens. During the first segment of the course (Week 1 to 4), an overall introduction to Southeast Asia and its history is provided. This serves as the historical context for the next segment (Week 5 to 10), which further discusses nationalism and ethnicity, politics and religions in Southeast Asia. The last segment of the course (Week 11 to 13) examines the establishment and the role of ASEAN, outside political influence over Southeast Asia, and non-traditional security threats facing the region.

Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System so please make sure to check the course's website each week before class.

【Outline and objectives】

This course provides an introduction to public policy, which Thomas R. Dye defines simply, as “whatever governments choose to do or not to do.” This course examines the nature of public policies, how they are made, implemented and evaluated, and the central institutions and actors involved in policy-making.

The course pays particular attention to the theoretical approaches to policy-making. It delves into the stages of the policy process: problem definition and agenda-setting; policy formulation and adoption; implementation; and evaluation. The course also covers governance and policy-making; public policies beyond the nation-state; and policy change and policy convergence.

To help develop analytical and critical thinking on public policy, students will be asked to form groups that would conduct their own analysis of policies undertaken by the Japanese government in certain policy areas, such as economic, welfare, health, education, immigration, gender, defense or environmental policy.

Policy analysis, as Dye puts it, is “finding out what governments do, why they do it, and what difference, if any, it makes.” In the latter part of the course, the groups will be asked to submit written reports and to make powerpoint presentations on the policies studied and policy outcomes and impacts.

【Goal】

The course seeks:

- ・ To acquaint students with public policy as an academic sub-discipline.
- ・ To introduce students to key theories, concepts and/or approaches used in policy-making, policy implementation and policy evaluation.
- ・ To help students examine public policies more critically.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course will consist mainly of lectures, open discussion, and class activities. Students will be asked as well as encouraged to express their views on the topic being discussed. Audio-visual aids such as short video clips, photos, maps and illustrations will be used to help make issues and events much more concrete and vivid to students, and to help stimulate or enliven discussion and debate. Feedback on assignments will be provided during class discussions, by email or through individual consultations.

Religion and Politics

Christopher Kavanagh

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 月 5/Mon.5

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed to introduce students to the complex relationships between religion and politics, drawing on cross-cultural case studies that range from the premodern to the contemporary period. The course takes a cross-disciplinary approach, examining research from anthropology, sociology, psychology, and history.

“Religion,” as defined in the course, refers not only to doctrinal beliefs and formal institutions but also to informal supernatural beliefs, ritual practices, and the various subcultures and social aspects associated with religious communities. The principal aim of the course is to explore how religions, as cultural systems, interact with and affect political systems and nation-states.

By the end of the course, students will have a firm understanding of the complex relationships that religious groups, institutions, and larger traditions have with political systems. Students will critically engage with diverse perspectives, analyze the role of religion in both fostering political cohesion and inciting conflict, and develop the ability to assess contemporary issues where religion and politics intersect. This course is intended to improve students’ analytical skills, increase cross-cultural awareness, and provide them with the tools to understand the significance of religion in global and local political contexts.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will be able to:

- 1) Analyze and discuss the roles that religion has played historically and cross-culturally in politics and public life.
- 2) Understand and explain the complex and diverse ways that religion and politics can interact in different cultural and historical contexts.
- 3) Critically evaluate scholarly research and media accounts that explore issues of religion and politics, identifying biases and methodological strengths or weaknesses.
- 4) Compare and contrast various theoretical models of religion and politics, articulating the key arguments and implications of each.
- 5) Apply theoretical frameworks to contemporary case studies, demonstrating the ability to assess real-world interactions between religion and politics.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course will be taught through a combination of lectures, class discussions, and small group activities. Each session will begin with a lecture introducing key concepts and case studies, followed by class and group discussions based on the assigned readings. Students will be required to submit reaction papers online to reflect on specific topics covered in selected classes, fostering deeper engagement with the material. Additionally, each student will select a topic related to the course content and prepare an oral presentation. Presentations must be accompanied by a written script, and students will receive constructive written feedback on both the content and delivery of their presentations and reaction papers.

European History

【Outline and objectives】

As the world becomes an increasingly globalized place, the study of history is more relevant than ever to understand the forces that have shaped our society. This course will chart some of the major political, social, and economic changes that took place in Europe from the fourteenth to the nineteenth century and assess their impact upon the rest of the world. It will adopt a thematic and broadly chronological approach.

【Goal】

The aim of this course is to enable students to reach a deeper understanding of the key events in European History from the fourteenth to the nineteenth century. In doing so they will enhance their ability to think critically about historical events. Students will also develop their interpersonal skills through group discussions in the classroom.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will be held in both lecture and seminar style. PowerPoint lectures will be followed by small group discussions in which students will compare their answers (written in note form, and submitted to the lecturer on Hoppii, before class) to questions on the assigned readings for each lecture. The discussion findings will then be reported by a member of each group and students from the other groups will be encouraged to contribute to the class discussion. Finally, feedback will be given by the lecturer to each group. Students will also receive individual feedback on Hoppii.

No.	Theme	Contents
1	The Catholic Church, State Building, and Economic Recovery after the Black Death	The Catholic Church, State Building, and Economic Recovery after the Black Death
2	The Renaissance	As Europeans rebuilt after the devastation of the plague, a movement called the Renaissance revived Europe's connections with its Greek and Roman past and produced masterpieces of art, architecture, and other forms of thought.
3	Interpreting Visual Evidence: Marking Boundaries, Inspiring Loyalty	The fourteenth century witnessed the emergence of dynastic states across Afro-Eurasia that endured for centuries. Rulers used a careful mixture of privilege and punishment to create a sense of unity among their subjects while at the same time justifying their own right to rule and reinforcing traditional social hierarchies.
4	European Exploration and Expansion	By opening new sea-lanes in the Atlantic, European explorers set the stage for a major transformation in world history: the establishment of overseas colonies for the purpose of enriching themselves and their monarchs.
5	The Reformation	In sixteenth century Europe frequent warfare centered on purely European concerns, above all on a religious split within the Roman Catholic Church, known as the Reformation.

6	Interpreting Visual Evidence seminar: Conflict and Consent	In the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, European overseas empires came into conflict with indigenous societies, decimating the Amerindian population and drafting African slaves to perform labor the remaining Amerindians refused. This resulted in societies in the Americas that initially had extremely pronounced cultural differences.
7	Exchanges and Expansions in North America	Although the search for precious metals or water routes to Asia had initially spurred British, French, and Dutch efforts to establish New World colonies, colonizers soon learned that only by exploiting other resources could they generate profits.
8	The Slave Trade and Africa	Although the slave trade began in the mid-fifteenth century, only in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries did the numbers of human exports from Africa begin to soar. By 1820, four slaves had crossed the Atlantic for every European. Those numbers were essential to the prosperity of Europe's American colonies.
9	Interpreting Visual Evidence seminar: A World of Goods	As overseas trade generated new wealth, elites displayed this wealth in diverse ways. Ranging from the purely ornamental to the modest and practical, material objects reflected the identities of the people who bought and displayed them, as well as the identities of the producers who made them.
10	The Enlightenment in Europe	The Enlightenment was an extraordinary cultural flowering, driven by trade and internal commerce, which blossomed in Europe during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. This era encompassed broader developments, such as the expansion of literacy, the spread of critical thinking and the decline of religious persecution.
11	Consequences of the Enlightenment	The Enlightenment - or, more properly, Enlightenments, as there was much variation across Europe - was a movement with numerous ambivalent consequences, both for religious and political institutions and for Europe's relationship with the rest of the world.
12	Interpreting Visual Evidence seminar: Envisioning the World	Although maps give the impression of objectivity and geographic precision, the arrangement of names and locations, as well as the areas placed at the center and the margins, reveal the mapmakers' views of the world. In most cultures, official maps located their own major administrative and religious sites at the center of the universe and reflected local elites' ideas about how the world was organized.
13	Revolutionary Transformations and the New Language of Freedom	Late in the eighteenth century, revolutionary ideas spread across the Atlantic world following the trail of Enlightenment ideas about political freedom and reason. The slogans of independence, freedom, liberty, and equality seemed to promise an end to oppression, hardship, and inequities.

14	Interpreting Visual Evidence seminar: Framing the Subject	Important currents of Enlightenment thought stressed the autonomy of the individual. Painters sought to capture and reflect an independent, external, stable reality - this in a period before photography. It was a confident but also a self-centered view of the world.

Event Management

John Melvin

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 2~4
Day/Period : 月1/Mon.1

その他属性 : 〈実〉

[Outline and objectives]

For millennia, humans have found ways to mark important events in their lives: the changing of the seasons, the phases of the moon and the renewal of life each spring. Today, events are playing an increasing role in people's lives and culture. More leisure time and better standards of living have led to a proliferation of public and private events. More recently, governments and businesses have recognised the incredible power of events to help with economic development and destination marketing. The wide array of events, from community to international level, makes event management a hugely exciting field of study.

[Goal]

The purpose of this course is to acquire an in-depth knowledge about the field of event management. Students will learn both important theoretical considerations as well as applied knowledge relating to the successful planning, promotion, implementation and evaluation of events within different contexts.

Upon completion of this course, you should be able to:

- 1) Understand the range of factors behind the successful conceptualization and design of events
- 2) Understand the range of socio-cultural, economical & environmental impacts events can have on host destinations & inhabitants
- 3) Understand different sources of event funding and support and apply appropriate risk management practices
- 4) Understand the role and management of event volunteers
- 5) Appreciate the varied aims and objectives of different events and consider strategies to achieve a positive longer-term legacy

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The course is lecture-based, though you will have a number of opportunities to discuss issues in small groups. A range of international case studies can help you consolidate your learning by illustrating the lecture content with real examples.

Also, in groups, students will design a unique event, which will provide an opportunity to apply the theories and concepts from the lectures.

Assignments will be submitted and returned, with feedback, via Hoppii; insightful answers will be shared in class to facilitate discussion.

[Outline and objectives]

The post-coronavirus recovery of inbound tourism to Japan has surpassed expectations and 2024 was a record-breaking year for visitor numbers and spending.

After a consideration of historical tourism development, this course will examine a range of topical issues, including relations with South Korea, the Tokyo Olympics in 2021 and the impact of UNESCO World Heritage Site designation of Mt. Fuji. We will analyze different management and marketing approaches of tourism in different prefectures. We will consider the factors behind the remarkable recovery of inbound tourism after the 2011 Great East Japan Earthquake and how Japanese tourism may develop in 2025 and beyond.

[Goal]

Upon completion of this course students should be able to:

- 1) Understand how tourism in Japan has developed into its present form
- 2) Understand some of the key stakeholders involved in planning tourism in Japan
- 3) Consider destination management and how to harness the social and economic potential of tourism for revitalizing Japan at local level
- 4) Critically analyze prefectural and national government tourism management and marketing initiatives
- 5) Critically analyze sustainable tourism development in different prefectures

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The course is primarily lecture-based, though students will have a number of opportunities to have group and class discussions. A range of case studies can help students consolidate their learning by illustrating the lecture content with real examples.

In groups, students will conduct an in-depth analysis of tourism in a particular prefecture, which will provide an opportunity to apply the theories and concepts from the lectures and enhance understanding of key issues.

Assignments will be submitted and returned, with feedback, via Hoppii; insightful answers will be shared in class to facilitate discussion.

【Outline and objectives】

The ratio of L1 to L2 English speakers worldwide is roughly estimated to be 1:3 or 1:4. However, it was only towards the turn of the century that sociolinguists and applied linguists took a keen interest in the expanding use of English as a lingua franca (ELF), which is due to the globalisation in all aspects of society, including mass media and pop culture. Arguably, some Expanding Circle countries, where English does not have an official language status, have recently overshadowed the Outer Circle ones in proficiency and frequency of use.

The former part of the course observes how extensively English is used in international contexts, mainly among non-native speakers, while analysing samples of L2-accented speech. It also refers to the limitations in the traditional models of World Englishes put forward by B. Kachru and other scholars. The latter half discusses native-speakerism, bilingualism, and native-speakerism, all of which exert a significant influence on pedagogical practices, and suggests how these notions could/should be modified from the perspective of ELF. The course is concluded with an analysis of status and function of English in present-day Japan.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) understand key terminology and concepts in ELF and World Englishes,
- (2) have an awareness of the wider use of English in non-native speaking contexts, and
- (3) become familiar with interpreting quantitative/qualitative data for linguistic research.

[Outline and objectives]

The ratio of L1 to L2 English speakers worldwide is roughly estimated to be 1:3 or 1:4. However, it was only towards the turn of the century that sociolinguists and applied linguists took a keen interest in the expanding use of English as a lingua franca (ELF), which is due to the globalisation in all aspects of society, including mass media and pop culture. Arguably, some Expanding Circle countries, where English does not have an official language status, have recently overshadowed the Outer Circle ones in proficiency and frequency of use.

The former part of the course observes how extensively English is used in international contexts, mainly among non-native speakers, while analysing samples of L2-accented speech. It also refers to the limitations in the traditional models of World Englishes put forward by B. Kachru and other scholars. The latter half discusses native-speakerism, bilingualism, and native-speakerism, all of which exert a significant influence on pedagogical practices, and suggests how these notions could/should be modified from the perspective of ELF. The course is concluded with an analysis of status and function of English in present-day Japan.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) understand key terminology and concepts in ELF and World Englishes,
- (2) have an awareness of the wider use of English in non-native speaking contexts, and
- (3) become familiar with interpreting quantitative/qualitative data for linguistic research.

【Outline and objectives】

The world of social media has led to a revolution in how we express ourselves and interact with others; the way we consume and disseminate information grows ever more complex. This increased use of computer-mediated communication means that analysis is now more critical than ever. This course aims to make sense of our digital lives by joining the dots between language, the parts of the web we use in daily life and its impact on our world.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students will be able to:

- ・ Understand the use of social media from an academic perspective
- ・ Engage in scholarly discussion about social media, using appropriate ideas and terminology
- ・ Interpret linguistic analysis on social media discourse
- ・ Consider the wider social implications of the lives we lead online

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The classes will be a mixture of lecture-based teaching and discussion, with students invited to share their own experiences. Each week we will actively engage with a social, political or ethical question regarding social media use and how it shapes our world. We will also look at the theoretical approaches scholars use to investigate the impact of the language we use on the web. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

[Outline and objectives]

This course will cover the basic notions of articulatory, acoustic, and auditory phonetics and phonology.

We will explore how speech sounds are produced in articulatory organs, how these sounds travel in the air and auditory pathways, and how they are perceived in the listener's brain.

[Goal]

Students are going to learn about the mechanisms of speech perception and production. We will explore how articulatory organs are coordinated when we produce speech sounds, how speech sounds propagate in the air, and how these sounds are perceived and understood. There are three main goals.

- (1) Students understand the basic physiology (i.e., articulatory organs and hearing organs).
- (2) Students understand the physical representation of speech sounds and the mental representation of language.
- (3) Students understand how speech sounds are produced and understood in daily situations.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 2" and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course consists of lectures, discussions, and pop quizzes. Handouts and worksheets are provided in class. Students are expected to actively participate in class: take notes, be responsive to questions, and work in pairs and groups.

Comments for assignments (tests and reports, etc.) are given during class or via email.

Semantics and Pragmatics

Nobumi Nakai

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 2~4

Day/Period : 金2/Fri.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

Semantics is the study of meaning in language. Pragmatics is the study of the ways people use language in actual conversations. The aim of this course is to provide students with an essential understanding of semantics and pragmatics, with examples drawn from English and Japanese.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) Have a general understanding of the interface between semantics and pragmatics.
- (2) Understand key concepts and major theories in the fields.
- (3) Survey the wide range of semantic and pragmatic phenomena in all their richness and variety.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course begins by covering some essential issues of semantics. In subsequent lectures, we will discuss how the identification of the semantic contribution of words and sentences gets us only partway to understanding what an utterance means. The course is a combination of lectures, group discussions, and review exercises. Feedback will be given during class discussions as necessary.

No.	Theme	Contents
1	Introduction	Introduction
2	An Overview of Semantics	Describes the components of linguistic meaning and introduces lexical and compositional semantics.
3	Lexical Semantics (1): The Meanings of Words	Examines the different ways that word senses could be represented in the mind of a language user and discusses the types of reference that words can have.
4	Lexical Semantics (2): Word Relations	Discusses the kinds of meaning relationships that exist between words.
5	Compositional Semantics (1): The Meanings of Sentences	Introduces propositions, truth values, and truth conditions, and discusses relationships between propositions.
6	Compositional Semantics (2): Putting Meanings Together	Introduces the Principle of Compositionality in more detail and discusses different ways that lexical meanings combine to give rise to phrasal meanings.
7	Practice (1)	Provides exercises, discussion questions, and activities.
8	Language in Context	Explores several ways in which context can affect the meaning of utterances, and introduces the idea of felicity in discourse.
9	Rules of Conversation	Discusses why conversation needs to follow rules, and introduces Grice's maxims for cooperative conversation.
10	Drawing Conclusions	Shows ways in which language users may employ context to convey or derive meaning that is not part of an utterance's entailed meaning.
11	Speech Acts	Outlines many of the jobs that speakers accomplish with language and the ways in which they accomplish them.
12	Presupposition	Discusses another precondition for felicity.

13	Practice (2)	Provides exercises, discussion questions, and activities.
14	Examination & Wrap-up	Semester-end exam

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Students are required to read the relevant reading materials carefully in advance so that they can actively participate in discussions. Practice problems will be assigned occasionally. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Outline and objectives]

This course provides students with a basic knowledge of sociolinguistics, the study of language in relation to society. The first part of the course is concerned with how individual language use is correlated with a variety of social variables, such as gender, age, class, and ethnicity, by outlining a number of previous studies conducted in the English-speaking world. Particular reference is made to the classic research of William Labov, one of the founding figures of quantitative sociolinguistics.

Later lectures focus on how a language or dialect is positioned and perceived within a community, with examples from multi-lingual/dialectal countries such as Singapore. Students who are or are becoming bilingual will find the discussion on bilingualism particularly intriguing when they learn that its implications not merely vary from one society to another, but have been significantly changing recently. Another major topic is language attitudes. They are not based on purely linguistic considerations, but connected with how people perceive and evaluate different dialects or accents.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) understand key terminology, concepts, and theories in sociolinguistics,
- (2) have an awareness of ongoing language changes in society, and
- (3) become familiar with interpreting quantitative/qualitative data for sociolinguistic analysis.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course is a combination of lectures and class discussions. Following a flipped learning model, students are required to read chapter handouts and complete assigned questions before attending each lecture. In-class quizzes and exams are reviewed in detail and receive comments either immediately or during the following week's lecture.

【Outline and objectives】

This course will cover the theoretical and practical aspects of pronunciation teaching. We will look at pronunciation variations, and explore possible obstacles that adults and children come across in speech perception and production. We will discuss how teachers can help students learn and understand the articulation of English sounds.

【Goal】

At the end of this course, students will be able to:

- (1) Understand and explain the articulation of individual sounds in English,
- (2) Understand and explain the basic rules about the connected speech, rhythm, and intonation in English,
- (3) Understand the common challenges that learners encounter in learning pronunciation in English, and
- (4) Apply the knowledge about the English pronunciation and learners' difficulties into pronunciation teaching.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course is offered through lectures and discussions in class. Handouts are provided in class, and students are expected to participate in all class activities actively. Individual members' contributions to group work are vital to successful learning. Please make sure to complete preparatory study to maximize your contributions to class members and therefore learning outcomes. Good comments in group discussions will be introduced to the class for further discussions, and comments and explanations for tests will be given either in class or in a recording. Written feedback on microteaching will be given to individual students.

Students are expected to read handouts thoroughly and think about the questions and issues in the handouts before class. Students are also expected to refer to recommended readings when necessary as preparatory study for class discussion. If you miss a class, please make sure to contact your classmates or the instructor about lectures, discussions, and assignments. Students are expected to spend 2 hours for preview and 2 hours for review.

【Outline and objectives】

The course will explore how linguistic landscapes reflect complicated relationships between language and society. Linguistic landscapes are defined by Landry and Bourhis (1997) as “the visibility and salience of languages on public and commercial signs in a given territory or region.” Linguistic landscapes is a concept in sociolinguistics to study languages visually used in multilingual societies. We may not perceive Japanese society as multilingual. However, when you look at language use on public signs, you will realize that you are surrounded by more than just one language. Because the function of linguistic landscapes is not only an informational indicator but also a symbolic marker, you can observe our ever-changing society through an investigation of language use in signs. In the course, students will learn about the basic concepts of linguistic landscapes through lectures and literature reviews and deepen their understanding by conducting research.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students should be able to meet the following objectives:

- (1) Becoming aware of the presence of different languages and its meanings in public space,
- (2) Understanding how social, political, economic, and technological elements are embedded in linguistic landscapes,
- (3) Becoming familiar with the basic theories and methodologies of linguistic landscapes, and
- (4) Applying the knowledge to conduct individual research projects.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The main elements of the course are lectures, discussions, and student presentations. To begin with, the key concepts of linguistic landscapes will be explained. Next, the theories and methodologies of linguistic landscapes will be discussed through literature reviews. During the course, all the literature and extra materials are provided in class or on the course website. The students are encouraged to read the literature before attending a class. Interactive class participation is highly encouraged. Students will be required to carry out small-scale research projects in the field of linguistic landscapes and share their findings in class at the end of the course. Feedback is given both in class and through e-mail. Attendance at the first class is mandatory.

【Outline and objectives】

The course will explore how linguistic landscapes reflect complicated relationships between language and society. Linguistic landscapes are defined by Landry and Bourhis (1997) as “the visibility and salience of languages on public and commercial signs in a given territory or region.” Linguistic landscapes is a concept in sociolinguistics to study languages visually used in multilingual societies. We may not perceive Japanese society as multilingual. However, when you look at language use on public signs, you will realize that you are surrounded by more than just one language. Because the function of linguistic landscapes is not only an informational indicator but also a symbolic marker, you can observe our ever-changing society through an investigation of language use in signs. In the course, students will learn about the basic concepts of linguistic landscapes through lectures and literature reviews and deepen their understanding by conducting research.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students should be able to meet the following objectives:

- (1) Becoming aware of the presence of different languages and its meanings in public space,
- (2) Understanding how social, political, economic, and technological elements are embedded in linguistic landscapes,
- (3) Becoming familiar with the basic theories and methodologies of linguistic landscapes, and
- (4) Applying the knowledge to conduct individual research projects.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The main elements of the course are lectures, discussions, and student presentations. To begin with, the key concepts of linguistic landscapes will be explained. Next, the theories and methodologies of linguistic landscapes will be discussed through literature reviews. During the course, all the literature and extra materials are provided in class or on the course website. The students are encouraged to read the literature before attending a class. Interactive class participation is highly encouraged. Students will be required to carry out small-scale research projects in the field of linguistic landscapes and share their findings in class at the end of the course. Feedback is given both in class and through e-mail. Attendance at the first class is mandatory.

【Outline and objectives】

“Language” is much more than simply words, symbols and grammar. Discourse analysis explores how these tools are used in real life to construct meaning in everyday exchanges. This course is an introduction to the central analysis methods and how they can be applied to examine the interplay between language use, social structures, and power dynamics. Students will explore theoretical frameworks and methodological practices, before applying them to discourse across different forms of communication. Through this theoretical and practical engagement, students will develop an understanding of the nuances of how discourse operates in the real world.

【Goal】

The course goal is to impart competence in the following:

- ・ Understanding the foundations of discourse analysis
- ・ Applying different analytical frameworks to discourse
- ・ Examining naturally occurring discourse across contexts
- ・ Developing research and analytical skills

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Lectures and readings will introduce the concepts and theories on how discourse analysis can contribute to our understanding of language and the world. At the beginning of each session, concepts from the previous class are reviewed and checked through an exploration of ideas generated in take-home assignments. Discussions and practical exercises allow students to engage with primary texts and case studies to understand how discourse analysis can be used for critical engagement with discourse. Then, students can apply practical tools to understand how language shapes and reflects the world around them, whether analysing a political speech, a newspaper front page, or a casual conversation.

Information on feedback methods will be provided in class.

[Outline and objectives]

What is world literature? Why do some books become global bestsellers while others are deemed untranslatable? How does literature relate to other forms of art such as movies or music? This course will introduce the fundamental issues of modern comparative literary studies, including national canons, world literature, translation, and adaptation. We will discuss how comparing works with other texts across genres, languages, time periods, or forms of media can give us a fuller understanding of not only the text itself, but also how systems of literature combine to influence our impression of the text.

[Goal]

Students will practice critical reading and writing while learning the basic approaches used in comparative literary studies. Students will examine the historical development of comparative literature as a field while utilizing comparative methodology to read and respond to selected texts.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Each class will consist of a lecture on the specified topic followed by group discussions. Short quizzes will be given to assess comprehension of weekly readings. Students will also be evaluated through a midterm examination and final paper. In-class feedback will be given for reaction papers and written assignments.

Performance Studies

Day/Period : 木3/Thu.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This class will explore performance studies, an interdisciplinary field which uses various conceptions of performance to analyze the world around us. To perform can mean many things: to execute (to perform an action), to bring about (to perform a ritual: "I hereby pronounce the official beginning of the Olympics"), to judge ("how well did she perform at the Olympics?"). This includes performance in the traditional sense, such as in the theater, but also in everyday life, in our societies and daily practices of living, how we think about ourselves and our relationship to society: how are we performing when we use SNS or when we change our behavior with friends or family? How can thinking about the world as a series of performances allow us to analyze the news, public elections, gender, branding, and technology. Throughout the class we will be using Richard Schechner's textbook, developed to introduce Performance Studies, to guide the course. We will look at an overview of the major approaches used in the field, examine their theories, and explore how they can reveal important insights about our world.

【Goal】

In addition to teaching the students about the fundamentals to performance studies, this class aims to develop critical thinking and analytical skills. Throughout the semester students will: 1) learn various methodologies and theories about performance; 2) explore how to apply these concepts to other subject matter beyond the theater; 3) to learn how to articulate what, where, how, and why we are performing; 4) learn how to conduct analyses on various topics by applying the concepts from performance studies.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

Classes will be lecture-based, with visual material such as video clips and images. Students will be asked to have group discussions on certain themes. Students will be asked to have group discussions on certain themes. Each week students will be assigned a section from Schechner's book. This reading will be important background information and/or will be directly addressed as the topic of the lecture and discussion. Lectures will explain in detail and through examples the topic for that class. Discussions based on the lecture will be facilitated by questions from the instructor to help the students explore and develop their critical and analytical skills for that topic. Students will be assessed on their understanding of the lectures and readings through their presentations and papers. Students will receive feedback in class and in written form, based on a grading rubric.

【Outline and objectives】

This course examines the evolution of literary tradition through the lens of the Arthurian legend, one of the most enduring and adaptable narratives in Western literature. Using key texts from the medieval, Victorian, and modern era, students will explore how themes such as love, loyalty, and moral conflict are reimagined across time. The course also introduces critical approaches to reading texts and other forms of storytelling in modern popular culture, focusing on issues of genre, gender, and the construction of myth. Through this case study, students will develop a deeper understanding of how literary traditions are shaped, adapted, and interpreted. Designed for students with a general interest in literature and mythology, this course builds on foundational skills in literary analysis.

【Goal】

- Develop an understanding of how themes, characters, motifs evolve across different periods and genres, using the Arthurian legend as a case study for broader literary developments.
- Understand key themes and literary devices of English literary tradition
- Foster interdisciplinary approaches to literature, connecting literary analysis to history, film criticism, and cultural studies to understand how stories transcend their original medium.
- Develop transferrable skills, such as critical reading and academic writing, developing persuasive arguments supported by textual evidence and critical scholarship.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Each class session will begin with a lecture by the instructor, introducing students to key concepts and providing literary and/or historical context for the relevant work(s). This will be followed by interactive activities, including discussions, group-work, close analytical reading, etc. Students will also be required to regularly submit reaction papers. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

[Outline and objectives]

This course examines the social, political, and cultural forces that shape the canon of Japanese literature available in English translation. In particular, we will focus on translations published in the United States in the postwar period. How did publishers determine which authors to introduce to an American audience, and how did those choices influence our image of Japanese literature in Japan, the US, and globally?

[Goal]

Students will think critically about the discourses of translation, publication, and world literature. Students will also develop critical reading and writing skills through class assignments.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Classes will consist of lectures followed by group discussions. Quizzes will be used to check reading comprehension, and students will complete two papers for midterm and final evaluations. In-class feedback will be given for daily reaction papers, and students will receive personal feedback on written assignments.

【Outline and objectives】

This class considers the development of Modern Japanese literature through a close examination of the literature and thought of the Meiji Era (1868-1912). Through a reading of many of this era's canonical works of fiction, this class will familiarize students with the many and variegated attempts of writers to craft a distinctly modern Japanese literature (from 1868 to 1912), and it will consider the literary, cultural, and socio-historical frames through which scholars have subsequently analyzed these texts.

【Goal】

1. Become familiar with canonical texts in modern Japanese literature
2. Become conversant in contemporary methods of literary analysis
3. Encourage critical thinking and the exchange of ideas
4. Improve one's writing about literature

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Literature classes thrive upon lively and informed conversations. In order to facilitate discussion, students are encouraged to read and think about the readings before class. Students will also be prohibited from using smartphones during class.

Tablets and other devices, however, may be used to access the readings. Additionally, students are required to submit a short reaction paper by midnight of the day before class. Reaction papers should be 250 words (or more), contain an argument about the text, and include evidence to support that argument. Reaction papers should be uploaded to Hoppii. Finally, depending on the size of the class, students may be asked to read and present on critical texts that have informed how we understand the literature of the Meiji period.

Feedback on assignments will come in several forms. Comments on student writing will be uploaded to Hoppii by the professor, and particularly enlightening comments from the response papers will be introduced in class to deepen discussion.

Philosophy of Love

Love comes in many forms: romantic love, familial love, and friendship are some examples. Moreover, love and loving relationships play important roles in human life and well-being, and because of this, many of us are familiar with love. Despite love's familiarity, puzzling philosophical questions arise when reflecting on its nature. What exactly is love? Is love irrational? Can it be immoral? How do advances in technology alter or shape how we think about love? These are all questions that we will explore in this course.

【Goal】

This course has four primary learning goals. First, students will learn about various and diverging views on the philosophy of love. Second, students will improve critical thinking skills when engaging with abstract reasoning, especially in the context of philosophical debate. Third, students will improve their reading skills when confronting nuanced and challenging text. Finally, students will improve their writing skills to communicate complex ideas clearly and confidently.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

Each meeting will include an interactive lecture with slides and an active learning period. The lectures will occupy roughly one hour of each meeting. Students will also participate in a class discussion. Students will prepare questions for the discussion period as homework before coming to class. The instructor will assess students primarily on their final paper. Students will produce a paper proposal before writing a paper draft. After the proposal has been approved, students will write a draft of their paper. Students will then exchange papers with each other, and they will write a peer-reviewed report of another student's paper. Students should consider this report when revising their final drafts. The instructor will provide written feedback for the proposal, reports, and the final paper via Hoppii.

[Outline and objectives]

Metaethics

This course offers an introduction to metaethics, a branch of ethics distinct from normative ethics. While normative ethics focuses on determining what we ought to do morally, metaethics examines the nature of those very questions. It explores issues such as: Do moral questions have right or wrong answers? If they do, how can we know them? What, if anything, makes moral claims true or false? When we make moral judgments—like deeming something unfair or recognizing obligations to others—what kind of mental state are we in? Do these judgments imply the existence of objective moral facts? Is it possible for moral truth to be relative, and if so, what would that entail? In this class, we will explore these fundamental questions and examine key perspectives and theories from contemporary metaethical scholarship.

[Goal]

This course has four primary learning goals. First, students will learn about various and diverging views in metaethics. Second, students will improve critical thinking skills when engaging with abstract reasoning, especially in the context of philosophical debate. Third, students will improve their reading skills when confronting nuanced and challenging text. After the proposal has been approved, students will write a draft of their paper. They will then exchange papers with each other, and they will write a peer-reviewed report of another student's paper. Students should consider this report when revising their final drafts. Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 月 4/Mon.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

Existentialism is a branch of philosophy that confronts some of the most problematic aspects of existence. These include the value of freedom and rationality, whether living an authentic life is achievable, whether life can be meaningful, the nature of absurdity, whether modern life is nihilistic, and the role of emotions in ethics. This course is an in-depth exploration of several themes from existentialist thought. This course focuses on the philosophical writings of Albert Camus, Søren Kierkegaard, Friedrich Nietzsche, Jean-Paul Sartre, Keiji Nishitani, Simone de Beauvoir, and Iris Murdoch.

[Goal]

This course has four primary learning goals. First, students will learn about various and diverging views on the philosophy of existentialism. Second, students will improve critical thinking skills when engaging with abstract reasoning. Third, students will improve their reading skills when confronting nuanced and challenging philosophical and literary texts. Finally, students will improve their writing skills to communicate complex ideas clearly and confidently.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Each meeting will include an interactive lecture with slides and a discussion period. The lectures will occupy roughly one hour of each meeting. Each class will end either (1) with a discussion about the course content or (2) an open discussion about the paper prompts. Students will prepare questions for the discussion period as homework before coming to class. Students will receive feedback from the instructor on short papers and the final exam via Hoppii.

[Outline and objectives]

Special Topic: Capitalism, Marx and Climate Change

This course examines the ethical foundations of capitalism and its relation to the problem of climate change. It begins with an overview of the market economy and its alternatives. Next, we consider Marx's classical criticism of capitalism. Lastly, we will examine whether capitalism or communism provides the resources to address the threat of global warming.

[Goal]

1. This course will help students develop a deeper understanding of the basic issues, concepts and viewpoints found in the ethical treatment of capitalism.
2. This course will introduce students to the relationship between political philosophy and political economy.
3. This course will help students recognize the moral implications of the market economy and its impact on climate change.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Students will attend lectures, read related materials and have two written examinations. Feedback on completed assignments will be given in class.

1	What is Capitalism? Definitions and Controversies	Offers a working definition of capitalism and how it contrasts both with alternative systems like socialism and feudalism, and how the economic status quo might be viewed as a mixture of these systems.
2	Political Economy and Economic Justice	Explores how political economy is an attempt to unify what are now recognized as the distinct disciplines of economics and political philosophy.
3	Hierarchy and Feudalism	Adam Smith regarded "commercial society" as the chief alternative to Feudalism. We will use this starting point for considering the moral foundations of a capitalist order.
4	Market Order and Market Failure	We will discuss the most influential argument in favor of a capitalist economy: the argument from price signaling. We will then look at the limits of price signaling and other alleged cases of "market failure."
5	So Why Not Socialism?	We will consider some influential arguments for socialism. Two key internal questions are whether a socialist economy is based on coercion or voluntary cooperation, and whether production should involve markets and competition.
6	Mill's Market Socialism	We will examine Mill's attempt to combine a market economy within a socialist framework.
7	Review & Midterm Exam	Review
8	Marx and Engels The Communist Manifesto	We will examine in more detail Marx's criticisms of the capitalist economy.

9	Climate Change and the Imperial Mode of Living	Discusses the relationship between the globalization of capitalism and environmental destruction.
10	The Limits of Green Keynesianism	Can a Green New Deal really save us from harmful impact of the Anthropocene?
11	Shooting Down Degrowth Capitalism	In order to combat climate change we must abandon economic growth and consider degrowth. This week we investigate the possible options for this turn to degrowth economics.
12	Degrowth Communism Will Save the World	Discusses the question of how to bring about degrowth communism in concrete terms, and how this transition helps to solve the climate crisis.
13	Conclusions	Concluding discussion on the relationship between the global economy, Marx and climate change.
14	Final Exam & Wrap-up	Review

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students are expected to read the materials as instructed and prepare for class participation and discussion. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

Advanced Topics in Social Psychology

Yu Niiya

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 金2/Fri.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

We all want to live a happy life and yet we may be inadvertently creating obstacles to achieving happiness. In this course, students will learn how we get to know ourselves, the maladaptive habits that our minds develop to protect the self from various ego threats, and various ways to improve psychological well-being of the self and others.

【Goal】

Upon completion of the course, students should be able to:

- Identify and explain classic and contemporary theories relating to the self.
- Critically analyze and synthesize empirical research in social psychology.
- Apply their learning to their own life to critically evaluate and explain interpersonal experiences during daily life.
- Verbally present their reactions and experiences to course content.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course mostly combines lectures and student-led class discussions on assigned readings. Students will receive oral and written feedback on their discussion questions and reaction papers.

3	Evaluating Ourselves (1)	What is self-esteem?
4	Evaluating Ourselves (2)	What is self-esteem for?
5	Evaluating Ourselves (3)	Is it better to have high self-esteem?
6	The Vulnerable and Maladaptive Self (1)	What causes our self-esteem to be vulnerable?
7	The Vulnerable and Maladaptive Self (2)	What do people do to maintain self-esteem?
8	The Vulnerable and Maladaptive Self (3)	What are the consequences of protecting self-esteem?
9	Self-Analysis Workshop	What causes anxiety? What do I do to protect myself?
10	Transcending the Self (1)	How can we expand our views beyond the current self?
11	Transcending the Self (2)	How can I be compassionate to myself?
12	The Self in the Ecosystem (1)	How can we promote our well-being without worrying about self-esteem?
13	The Self in the Ecosystem (2)	How do compassionate goals allow us to take interpersonal risks?
14	Synthesis	What have we learned so far and where do we go from here?

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Students should review their notes and be able to explain the major concepts and theories they have learned in previous lectures. They will read the assigned readings before each class and prepare a reaction paper and discussion questions based on the readings. They must also download and print out handouts prior to each class and bring them to class to take notes. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

【Textbooks】

None.

【References】

The assigned readings will be uploaded on Hoppii.

【Grading criteria】

Students are evaluated based on a final paper (30%), in-class quizzes (10%), discussion questions (15%), reaction papers (30%), and class contribution (15%).

【Changes following student comments】

Some students found it easier to have discussions in small groups while others preferred discussions in a larger group. In fact, several students pointed out that changing the format of the discussion can be refreshing and motivating. I will continue experimenting with the format of the discussions to ensure that everybody feels comfortable sharing their experiences and thoughts during class.

【Others】

Students will be asked to reflect on their daily experiences and share examples that illustrate various concepts and theories covered in the course.

Students who have taken and passed courses in psychology and statistics may be given priority in student selection.

【Prerequisite】

Students must have taken and passed one of the following courses: Social Psychology 1, Social Psychology 2, or Cultural Psychology.

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

Major topics include definition, psychological assessment methods, psychotherapy approaches, along with the history of treatment and the role of science in clinical psychology. The course also explores some of the most common mental illnesses.

[Goal]

Major Course Objectives.

By the end of the course, you should be able to:

- Demonstrate an understanding of how clinical psychologists approach mental health from a biological, cognitive, and social perspective.
- Explain the importance of the scientist-practitioner model of clinical psychology.
- Describe the types of questions clinical psychologists ask and realize that appropriate research methods must be employed in order to answer them.
- Identify the major tasks and responsibilities of clinical psychologists as health care professionals.
- Engage with the ethical framework for the practice of psychology.
- Identify diversity issues as they relate to clinical psychology.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Through a series of lectures, readings, exercises, films, and group projects, this course introduces and provides a broad overview of the field of clinical psychology. 1. Final Project -presentation

The final project is to be completed in small groups of students (if you want to do it individually, you must clear it with myself). The goal of the final project is for students to research and present information about the topic of clinical psychology in class by using power-point slides. Projects will focus on and cover the specific topic of clinical intervention. Possible examples of the projects include: Person-centered therapy, Psychodynamics therapy, Humanistic & Existential Psychotherapies, Behavior therapy, Cognitive-Behavioral therapy, Child & Family therapy, Couple therapy, Psychopharmacology, etc.

The topic could be a specific issues in clinical psychology other than intervention, but those who wants to do so must consult myself in advance.

2.Movie Report: A list of movies will be provided in class.

3. Exams: There will be no exam, but a brief final paper will be assigned.

4. Research Article Summary: In order to help you develop your understanding of psychological findings and methodology, you will be required to complete a brief (2 to 5 pages) summary of a research article. Articles appropriate for this paper can be found on the website or in library. Use an article of interest to you as long as it is appropriate to the course content and relevant to the field of clinical psychology.

Insightful comments from reaction papers will be introduced in class and used in deeper discussions.

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 水3/Wed.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course has been designed to provide a rigorous undergraduate-level introduction to the theories and methods of community psychology. Community psychology is concerned with person-environment interactions and the ways society impacts individual and community functioning. The field focuses on social issues, social institutions, and other settings that influence individuals, groups, and organizations. Community psychology aims to optimize the well-being of individuals and communities with innovative alternative interventions designed in collaboration with affected community members and with other related disciplines inside and outside of psychology. Students are expected to gain a comprehensive understanding of working knowledge and skills in community psychology, as practiced around the world.

[Goal]

Upon completion of the course, students are expected to achieve the following goals:

- (a) to develop an understanding of the role of social-historical factors in the development of community psychological perspectives while dispelling the popular myth about the field;
- (b) to gain a working knowledge of different theoretical approaches for prevention of social and psychological problems in the community and begin to think about how these can be practically implemented and evaluated;
- (c) to critically analyze the community psychological literature; and
- (d) to appreciate professional careers and practices in community psychology.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This course combines several different kinds of pedagogical strategies including lectures, class discussion, film discussion, and small group work. The requirements of the course include: (a) active participation, preparation, and engagement in class, (b) in-class and take-home exercises, and (c) midterm and final exam. Feedback will be provided via individual face-to-face sessions and/or the Hosei Hoppi System.

Required Readings

Students are expected to come to class fully prepared to participate in class discussion and other activities. In order to do so, students are required to have read the readings for each module prior to coming to class sessions.

	Final Exam

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students are expected to complete all the reading assignments, and are prepared to engage in class activities and discussion. The course requirements and assignments are explained above in the Method(s) section, but depending on the level of students' preparation and interest, chances are that some of the requirements may be subject to change slightly, if not entirely. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 3 hours each.

Additional references and readings will be introduced and/or provided in class.

[Grading criteria]

The following show approximate activity-by-activity percentage points toward your final course grade: (a) Active Participation, Preparation, and Engagement (30%); (b) In-class and take-home Exercises (30%) and (c) Midterm (20%) and Final (20%). Please note that students are expected to be actively involved in class by sharing your ideas and thoughts, reactions to lectures and class discussion, based on careful reading of the assigned materials.

[Changes following student comments]

From time to time during class sessions, ideas and opinions are solicited from students re the class structure and format.

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

None.

[Others]

Successful completion of general psychology, social psychology, clinical psychology, or a few psychology-related courses may be assumed and desirable, but not required. Additional coursework in sociology, education, social work, public health, international relations, anthropology, etc. would be useful.

Use of Internet technology esp. AI functions must comply with Hosei University's guidelines.

[Prerequisite]

It would be helpful if any intro, social, or developmental psych courses were taken previously.

[Outline and objectives]

This course introduces the perspectives and major research findings of cultural psychology. The course will introduce general theories and perspectives underlying cultural psychology, explore cultural influences on a wide range of psychological processes, including socialization, self-concept, motivation, emotion, and cognition. The course will also explain the mechanisms underlying cultural differences and examine the process of acculturation and biculturalism in an increasingly diverse world. Throughout the course, students will learn how culture (i.e., institutions, social interactions, and cultural ideas) shapes the way we think and behave and how we, at the same time, shape these cultures.

[Goal]

One of the aims of this course is to introduce students to the perspectives, research methods, and findings of cultural psychology. Another equally important aim of this course is cultivating students' abilities to understand and deal with variations in psychological processes across cultural and ethnic groups, as well as to gain an understanding of the cultural groundings of their own experiences and actions. By the end of the course, students will be able to demonstrate understanding of how cultural systems influence individuals' psychological processing, including development, self-concepts, motivation, emotion, and cognition. They will also critically engage and analyze cultural products, such as books, films, and advertisements.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students should review their notes before each class and be prepared to explain the major concepts and theories they have learned. Students must download and print out the handouts before each class and bring them to class to take notes. Students are required to do the assigned readings and submit reaction papers during the term. Each student will be asked to find and share an example of a cultural product or practice and connect it to the course material.

Topics in Morality

Christopher Kavanagh

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 月 4/Mon.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This course is designed to introduce students to the major theoretical perspectives and empirical research on morality, with a primary focus on psychological approaches. In recent decades, there has been a renaissance in research exploring morality and its associated psychological aspects. Accordingly, this course will emphasize psychological research from a variety of fields, including cognitive psychology, comparative psychology, social psychology, developmental psychology, and evolutionary psychology, while also incorporating discussions of related work in philosophy, animal behavior, economics, and neuroscience.

The course is intended to provide an introductory overview of morality and related research while also addressing core questions, such as: What is morality? Where does it come from? Do humans have core innate moral intuitions, or are they socially learned and culturally dependent? Is there evidence of morality in any other species?

By the end of the course, students will have a greater appreciation of potential answers to these questions and the ongoing debates that surround them.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students should be able to:

- 1) Recognise and understand key terms and major theoretical approaches in the study of morality, with a focus on psychological perspectives.
- 2) Discuss relevant empirical studies, identifying strengths and weaknesses in their methodologies and theoretical models.
- 3) Compare and contrast different theories of morality and evaluate their application to selected scenarios and real-world situations.
- 4) Critically assess key theoretical approaches from various disciplines and consider their relevance to everyday moral judgments and decision-making.
- 5) Apply theoretical frameworks to case studies, demonstrating the ability to assess real-world interactions by integrating psychological and interdisciplinary perspectives.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course will be taught primarily through a combination of lectures and group discussions. In the first part of each class, lectures will introduce key topics and theories, followed by group discussions focusing on related readings and debates. Reaction papers will be assigned for selected topics to encourage deeper engagement with the material. Over the course of the semester, students will prepare an oral presentation discussing the research on a topic of their choice covered in the course. Mid-term and final exams will consist of questions evaluating lecture content and core readings. Readings, reaction papers, and feedback will be provided via the online class platform.

English Teaching in Primary School: Advanced

Tomoko Shigyo

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 金 4/Fri.4/Fri.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This course is for students intending to teach English to young learners as primary pupils. It provides an overview of the curriculum development of the teaching of English in primary school based on second language learning (SLL) theories to primary pupils. Its purpose is to cultivate skills to implement second language (L2) education in primary school appropriately. It particularly looks at how to design English classes to facilitate literacy skills (reading and writing) of primary pupils with consideration to make consistency in L2 education from the primary to secondary levels. Students are encouraged to develop their own perspectives on designing English classes and practice modern EFL pedagogy such as content and language integrated learning (CLIL) and using picture books.

【Goal】

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to do the following:

1. Understand how children learn to read and write.
2. Understand how to link picture books with curriculum.
3. Develop curriculum of CLIL using picture books.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Developing a lesson plan, micro-teaching and final assignment are required for the completion of this course; students are to create their lesson plans and demonstrate their English lessons based on the plans. They are required to reflect on their lessons in class and to revise their lesson plans based on the reflection in the final assignment. Submission of the final requirements and feedback will be on the learning management systems (HOPPII).

[Outline and objectives]

This course is for student teachers of English. It explains how to evaluate learners and teachers in L2 education. It encourages students to examine, discuss and assess practices in L2 education. This course focuses on issues in assessing EFL/ESL learners and teachers: it encourages student teachers to reflect on EFL/ESL learning. The course provides opportunities to explore a wide range of ideas with a consideration to make consistency in language education from the primary to secondary levels.

[Goal]

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to demonstrate the following:

1. Explain the core issues in L2 education testing and its integration with ICT.
2. Identify testing components.
3. Design testing materials that match educational objectives.
4. Employ a principled approach to the design, creation and implementation of materials testing and evaluation.
5. Understand what is required to qualify as an English teacher.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Student teachers will learn how to create English tests as well as how to integrate ICT with it, and then make presentations. They must create their own English tests. The course finishes with a writing assignment and final examination.

Submission of the final requirements and feedback will be on the learning management systems.

East Asian Cinema

Kukhee Choo

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 水4/Wed.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This course offers a historical study of cinemas in East Asia. Spring 2025 will mainly focus on the themes and visualities of Korean cinema in relation to other East Asian cinematic developments. Korean cinema has witnessed a remarkable growth both domestically and internationally during the past two decades. This course will follow the historical development of Korea's film industry during the 20th and 21st Century beginning with early films from the 1930s to the mega blockbusters of the 1990s-2000s. Themes such as modernity, gender and masculinity, nationalism as well as globalization and localization will be covered.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students will be able to

- Understand the historical development of Korean cinema in relation to East Asian cinematic development
- Engage in academic discourses regarding East Asian cinema at large
- Improve critical thinking, oral and writing skills and demonstrate this ability by constructing strong arguments during class discussions and papers

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will be discussion-based, with visual material such as clips of films and videos. Each week students will be provided with an academic reading relevant to the topic. These readings will be important background information and/or will be directly addressed as the topic of the class content and discussion. Discussions based on the reading material will be facilitated by questions from the instructor to help the students explore and develop their critical and analytical skills for that topic. Feedback will be given throughout the course via discussion topics. Students will be assessed on their understanding of the readings and discussions through their midterm and final assignments.

【Outline and objectives】

With Disney films and anime becoming popular all over the world, it is hard not to see animation as a dominant form of global media. But how can we explore animation in its global position? Focusing on animation from the U.S., Japan, as well as Europe and parts of Asia, in this class we will closely examine the particularities of animation, exploring different thematic topics that intersect with globalization. Throughout the semester we will be engaging with the aesthetics of animation, analyzing its history, production processes, and global presence. In the first section of the class, we will learn how animation functions as a certain type of technology, how it operates transnationally, and how this is representative of contemporary globalization. In the second section of the class, we will examine specific topics that are relevant to globalization, including the spread of culture, the ethics of globalization, and global environmental destruction. Utilizing the methods learned in the first section of the class, we will analyze how specific animations and genres grapple with these topics.

【Goal】

In addition to teaching students information about animation and globalization, this class aims to develop critical thinking and analytical skills. Throughout the semester students will: 1) learn methodologies to examine animation as a particular type of media; 2) explore many of the problems of globalization through the example of animation; 3) learn how to apply those methodologies to analyze how certain animations engage with the problems of globalization.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Classes will be lecture-based, with visual material such as clips of films and animation. Students will be asked to have group discussions on certain themes. Each week students will be provided with an academic reading relevant to the topic. These readings will be important background information and/or will be directly addressed as the topic of the lecture and discussion. Lectures will explain in detail and through examples the topic for that class. Discussions based on the lecture will be facilitated by questions from the instructor to help the students explore and develop their critical and analytical skills for that topic. Students will be assessed on their understanding of the lectures and readings through their presentations and papers. Students will receive feedback in class and in written form, based on a grading rubric.

【Outline and objectives】

In this class, we will explore how various media intersect with the idea of the nation in Japan. This will include engaging with the intersection of different media during the formation of the modern Japanese nation-state in the late 1800s. From this point of departure, we will move forward through Japanese history, exploring different media and how they operated in Japanese society at different times. We will examine print culture, from newspapers and wood-block prints, to comics and magazines, as well as moving-image media such as animation and live-action TV and film. Exploring their history, we will analyze some of their shifts over time, and how they reflect changes in their relationship to images of the nation in Japan. This includes how subcultural “otaku” media became official symbols of Japanese national culture, both locally and globally. After addressing this topic in detail, we will then return to more mainstream media, such as films and TV dramas and their relationship to shifts in Japanese society.

【Goal】

In addition to teaching the students about modern Japanese history, society, and media, this class aims to develop critical thinking and analytical skills. Throughout the semester students will: 1) learn methodologies to examine various media and their connection to Japanese society; 2) examine the specific dynamics of each media and their connection with the nation of Japan on a local and global scale; 3) develop how to analytically engage with the history of Japan and these media through the methodologies learned in class.

[Outline and objectives]

This course aims at helping students historicize and contextualize the socio-political and economic influences that media technology has had on our everyday lives and how that influence manifested itself in media representations. The study of media technology as material culture through its production, dissemination and uses has become more urgent as new forms of media are created faster than ever. In this course, students will analyze how media technology has developed throughout history and will further examine the pros and cons, social embracement and anxieties associated with each technology and their representations. Students will apply what they learn about the development of media technology and how it has been represented from a historical and socio-economic perspective and reflect it in their research projects.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will be able to,

- ・ understand the history of media technology and its institutional development through their research projects
- ・ learn theories regarding the development of media technology and learn how the technological development of media and its institutions has informed human perception, anxieties, body, gender and politics throughout history
- ・ improve critical thinking ability about how the historical development of media technology has changed the institutional landscape as we know it and demonstrate that understanding by constructing strong arguments during class discussions

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The course will cover the historical development of media technology through required readings and watching relevant media examples. The class will be centered on student discussions related to the required readings and topics and the instructor will guide the discussions accordingly.

Comments/feedback for assignments (tests and reports, etc.) are written directly on their assignments, or if students want, may be given during office hours.

[Outline and objectives]

This course will introduce students to essential critical theories, ranging from Marxism, psychoanalysis, gender and sexuality, racism, postcolonialism to postmodernism. Critical theory contextualizes, examines, and theorizes culture as it influences and shapes our everyday lives and social structures. Students will learn about the various academic approaches on how to analyze culture based on the canonical works of critical theories, especially focusing on postcolonial studies, and learn how to apply such critical theories to our everyday lives.

[Goal]

In addition to teaching the students about critical theories and postcolonialism and related media examples, this class aims to develop critical thinking and analytical skills. Throughout the semester students will:

- learn methodologies to analyze various media through the lens of postcolonial theories
- examine the specific operations of how postcolonial concepts influence media representations
- learn how to analyze the postcolonial relationships to self and society
- improve critical thinking ability and demonstrate that ability by constructing strong arguments during class discussions and through written class assignments

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Classes will be discussion-based, with visual material such as images and clips of news, films, popular culture, etc. Each week students will be provided with an academic reading relevant to the topic. These readings will be important background information and/or will be directly addressed as the topic of the class content and discussion. Discussions based on the reading material will be facilitated by questions from the instructor to help the students explore and develop their critical and analytical skills for that topic. Students will be assessed on their understanding of the readings through class discussions and presentations. In class, feedback is given using some comments in relation to student questions and comments.

Qualitative Research Methods

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 土3/Sat.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This course is designed to introduce students to qualitative research methods. The course begins with research problems, questions and design considerations. The course follows with training, through lecture, group work and hands-on experiences, in data collection methods commonly used in qualitative research—field observation, interviews, and the use of documents and archival data. Students will undertake a pilot research study as part of the course requirements. This includes designing a research question, doing a literature review, creating a questionnaire, observing a field setting, analyzing field notes, and presenting on preliminary research findings. The exercises are intended to develop the mindset required to think through, design, and execute a qualitative study.

【Goal】

Provide students with an appreciation for and the basic steps of qualitative research design. Acquaint students with a diversity of qualitative methods and associated theoretical, ethical, and pragmatic issues. Instruct students on how to conduct qualitative research that is descriptively rich, theoretically illuminating, and personally meaningful. Each student will be able to create her/his own research questions, decide a research site/community, conduct original research, and present their findings.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Although the instructor will provide the basic framework in a lecture format, students are expected to actively participate in and contribute to class discussion. This includes asking questions, seeking clarification and offering your critical ideas and interpretation about student projects, practical fieldwork issues, and lectures on other fieldwork techniques. Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Students should come to class having read and prepared to discuss assigned readings. The course will also require students to conduct participant-observational fieldwork outside of class. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

【Textbooks】

No textbook will be used for the course. Readings will be provided through the online course management system.

【References】

References will be shared in class.

【Grading criteria】

Field I, II, III Assignments: 60%
Research Proposal/Presentation 40%

Three or more unexcused absences will result in an incomplete grade (marked “E” on grading sheet). Please provide documentation if you need to be absent from class for medical reasons, job interviews and family emergency. If you arrive late or leave early, each will be counted as one ½ absence. 5 absences will result in “not passing.”

【Changes following student comments】

Weekly assignments have been updated.

【Equipment student needs to prepare】

None. You may use laptop or tablet to take notes.

【Others】

Slight modifications may be expected. Our goal in this class will not be to memorize or master a series of clear-cut answers; rather, by engaging in lively discussions, we aim to hone our ability to ask critical questions so as to further develop our skills as writers, readers and thinkers. In order to create such a learning environment, students should speak to each other and the instructor with respect. Abusive and harsh language will not be tolerated. Students with special needs should notify the instructor as early as possible, no later than the third week of the semester. Student attendance is critical because each lecture builds on the previous week. Missing out on critical components of the research process will put you behind in being able to design and implement a full project.

【Outline and objectives】

This course will examine how reality is depicted on film, from the advent of cinema to contemporary forms of online media. We will look at how the tropes of documentary fiction and non-fiction were developed and changed with new technologies.

【Goal】

Students will learn documentary film theory and narrative film theory with particular emphasis on how cinematography, mise-en-scène, sound, editing and other techniques are used by filmmakers in both fiction and non-fiction films to give the impression of realism. We will also discuss the ethics of depicting the lives of real people and events on film. Students will learn to engage critically with media and learn how to determine fact from fiction.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Lecture, readings, film analysis, quizzes, group work, exam, and essay writing.

Lectures take a hybrid form that actively encourages student participation in discussion.

ART300ZA (芸術学 / Art studies 300)

Art in Everyday Life

Timothy Betjeman

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 火 1/Tue.1

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

Despite art being a part of human culture and civilisation for millennia, the art world is often looked upon as something disconnected from everyday life. In this course, we will examine how art and everyday life are intertwined. This will be followed by study on the forms art takes in contemporary society, the value of art, spaces for art, and case studies on how artists live and work in contemporary society.

[Goal]

Through this course, students will gain an understanding of the role of contemporary art in society.

An important aspect of this study is to comprehend the processes of creation and the thinking behind public exhibitions, the multifaceted approaches of artists, the infrastructure of the world of contemporary art in Japan and abroad, and how the art world is connected to the "real" world.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3" and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

In addition to lectures on relevant topics, students will take part in practical exercises to gain first-hand knowledge and experience of the processes involved in contemporary art-making.

- ・ Drawing to communicate
- ・ Collating images to create narrative
- ・ Combining text and images to change meaning
- ・ Action-based art

Students will also research a living artist working now, and will make a presentation on the results of this research.

In addition to the above, students must keep track of their weekly learning by collating images and text in a class notebook, 2 pages (minimum) per week that are relevant to the course material.

Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

Feedback on presentations will be given in class. Separate feedback will be given via email or the Learning Management System if required.

1	Introduction	Introduction
2	Art as communication	Sharing experiences through drawing. Practical activity to explore the communicative qualities of images.
3	Worthless art(?)	Artists with subversive approaches to value: Marcel Duchamp, Andy Warhol, Jeff Koons, Tracy Emin, etc.
4	Art with value	Group and class discussion on artworks with value for the 21st century
5	Connecting with the land	Connecting art practices with pre-historic art and ritual. Artists who work directly in the landscape: Robert Smithson, Richard Long, Christo and Jean Claude, Nancy Holt, etc.
6	Originality: It's all been done before	Tracing the thread of an idea in art; redefining originality
7	Art as action	Performance art and happenings, activism as art, and the importance of documentation
8	A working artist	A visit from, or case study of, an artist, discussing their works and career
9	Text and Images: Making meaning	Study of examples from art and online media. Practical exercises in making meaning

10	Outside of the gallery system	Artist-led initiatives and unconventional art spaces in Japan and abroad
11	Curation as practice	How curation creates meaning. Planning a fictional exhibition.
12	Student Presentations I & discussion	On each student's artist of choice working in the world today
13	Student Presentations II & discussion	On each student's artist of choice working in the world today
14	Final discussion and review	Presentation of notebooks and group discussion on art in the real world

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students are expected to prepare a notebook and basic writing and drawing materials. Reading and preparation activities will be assigned on a weekly basis.

Students are also expected to visit at least one art exhibition and conduct research in preparation for a presentation (suggestions will be provided).

Students are also expected to use their notebook to keep a record of ideas, samples of artworks, and other experiences throughout the semester. A digital notebook is acceptable.

Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Textbooks]

No textbook will be used. Lecture slides/notes/other materials will be provided online.

[Grading criteria]

Participation:

This applies to class activities, assigned readings, exhibition visit and regular contribution to the group discussions.

Weekly submitted responses:

This is a requirement to submit weekly assignments. Examples of weekly assignments are: Pages from your workbook; a written response to class contents, a response to an assigned reading, evidence of activities completed in class that week.

Presentation: each student must make a short presentation on a living, working artist within the context of the course.

The final grade is calculated as follows:

Active participation 30%

Weekly submitted responses 40%

Presentation 30%

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

Students will need a class notebook (e.g. A5-A4 sketchbook/notebook), and general stationary (e.g. pen, pencil, glue, tape, scissors). A digital notebook is also acceptable. Access to a computer, as weekly responses and submissions will be digital only.

Details of other items required will be given as required.

[Others]

You do not need to be "good at art" or have previous practical experience in art to take this class.

What is essential for this class is to be curious and open-minded about what art can be, and to be willing to engage in discussions on topics that are new and, at times, challenging.

Students are expected to be punctual. As many of the topics are open for debate, participation in group and class discussions will be expected of all students.

Weekly responses must be submitted before the next week's class, through an online system.

【Outline and objectives】

Despite art being a part of human culture and civilisation for millennia, the art world is often looked upon as something disconnected from everyday life. In this course, we will examine how art and everyday life are intertwined. This will be followed by study on the forms art takes in contemporary society, the value of art, spaces for art, and case studies on how artists live and work in contemporary society.

【Goal】

Through this course, students will gain an understanding of the role of contemporary art in society.

An important aspect of this study is to comprehend the processes of creation and the thinking behind public exhibitions, the multifaceted approaches of artists, the infrastructure of the world of contemporary art in Japan and abroad, and how the art world is connected to the "real" world.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3" and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

In addition to lectures on relevant topics, students will take part in practical exercises to gain first-hand knowledge and experience of the processes involved in contemporary art-making.

- ・ Drawing to communicate
- ・ Collating images to create narrative
- ・ Combining text and images to change meaning
- ・ Action-based art

Students will also research a living artist working now, and will make a presentation on the results of this research.

In addition to the above, students must keep track of their weekly learning by collating images and text in a class notebook, 2 pages (minimum) per week that are relevant to the course material.

Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.

Feedback on presentations will be given in class. Separate feedback will be given via email or the Learning Management System if required.

4	Art with value	Group and class discussion on artworks with value for the 21st century
5	Connecting with the land	Connecting art practices with pre-historic art and ritual. Artists who work directly in the landscape: Robert Smithson, Richard Long, Christo and Jean Claude, Nancy Holt, etc.
6	Originality: It's all been done before	Tracing the thread of an idea in art; redefining originality
7	Art as action	Performance art and happenings, activism as art, and the importance of documentation
8	A working artist	A visit from, or case study of, an artist, discussing their works and career
9	Text and Images: Making meaning	Study of examples from art and online media. Practical exercises in making meaning

10	Outside of the gallery system	Artist-led initiatives and unconventional art spaces in Japan and abroad
11	Curation as practice	How curation creates meaning. Planning a fictional exhibition.
12	Student Presentations I & discussion	On each student's artist of choice working in the world today
13	Student Presentations II & discussion	On each student's artist of choice working in the world today
14	Final discussion and review	Presentation of notebooks and group discussion on art in the real world

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Students are expected to prepare a notebook and basic writing and drawing materials. Reading and preparation activities will be assigned on a weekly basis.

Students are also expected to visit at least one art exhibition and conduct research in preparation for a presentation (suggestions will be provided).

Students are also expected to use their notebook to keep a record of ideas, samples of artworks, and other experiences throughout the semester. A digital notebook is acceptable.

Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

Participation:

This applies to class activities, assigned readings, exhibition visit and regular contribution to the group discussions.

Weekly submitted responses:

This is a requirement to submit weekly assignments. Examples of weekly assignments are: Pages from your workbook; a written response to class contents, a response to an assigned reading, evidence of activities completed in class that week.

Presentation: each student must make a short presentation on a living, working artist within the context of the course.

The final grade is calculated as follows:

Active participation 30%

Weekly submitted responses 40%

Presentation 30%

[Outline and objectives]

Since the late 19th century we have witnessed various shifts in the arts from the modern to the contemporary periods. That includes the birth of abstraction and minimal art, the expansion of new and interdisciplinary media, the rise of conceptual and critical practice, and towards more participatory and collaborative works. The course looks at these shifts while paying attention to the essence of art, for us gaining more nuanced understanding, and further asks how art can emancipate us and inspire our being in this life-world. Artworks of different origins, and referential texts and audio-visual materials will be studied.

[Goal]

You will become familiar with some key works, artists' voices and aesthetic concepts from the late modern to the contemporary periods.

You will become aware of and comfortable with your ways to engage with art and express your appreciation in writing and conversation.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]
Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Referential materials such as texts, videos and class slides will be shared through Google Classroom for each class. In the class we will look into them together to learn and discuss how certain artistic expressions were nourished and also understood in a certain milieu. Unless your question involves something personal, please ask any questions during the class. In addition, you are asked to visit an exhibition or a relevant location off-camps, which will be determined by or consulted with the instructor. You will then give a short presentation about an artwork that you respond most from the visit. The presentation will be developed into a research paper to be submitted. We will also experiment to explore our own creative possibilities.

NOTE 1: The feedback to the discussions, the presentations and the experiments will be provided during the class or through the Google Classroom.

NOTE 2: The schedule and the content may change in response to the students' needs. The change will be notified in the classes as well as through the Google Classroom.

NOTE 3: Please be aware that some works shown in the class may address controversial issues and may include nudity.

[Outline and objectives]

Since the late 19th century we have witnessed a number of art movements, from what is considered modern to contemporary: the birth of realism, impressionism, abstract expressionism, minimalism, the rise of conceptual art, installation, video and pop art, the extension into earth, body, public domain, the revival of painting, the exploration into photography, towards more relational, participatory and collaborative practice. Amidst all these transformations, how can we recognize such qualities that make 'art' art?, and how can each of us engage with an individual artwork/artist both interdisciplinary and personally? This course looks at contemporary art from various perspectives and appreciate its richness and complexity. Artistic practices in Europe, North America, Asia and other areas across the globe will be examined.

[Goal]

Students will become familiar with voices of artists, historians and critics, and understand them in certain contexts from late modern to contemporary times.

Students will become active and discerning participants/viewers of art, equipped with basic knowledges and respectful attitude.

Students will become comfortable with expressing their thoughts and feelings on art, and enjoy having artistic dialogues with others.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

I will provide a referential material as a post on Google Classroom in prior to each class. In the class, we will read texts, watch video clips & look at lecture slides to learn about the key terms and artistic backgrounds of a milieu of artwork that will help us understand and engage with the work. We will also have in-class exercises and time for questions at the end. Unless your question involves something personal, please ask during this time. In addition, you are required to attend at least one off-campus museum or gallery exhibition relevant to the course (determined by the instructor). You will then make presentations and write a research papers. You will be also asked to explore your own creative possibility, inspired by the shared learnings and experiments, at the end of the course.

Feedback to the in-class exercises will be provided in the next class as well as through the Google Classroom as comments where students are asked to submit them.

[Outline and objectives]

How can photography help to understand the world around us? Can it support or shape the way in which we interact with it? This course looks at the role of photography in an increasingly digital and time-poor society. Through “rephotography”, a set of visual practices for expanding conversations about place over time, the course explores the dual pressures upon today’s camera users to evidence and record reality while embodying authentic acts of personal expression.

[Goal]

Students carry out an independent rephotography project from conception to publication under a broader research agenda to visually record time and place in Tokyo. Through producing a photo book, students will develop critical perspectives toward contemporary image-making while learning to articulate research methodologies and give constructive feedback.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course uses a practical approach. Workshops, assignments and supporting lectures are employed to develop students’ understanding of contemporary photography and improve critical skills regarding the production of images (i.e. visual literacy). Students produce and print a contact sheet of 35 photographs every week which is used for discussion in class. Final submission comprises a photo book and evidence of participation (12 submitted contact sheets). Attendance is recorded weekly using visual media (e.g. photograph). Feedback is given through ongoing dialogue between students and instructor during production of the contact sheets and photobook.

1	Slow Glass	Introducing photography as a visual methodology.
2	Looking Again	Photographing the campus ‘in’ time.
3	The Landscape of Rephotography	Discussing rephotography as a diverse set of visual strategies.
4	Re-entering the Past	Discussing the relationship between rephotography and place.
5	Now and Again	Discussing the relationship between rephotography and time.
6	Conversations with the future	Sharing ideas for visually exploring time and place in Tokyo.
7	Photo Book Research	Analysing photo books in the university library.
8	Developing Strategies	Discussing and reviewing work-in-progress in terms of strategies.
9	Developing Sequences	Discussing and reviewing work-in-progress in terms of sequences.
10	Refining Selections	Discussing and reviewing work-in-progress in terms of selections.
11	Expanding Horizons	Discussing and reviewing work-in-progress in terms of outcomes.
12	Draft Photobook	Making preparations for producing a booklet.
13	Photobook Review	Reviewing reflection and notation in workbooks.
14	Final Photobook Review	Making final improvements to books prior to submission.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students must regularly take photographs throughout the semester. Every week students are required to bring a contact sheet containing 35 photographs made during the week before, which will be discussed in class. They are also expected to use the photo book resource in the library and do assigned readings. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 2 hours each.

[Textbooks]

No textbook will be used. Handouts and reading materials will be will be uploaded on Hoppii or distributed in class.

[Grading criteria]

Participation: this applies to weekly contact sheets (minimum of 12) More than 2 unexcused absences will result in failure of this course.
 Photo book: each student must produce a small photo book (min. 96 pages) that communicates ideas relating to the city and time.
 The final grade is based on: Participation 40% and Photo book 60%. As a variety of predictable and unpredictable factors are involved in the process of creating a photobook, evaluation considers a blend of concept, research, originality, visual communication ability and tenacity.

[Changes following student comments]

Changes have been made in response to student feedback, thank you.

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

Students will need a laptop with photo-editing software and a camera. Please note that the use of a smartphone camera is acceptable for this course. However, if you have regular access to other kinds of cameras (and wish to use them), please bring them to class and the instructor will happily show you how to use them.

[Others]

Being naturally creative is not a requirement for this course. However, students are expected to come to class on time, participate and demonstrate an active interest.

【Method(s)】

This course uses a practical approach. Workshops, assignments and supporting lectures are employed to develop students’ understanding of contemporary photography and improve critical skills regarding the production of images (i.e. visual literacy). Students produce and print a contact sheet of 35 photographs every week which is used for discussion in class. Final submission comprises a photo book and evidence of participation (12 submitted contact sheets). Attendance is recorded weekly using visual media (e.g. photograph). Feedback is given through ongoing dialogue between students and instructor during production of the contact sheets and photobook.

【Grading criteria】

Participation: this applies to weekly contact sheets (minimum of 12) More than 2 unexcused absences will result in failure of this course.
 Photo book: each student must produce a small photo book (min. 96 pages) that communicates ideas relating to the city and time.
 The final grade is based on: Participation 40% and Photo book 60%. As a variety of predictable and unpredictable factors are involved in the process of creating a photobook, evaluation considers a blend of concept, research, originality, visual communication ability and tenacity.

【Changes following student comments】

Changes have been made in response to student feedback, thank you.

【Equipment student needs to prepare】

Students will need a laptop with photo-editing software and a camera. Please note that the use of a smartphone camera is acceptable for this course. However, if you have regular access to other kinds of cameras (and wish to use them), please bring them to class and the instructor will happily show you how to use them.

【Others】

Being naturally creative is not a requirement for this course. However, students are expected to come to class on time, participate and demonstrate an active interest.

[Outline and objectives]

Students will learn the fundamental concepts of feminist theory, which has been attracting attention in recent years not only in the humanities but also in the social sciences. In this year's class, in addition to the foundational texts of feminist studies, students will read texts in feminist methods and Chicana feminist theory to acquire proficiency in the consideration of social phenomena related to gender and sexuality.

[Goal]

By the end of this course, students will be able to: (1) identify and describe the key concepts and main themes of feminist theory (remembering/understanding), (2) apply feminist theory to contemporary social issues in Japan and abroad (applying), (3) compare and contrast various strands of feminist theory (analyzing), and (4) develop and present their own ideas and perspectives on gender and sexuality (evaluating/creating).

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Outline and objectives]

This course focuses on vibrant intellectual conversations engendered by the production of feminist theory in the contemporary moment. This course is divided into the following four sections: (1) theorizing feminist times and spaces, (2) theorizing feminist knowledge and agency, (3) imagine otherwise/solidarity reconsidered, and (4) theorizing intersectionality and difference. In addition, this course pays a special attention to Chicana feminist theory. Through this course, students will learn the ways feminist theorizing moves across disciplines and at times intentionally defines and destabilizes disciplinary categorization.

Migration and Diaspora

[Outline and objectives]

Scholarship on diaspora has drastically increased in the last three decades, and the issues pertaining to immigration and exile, as well as nation-state, nationalism, citizenship, identity and belonging have been explored and examined through a lens of diaspora in various academic disciplines. The course will address various issues that constitute diaspora such as the process of transmigration, settlement, and creation of diasporic communities, as well as identity formation, cultural hybridization, and cultural/knowledge productions – all of which are informed by race, gender, sexuality, class, religion, language and others.

In so doing, the class will first locate the roots of diasporas. As early historical references of the Jewish diaspora and the Black diaspora suggest, the displacement of people and communities from the original homeland often involved both internal and external forces that rendered them “exiles” or “slaves” against their will. Similarly, more recent diasporas emerge as a result of conflicts, wars, colonization, decolonization and globalization that result dispersion of people as “immigrants,” “refugees” and “adoptees.” Situating diaspora in broader projects of nation-building and empire-building, the course will ask and complicate the questions not simply about who, but also when, how, and under what circumstances people become diaspora, as well as how they (re)construct diasporic subjectivity and identity. Finally, the course will have a special focus on women’s experiences and voices.

[Goal]

At the end of this course, students should be able to:

- Explain such concepts as nationalism, citizenship, identity and belonging
- Explain historical and contemporary issues faced by various displaced people categorized as “immigrants,” “refugees,” and “adoptees” in their process of transmigration, settlement, and creation of diasporic communities
- Analyze various data sources including policies, legislations, historical facts, popular cultural production and personal narratives
- Use intersectionality as a lens of analysis to discuss issues pertaining to identity formation

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Although the instructor will provide the basic framework in a lecture format, students are expected to actively participate in and contribute to class discussion. This includes asking questions, seeking clarification and offering critical ideas and interpretation. In addition, a small group of 3-5 individuals will work on a project and present findings and analyses on a topic of their choice. Further directions will be given in class.

In addition, it is possible that some comments from the reaction papers may be introduced in class to elaborate on each lecture and to facilitate discussions.

Comments for assignments and the final reports are given through email.

Students are expected to regularly check (at least once or twice a week) their university email account and Hoppii for course announcements and updates.

Race, Class and Gender II: Global Inequalities

Daiki Hiramori

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 木2/Thu.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉〈S〉〈ダ〉〈未〉

【Outline and objectives】

This class builds on what students have learned in Race, Class and Gender I to look at how inequalities are inter-connected through examining various global issues. Students will learn to analyze how race, class and gender are connected to each other as intersecting inequalities in a society and the world, and on that basis, consider the possibility of an equal but diverse world.

【Goal】

A major goal is to develop students' sensitivity towards issues of inequality and skills in social analysis and critical thinking. By exploring social issues in an international and global context, students will learn to see how any global issue is multidimensional, and specifically, how inequalities are complex and constituted by the interconnection of race, class, gender, and other bases of inequality.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

This course will be based on a combination of short lectures by the instructor and student-led class discussions. Verbal and written feedback on assignments is given during class discussions and through using other tools as appropriate. Students are encouraged to visit the instructor during office hours for more personalized feedback.

Social Theory: Perspectives on Inequality

Hazuki Kaneko

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 水 5/Wed.5

その他属性 : 〈優〉〈S〉

【Outline and objectives】

Social inequality has always been a part of human society, and social scientists have invested much effort into “figuring out” why there is social inequality and how social inequality is sustained and reproduced. Earlier efforts focused mostly on socioeconomic inequality, while later endeavors explored racial, gender, sexual inequalities and their interconnections. These efforts resulted in classical and contemporary social theories on inequality. In this course, students will learn these theories, which are interesting in and of themselves, but more importantly, they will learn to think about inequality deeply and sophisticatedly.

Many theories covered in this course come from Western scholars. Therefore, it is important to explore their limitations in non-Western contexts and to consider the possibility of alternative perspectives.

【Goal】

In mastering the social theories covered in this course, students will hone their critical thinking skills, develop their own theories of various aspects of society and the world and consider solutions to lessen inequality. Students will acquire the skills to engage with complex ideas and think systematically and logically, and remaining aware of social injustices and problems. By the end of the course, students should be able to form and support their opinions with ease.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course is taught through a combination of lectures interwoven with short discussions, student presentations based on readings, and post-presentation discussions.

After the active learning section, the instructor will give feedback to each student personally in verbal or written form.

【Outline and objectives】

As nations and peoples continue the trend of globalization, legal issues become increasingly more complex. This course provides an overview of this trend, investigating similarities, differences, changes, and challenges experienced by an array of stakeholders as new issues arise and views on existing issues converge in some ways and diverge in others. Specific discussion topics include, but are not limited to, human rights, crime, the environment, international institutions, and conflict of laws.

【Goal】

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to discuss and analyze the legal aspects of specific problems in a globalizing world. Through discussion and debate, students will develop their ability to grasp and analyze different opinions, as well as predict counter-arguments. Through the creation of a final report and related presentation, students will enhance their ability to develop and logically present their ideas, while reflecting on peer feedback.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3” and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course will be taught through a combination of lecture- and seminar-style classes. Students are required to attend class prepared to participate in discussion. Students are also required to make one main and one or more smaller presentations and submit a final report on the topic of their main presentation, which should reflect class discussion and peer feedback. Instructor feedback will be given during class discussions, through commentary on errors and correct responses found in the assignments, and in response to individual requests. Assignments submitted on the online dashboard will receive individualized comments on the strengths and weaknesses of the submissions.

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 木2/Thu.2

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

This course will provide a perspective on contemporary British culture. With Britain as a case theme, we also understand the diversity of cultures around the world and the significance of enhancing communication with people from other cultural backgrounds.

[Goal]

(1) Students will study the latest developments of, and arguments on, culture in Britain after WWII, particularly after the 1980s. During this period, British society and culture changed rapidly and were fragmented and reshaped. (2) Students will think of them in social, political, economic and historical contexts, and also study factors such as nation, ethnicity, gender, youth culture, commercialism, entertainments, and the internet. (3) Accumulating knowledge and having a map concerning contemporary British culture will contribute to students' understanding of interdisciplinary discourses in media and academia. (4) This course will help build skills of acquiring information, analyzing materials, and writing reports.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?] Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Students will learn the words, concepts, and proper nouns of every week's theme. While giving consideration to the tradition, the conventions, and Britishness in culture, these themes will be analysed in the context of 21st-century Britain. The recent studies of culture will make debate issues more understandable to foreign students. Pictures, films, and music will be used in the class. For students' further study, materials will be distributed, as well as related books and websites introduced.

Feedback will be given through Hoppii.

【Outline and objectives】

New Zealand (NZ) is one of the most popular destinations for nature-lovers and fans of world-acclaimed movies such as The Lord of the Rings and The Hobbit. At the same time, its flourishing economy and relaxing lifestyle has attracted immigrants and long-term stayers from all over the world. It is little known, however, that this small country with a population of about five million has been leading the world on social issues, particularly with regard to women's suffrage, the anti-nuclear movement and caring for the underprivileged. This course is concerned with the significant historical figures and events of NZ from the early contact between the Maori and Europeans to some great backyard inventors. With NZ as a case theme, we also understand the diversity of cultures around the world and the significance of enhancing communication with people from other cultural backgrounds.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) acquire substantial understanding of the major facts and issues of NZ,
- (2) develop the skills needed to collect and analyse data for research purposes, and
- (3) learn to make an effective presentation about selected topics.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3” and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Each student does research on an assigned topic independently and gives a 20-minute talk on it, while the other students are expected to contribute to the discussion with questions and comments. The instructor is more of a facilitator to assist students by providing a framework for study and inviting lively discussion and response. By the last class, students will complete an essay on one of their chosen subjects, addressing the review comments and the suggestions they receive at the time of their presentation.

【Outline and objectives】

This course aims at understanding the application of human-mimicking technologies (AI, NLP, sensors, robotics, augmented reality, etc.) to create, communicate, deliver, and enhance value across the customer journey.

【Goal】

Students will understand the current challenges that marketers deal with in a modern society (e.g., generation gap, COVID-19, digital divide). Based on that, students will learn the role of human-like technologies in addressing such challenges and marketing customers effectively. In this line, predictive marketing, contextual marketing, and augmented marketing will be covered. Finally, students will practically learn how to apply what they have learned and how to devise feasible solutions by performing group projects.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】
Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course will proceed with lecture, readings, group presentation, and discussion. Students are required to read each chapter of a textbook in advance and submit a summary of it every week. After a lecture from an instructor, students will participate in group presentation and subsequent discussion. The subject of group presentation will be about case studies of the content covered in the given week.

At the beginning of class, feedback and a brief review for the previous class will be given.

Financial Statement Analysis

Karen Kai Lin Lai

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 水3/Wed.3

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

This course provides a comprehensive understanding of financial statement analysis and equips students with essential knowledge and skills to evaluate companies' financial health and performance. It covers fundamental principles and theories necessary for interpreting financial statements, including understanding banking financial statements. While the course primarily consists of lectures, active participation, and class discussion are highly encouraged. By the end of this course, students will develop a comprehensive understanding of financial analysis and its crucial role in decision-making processes.

【Goal】

The goals of this course are to:

1. Understand the structure and content of financial statements.
2. Apply financial ratios and analytical techniques to assess company performance.
3. Conduct comprehensive financial analysis for decision-making processes.
4. Demonstrate critical thinking and communication skills through case studies and presentations.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

At the start of each class, quizzes will be distributed or group discussions held to help students review key concepts before beginning a new chapter. Feedback will be provided after the quizzes: answers will be provided, followed by a short discussion and revision. I highly recommend that students utilize the lecture slides available on the Hosei Learning Management System (HOPPII) both during and after class.

Services Marketing

John Melvin

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 月 1/Mon.1

その他属性 : 〈優〉〈実〉

[Outline and objectives]

What are services? The service sector, which includes finance, education and tourism, now accounts for around 80% of developed countries' economies and today's graduates are highly likely to be employed in such organizations. The purpose of this course is to provide students with an in-depth understanding of the theoretical and practical processes of marketing services, with a particular focus on tourism. Driven particularly by more demanding customers and advances in technology, organizations are pursuing closer and more interactive relationships with their customers, with important consequences for marketing. It is essential for companies and destinations to understand the impact of these changes in order to maintain and develop competitive advantage.

This course will consider strategic issues in services marketing; we will also consider micro-marketing issues relating to service design, the service experience, tourist behavior and the challenges and opportunities for managers presented by recent technological developments.

Students will engage in additional learning opportunities such as group discussions and presentations. We will analyze a number of tourism-related case studies in addition to other service sectors.

[Goal]

This course aims to give students insights into the particular characteristics of marketing services such as tourism. After exploring current marketing theory on destination marketing, consumer value creation and the consumer experience, the course will apply these to the management and marketing of services.

From the consumer perspective, students will learn about consumer behavior, the impact of the service environment and forming relationships with service providers. From an organizational perspective, we will consider managing the service environment, innovation and developing service brands in order to facilitate consumer value creation and provide more memorable and rewarding experiences.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Classes will take place in an interactive environment, with students contributing through group discussions and a presentation in addition to lectures. In group projects, students will gain an in-depth understanding of a particular organization/destination and must then present the results of their analysis.

Assignments will be submitted and returned, with feedback, via Hoppii; insightful answers will be shared in class to facilitate discussion.

Supply Chain Management

Kayhan Tajeddini

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 木6/Thu.6

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

Global supply chains interact with all facets of business and society. In this interdisciplinary course, students will gain a multi-faceted perspective on the global dimensions of today's business operations. Students will explore the interrelationships between global supply chains, logistics operations, society, and the environment. The study of business operations will be set in the context of social science theories and popular perspectives on the history, geography, structure and ethics of trade. Students will examine the impacts of current trade systems on both production and consumption regions and the human and environmental consequences of trade patterns.

[Goal]

1. For students to gain a multi-faceted perspective on the global dimensions of today's business operations through understanding how modern, global supply chains and logistics networks operate.
2. For students to understand the multi-disciplinary facets of how a global supply chain can be viewed, analyzed, and operated.
3. For students to explain multiple key social science theories and popular perspectives on the history, geography, structure and ethics of trade, and apply them to the analysis of supply chains.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The course will be lecture, case, and discussion based. The assignments are designed to help students build skills that cover scientific, information, and communication literacy. Effort will be made to make the class both challenging and exciting.

We will use a combination of text and cases to explore and apply the topics. It is vitally important that you come to class prepared and ready to discuss the topics. If you read and prepare the materials you will learn more during the discussions and will be successful at the assignments.

Regarding the presentation and case studies, it will be explained in the first class with all guidelines, expectations and standards. The strengths and weaknesses of each presentation and reports will be discussed individually.

【Outline and objectives】

The course provides a thorough exploration of international trade, including core principles, theories, and practical aspects. It covers topics such as the Ricardian and Heckscher-Ohlin models, trade policies, and the functions of international economic institutions. Additionally, it addresses crises and responses within the realm of international trade. While the course primarily involves lectures, I highly encourage active participation and class discussions.

【Goal】

The goals of this course are to:

1. Understand the fundamental principles, theories, and practical aspects of international trade.
2. Evaluate the impact of various trade policies on international trade flows and economic welfare.
3. Examine the roles and functions of international economic institutions, identify crises, and analyze their responses."

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

At the start of each class, quizzes will be distributed, or group discussions will be held to reinforce key concepts before introducing a new chapter. Feedback will be provided after the quizzes: answers will be provided, followed by a brief discussion and review. I highly recommend that students make use of the lecture slides available on the Hosei Learning Management System (HOPPII) both during and after class.

International Environmental Policy

Stephen Chitengi Sakapaji

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4
Day/Period : 水2/Wed.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

This course explores opportunities and challenges for international environmental regulations, examining the interactions between international organizations, national governments, NGOs, multinational corporations, and local communities in global environmental rule-making. Students will engage in a detailed analysis of global environmental governance, addressing key sectors such as agriculture, forestry, biodiversity, climate, urbanization, and trade. Through case studies, policy analysis, and simulations, students will develop a critical understanding of the complex dynamics involved in shaping international environmental policy.

[Goal]

By the end of this course, students should be able to:

1. Understand the historical evolution and current state of global environmental governance.
2. Identify the roles of key actors in the international environmental policy arena.
3. Analyze the interaction between global environmental policies and national/local governments.
4. Critically evaluate the effectiveness of various international environmental agreements.
5. Develop and propose policy solutions to address global environmental challenges.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3" and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The course consists of short lectures and interactive class discussions and presentations in which students address, from a critical perspective, the topics covered each week (prepared prior to class). Feedback will be given through the following:

- Comments from submitted reaction papers and insightful comments from reaction papers will be introduced in class and used in deeper discussions.
- Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System.
- In the final class, comments and explanations will be given for assignments (tests and reports, etc.) for all classes taken/held during the semester.

[Outline and objectives]

This course aims to examine the current global political issues and their implications. The rise of populist and authoritarian leaders in many parts of the world – in the US, Europe, and Asia – had threatened global stability and the future of democracy. The reelection of Trump as US President is creating uncertainty in the polarized US politics and has a far-reaching impact on global politics. The UK's vote for Brexit provided a striking image of the power of far-right movements in the UK and Europe to influence the politics and policies of a country. The resurgence of these movements is fueled not only by the people's frustrations with traditional institutions, but also by post-truth politics, denialism, and fake news which imperil civic engagement and democratic ideals. These developments are thought to be connected to the negative consequences of globalization, notably the deepening of inequality, the cultural clash, and the divide of values, which led to social and economic fragmentation and political polarization. Adding to the global anxiety are the conflicts and wars in various parts of the world, and Trump's unorthodox leadership style. These crucial global events and issues need thorough examination and reflection since they significantly affect our lives, the future of democracy, and the rules-based international order. At the same time, we need to understand our options, as well as the appropriate choice of policy actions to counter the negative impacts of the social, economic and political changes that are brought by these challenges.

[Goal]

In examining globalization and political change, the course aims to answer three questions: 1) What are the impacts and consequences of globalization? 2) What are the recent trends in global politics? and 3) What is the future of globalization and politics?

Globalization has provided opportunities for international cooperation and for minor voices to be heard; however, it has also become a significant source of domestic and global friction and instability. Globalization has both positive and negative consequences. We need to understand how we can benefit from its positive impact, and as much as possible, work on how the positive benefits can be harnessed. Meanwhile, we also need to carefully study the negative impact, and how they can be managed, reduced, or even eliminated. This course will help you develop a deeper understanding of contemporary political issues and strengthen your ability to analyze the impact of crucial global events. With these, we will engage in exercises that will improve your critical thinking skills, as well as help you effectively communicate your ideas and personal reflections on the reading materials and current events. The final exam will be an objective and essay and test on what you learned from the key themes of the course.

We will have active learning tasks composed of group discussions and individual student reports that will help you improve your confidence in presenting your ideas clearly and logically.

To receive credit from the class, you need to attend the lectures, participate in the active learning tasks, submit a mid-term reflective essay, and pass the final examinations, which require you to read and reflect on the materials provided.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

The class combines lectures with active learning tasks, such as group reports, debates, and individual presentations. To make the class more lively and interesting, you are encouraged to participate actively and share your opinion regarding the topic of the day and the reading materials. The first half of the course tackles the nature, impact, and consequences of globalization. The second half of the course examines the recent trends and future direction of globalization and politics.

Submission of assignments and feedback will be via the Learning Management System. Feedback will be provided in the Midterms and Final Exams.

【Outline and objectives】

This course will explore the nature of international relations in the Asia-Pacific. It will mainly examine and discuss the following: (1) factors for stability and peace in the Asia-Pacific region after the end of the Cold War; (2) roles for the great powers in the region: the United States, China, and Japan; (3) problems and prospects for regional security and economic cooperation; (4) the evolution of regional institutions; (5) the prospects for regional order.

【Goal】

The course objectives are: (1) to develop students' ability to effectively use IR theories to analyze and explain developments in regional affairs; (2) to enable students to analyze the foreign policies of the major powers and selected regional countries; (3) to enable students to assess the developments of regional institutions; (4) to enable students to examine and assess the status and prospects for regional order.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

This course is composed of twelve lectures. In each class, a background lecture on a pre-selected topic will be provided to students. After a lecture, there will be a discussion. While the lectures will provide an overview of the topics in question, the discussions will give students an opportunity to examine policies in more depth.

Comments for assignments are given during class and office hours.

Advanced Comparative Politics

[Outline and objectives]

This advanced comparative politics course is designed to significantly enhance students' comprehension of the subject matter by broadening and deepening their knowledge, as well as enhancing their problem-solving abilities. Building upon the foundational concepts covered in "Introduction to Comparative Politics," the course navigates into more intricate aspects, facilitating a comprehensive exploration of the crises and challenges faced by political institutions. Specifically, the course undertakes a nuanced examination of the causes of crises and challenges to political institutions, requiring students to engage in a profound study encompassing modernization theory, its critics, nation-building, political development, parliamentary government, presidency, authoritarian institutions, regional institutions, the crisis of democracy, the populist explosion, a third wave of autocratization, and inequality. The goal is not only to develop a nuanced understanding of these critical topics but also to present a promising avenue for enhancing students' problem-solving abilities. This strategic approach aims to empower students with the tools to address real-world challenges within political institutions and to actively contribute to the improvement of political institutions, fostering a comprehensive skill set that goes beyond theoretical knowledge.

[Goal]

The overarching goal of this course is to deepen students' understanding of key crises and challenges faced by political institutions while enhancing their problem-solving abilities. Additionally, the course aims to refine students' skills as critical thinkers, analysts, and effective communicators. It is hoped that by the end of the semester students will find the course to be informative, interesting and enjoyable.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Students are expected to engage in an appropriate amount of reading and will be evaluated through class participation, a mid-term exam, presentation, and short essay.

In order to get the most out of class, you must be prepared when you come to class. Students are required to complete the readings prior to class meetings and to come to class ready to discuss them. I expect everyone to participate actively in the discussion of the day. The class is organized around the required readings and their topics. Every student should be able to summarize, analyze, synthesize, and evaluate each assigned reading by addressing the following questions:

- What is the author's purpose?
- What is the basic theme(s) or argument(s) of the reading?
- What are the most important historical events, information, concepts, etc. discussed in the reading?
- How does this reading relate to the other readings and to the central themes of the course?
- How powerful or weak is the argument and the evidence? Why?

[Textbooks]

A course packet containing assigned articles and book chapters will be posted in Hoppii.

・ The class will be structured around what I call a class dialogue in which information, knowledge, and thought will be generated through lecture, discussion and, in particular, the Socratic method. I will often play the role of provocateur and advocate to stimulate participation. The class dialogue emphasizes the importance of student participation and active learning as a means to improve one's skills, interest, information, knowledge, and, ultimately, understanding. In essence, class discussions will consist of an active exchange between the student and professor.

Global Political Economy

Nathalie Cavasin

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 水4/Wed.4

その他属性 : 〈優〉

【Outline and objectives】

We will examine the structure of the contemporary global political economy. Students will be introduced to the theories, debates and paradigms using case studies to develop an understanding of the global political economy. Students will also debate on the new political economy landscape and its effect on the global supply chain, the war in Ukraine, the war in the Middle East, the global rise in resource nationalism, the increase of state intervention in the economy, the global environmental governance among other topics. Specific attention will be put on the role of China and its increased participation in the global political economies, the geopolitical tensions in the world and the recent trends regarding India's new enthusiasm in the new globalization regime.

【Goal】

Students through the assignments that are based on current events in the world (analysis with back-up from recent news) will be able to learn to express their opinions and develop their critical thinking skills.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

Each week, in addition to readings to be done, written assignments will be assigned. These written assignments are mandatory as they are included in the evaluation. In addition, there will be an individual essay with a group presentation (topic to be decided later with the supervision of the professor) a book review project (on selected chapters) to be written and a critical written assignment during the last class. Students will receive written feedback (eventually oral feedback and mini-discussions with the professor in class) from the professor.

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

Be always ready by preparing the pages of the readings given in advance before coming to the next class. Additional homework will be assigned such as preparing an update with a current affair in the world related to the discussion/class contents. It is expected to read newspapers and news magazines several times a week. Students will need to update themselves with current news to stay informed about key issues and debate both within Japan and in the world. Students should prepare the work for the essay and book review at the date defined in the course agenda table. Preparatory study and review time for this course are an average of 4 hours each week.

International Development Policy

Ippeita Nishida

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 月2/Mon.2

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

International development policies have been formulated along two domains, one by the donor coordination group (i.e. providers of Official Development Aid), traditionally represented by the OECD-DAC and another at the multilateral agenda setting forum such as the United Nations. Then, increasingly, voices of the emerging economies such as India are assuming more weight than before. While these serve the purpose of advancing the lives of people and discussions are mutually-related, each has distinct interests and constraints. In this course, we aim to understand how international development policy/agenda is being formulated and what the current (and future) issues are. Specifically, students will explore: (1) the rationale and evolution of development policies by the donor community, (2) the more holistic and people-centered agenda setting at the United Nations and (3) interests of the emerging donors and current policy issues that would impact on the policies of international development, such as the "Global South" debate, the great power competition, and deterioration of international cooperation, etc.

[Goal]

The course objectives are:

- 1) To enable students to assess the development policy debates from multiple aspects.
- 2) To make students able to differentiate development agenda formulation process at different stakeholder groups.
- 3) To equip students with the holistic understanding of the on-going issues that affect on the process of global development, through groupwork and discussion.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This class will have lectures and interactive discussions, as well as group/individual presentations where appropriate. Active participation is required. Students will undertake a final exam and have occasional quizzes and short papers to write. In addition to general feedback, insightful comments may be introduced in class to deepen discussions.

The course is composed of three parts. The first part (weeks 3-6) will have lectures on debates among traditional donors. In the second part (weeks 7-9), lectures will cover key discourses at the United Nations such as the basic human rights and the Sustainable Development Goals. The third part (weeks 10-13) will examine current policy issues that are related to development. Students may be tasked to do small researches and make individual/group presentations.

Except the first day, in principle, this class will adopt the face-to-face format, to allow students' direct interaction. Yet, it may use the online platform when necessary (in such case, students will be notified in advance). When possible and appropriate, on-going global events that relate to the course's subject will be touched. Also, pending on students' interests and availabilities of the host, one or two fieldwork trips may be introduced.

The class will meet once a week for 100 minutes. Approximately 85 minutes will be dedicated to lectures, and the remaining 15 minutes will be set aside for students to ask questions related to the week's topic. There will be two timed exams, one in Week 7 and another in Week 14. Each exam will include multiple-choice, true/false, and short-answer questions. Additionally, the final exam will feature two essay questions. Both exams will be timed, closed book, and will take place during class time. No materials, including student notes, will be allowed during the exams (For additional information about the exam policy, see “Others”). The midterm exam (Week 7) will cover the lectures from weeks 1 through 6, while the final exam (Week 14) will cover the lectures from weeks 1 through 13. Retakes will not be allowed. Students are expected to attend classes, take notes, and review the content covered to succeed in these exams. In the interim between the two exams, there will be short-response assignments in Week 2, Week 4, and Week 9 to test students' cognitive, independent learning and critical thinking skills. These assignments will reflect the topics covered during those weeks, as well as the associated reading materials. Feedback on written assignments completed online will be provided individually after results and grades are announced. ### 【Outline and objectives】

This course covers the studies of grand strategy in international relations (IR).Grand strategy is the comprehensive framework that guides a state's efforts to coordinate and employ its military, economic, diplomatic resources to achieve long-term national objectives, often in the face of changing strategic environment. The course examines a wide range of issues in the field, ranging from the historical evolution of and theoretical perspectives on grand strategy, material and ideational foundations of grand strategy, domestic and external challenges facing state leaders in crafting and implementing their nation's grand strategy, to empirical case studies of major countries' grand strategies.

【Goal】

The course objectives are: (1) To enable students to broadly understand the concept and theories of grand strategy in IR; (2) To enable students to comprehend material and ideational sources of grand strategy; (3) To enable students to understand domestic and international challenges that state leaders face in designing and applying their country's grand strategy; (4) To enable students to acquire the ability to analyze the grand strategy of major countries.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course will first provide a series of lectures on key topics in the studies of grand strategy, including the concept and theories of grand strategy in IR, material and ideational foundations of grand strategy, and domestic and international challenges for the formulation and implementation of grand strategy. The course will subsequently delve into various case studies relating to the grand strategy of major states. Comments for assignments are given during class and office hours.

【Outline and objectives】

Cultural tourism is defined as “A form of tourism that relies on a destination’s cultural heritage assets and transforms them into products that can be consumed by tourists.” (du Cros & McKercher, 2015: p.6). Regarded as one of the oldest forms of tourism, it exists in many forms. This course will cover the 4 elements within the definition: (i) Cultural tourism within the broader field of tourism, (ii) Utilization of destinations’ Cultural Assets, (iii) Consumption of Cultural Tourism Experiences, and (iv) Tourists and the Host Community. We will consider the importance of cultural assets: as a way to define and understand nations, as a manifestation of people’s ethnicities and identities as well as a vital driver of tourism. To do so, we will analyze the role played by various stakeholders, such as governments, businesses, the media, NGOs and conservation organizations such as UNESCO & ICOMOS.

【Goal】

Upon completion of this course students should be able to:

- 1) Understand the various forms of cultural tourism
- 2) Understand the key organizations involved in providing and conserving cultural tourism at local, national and international level
- 3) Understand the role of cultural tourism in destination branding and marketing
- 4) Understand the role of cultural resources in forming people’s national and local identity, and how these are preserved and managed
- 5) Understand the complexities of stakeholder relations in the management of cultural tourism resources

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

The course is primarily lecture-based, though students will have a number of opportunities to discuss issues in small groups. A broad range of case studies can help students consolidate their learning. In groups, students will conduct an in-depth analysis of tourism in a selected destination through a case study, which will provide an opportunity to apply the theories and concepts from the lectures and enhance understanding of key issues.

Assignments will be submitted and returned with feedback via Hoppii; insightful answers will be shared in class to facilitate discussion.

【Others】

Although not essential, this course will be more accessible for students who have taken other tourism-related courses. As such, students are strongly recommended to have taken one or more of the following: 100-level Introduction to Tourism Studies or the 200-level Event Management or Tourism Development in Japan courses. I can draw from my experience in organizing events and as the marketing director of a tourism business in the UK to help provide students with examples and to illustrate issues.

【Outline and objectives】

No language has ever been so extensively used on Earth as English is today. However, the language, spoken by well over 400 million people as a mother tongue, has developed a wide range of variations due to regional and social factors. This course aims to survey the phonetic, lexical and syntactic features of some varieties of standard English in the UK, North America and Australasia, with frequent reference to their historical and cultural backgrounds. Special attention is paid to Australian and New Zealand (NZ) English, considering the increased significance of the southern hemisphere countries in business and education. It is often predicted that L2 speakers of English in Asia alone will likely outnumber monolingual English speakers of the Inner Circle within this century. Mention is made of Singapore English as an example of New Englishes.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) better understand the richness and diversity of the English language,
- (2) get familiar with the IPA vowel and consonant charts,
- (3) be able to identify major English accents in the world, and
- (4) become more familiar with the lexical/syntactic features of Canadian, Australian and NZ English in particular.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

This course is a combination of lectures and discussions about pre-assigned topics. Students have to address review and application questions given in advance. Submitted assignments and tests are reviewed in detail and commented on in the following week's lecture.

【Outline and objectives】

In this course, you will learn how Language Policy is defined as an academic subject. This course will cover major concepts behind language policies. By drawing on various topics related to language variation (e.g. social class and gender), this course will provide an accessible and engaging overview of Language Policy.

【Goal】

The understanding of language policies that cause and result in linguistic mechanisms utilized by particular members of a given society so as to distinguish themselves from societal members. The broad goal of this course is to promote social understanding and justice in schools, communities, and corporations.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

【Method(s)】

After an introduction to the topics in the form of mini-lectures, examples of policies or general concepts will be presented for discussion, activity, and analysis. This course will contain assignments and writings outside of class, which may be presented in class. Note that the suggested topics may vary slightly depending on the number of registered students and their interests. Finally, submissions of assignments and their feedback will be via Google docs (unless students are notified previously).

【Outline and objectives】

Southern literature is perhaps the best-known regional literature of the United States, featuring a distinct traditions of voices, genres, and motifs. But it is far from a monolith, with works reflecting the diverse cultures, peoples, and languages of the region. Southern literature has often provided a sharp focus to social, historical, and cultural issues of the United States, serving as a grim counterpoint to more optimistic national mythmaking. This course will focus on southern literature in the twentieth century, exploring how writers respond to questions of war, race, memory, class, and modernization.

【Outline and objectives】

Medieval and Early Modern English literature had a profound impact on the English language, and its literary and cultural legacy pervades modern popular culture, from fantasy novels to Hollywood blockbusters. The course introduces students to some of the canonical texts of English literature, beginning with Old English poetry and concluding with writers from the English Renaissance, such as Shakespeare and Spenser. By providing students with the opportunity to engage with texts across a wide spectrum of genres, periods, and languages, the course facilitates a deeper understanding of how English literature emerged and developed during this crucial period in literary history. Simultaneously, it encourages students to question pre-existing notions of 'English literature'. The writings will be studied with regard to their literary and socio-historical context, making reference to topics including class, religion, gender, and other thematic concerns. In addition to close analytical readings of the texts in modern English translations, students will also be introduced to literary forms and practices of pre-modern English literature through the examination of works in their original language. Prior experience in a literature course is recommended, but not required.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students will:

- Gain basic knowledge of the major works and the cultural and historical circumstances of their production/reception.
- Understand key concepts and terms of literary studies, particularly those crucial to understanding medieval and early modern literature.
- Be able to analyse texts and make critical interpretations.
- Develop transferrable skills, including critical reading and academic writing.

[Outline and objectives]

How do we process the experience of encountering a new language and culture? How does that process in turn affect our own personal language and identity? In this course, we will read translations of personal essays and fiction written in the Japanese language by contemporary authors undergoing such experiences, including Japanese authors living abroad and non-Japanese authors writing in their adopted language. As we compare their stories and observations, we will also consider how the act of writing provides each author with a space to form and perform new cultural identities and personal idioms.

[Goal]

Students will practice reading and writing critically as they explore dynamics of culture, language, and identity in modern Japanese literature.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Classes will be divided roughly evenly between lectures and guided discussions. Short quizzes will be given to assess comprehension of weekly readings. Students will submit midterm and final papers. In-class feedback will be given for reaction papers, and students will receive personal feedback on written assignments.

[Outline and objectives]

How do we process the experience of encountering a new language and culture? How does that process in turn affect our own personal language and identity? In this course, we will read translations of personal essays and fiction written in the Japanese language by contemporary authors undergoing such experiences, including Japanese authors living abroad and non-Japanese authors writing in their adopted language. As we compare their stories and observations, we will also consider how the act of writing provides each author with a space to form and perform new cultural identities and personal idioms.

[Goal]

Students will practice reading and writing critically as they explore dynamics of culture, language, and identity in modern Japanese literature.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

Classes will be divided roughly evenly between lectures and guided discussions. Short quizzes will be given to assess comprehension of weekly readings. Students will submit midterm and final papers. In-class feedback will be given for reaction papers, and students will receive personal feedback on written assignments.

[Outline and objectives]

With estimated 2.3 billion users, the global dominance of the English language is in no dispute. However, the language has developed a wide range of variations, depending on the social and cultural contexts where it was transplanted and the other languages it exists alongside. This seminar explores lesser-known varieties of English in the Inner Circle and the L2 use of English in the Expanding Circle. We start the spring semester by reviewing Kachru's (1985) three-circle model and Schneider's (2007) model of postcolonial English. Then we focus on New Zealand English (NZE), one of the youngest Inner Circle varieties, examining how it is distinguishable from UK, US and Australian English. The latter part of the semester addresses L2 English speakers' attitudes towards their accents, the use of English as a lingua franca (ELF) in Europe, and strategies for incorporating accented English and ELF into pop-cultural productions.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) understand the evolution and diversity of the English language,
- (2) examine the phonetic features of NZE in comparison to those of UK and US English,
- (3) explore L2-accented English and its speakers' attitudes towards various accents, and
- (4) study the current use of accented English and ELF in international contexts.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This seminar is presentation and discussion oriented: Students take turns to review a book chapter or journal article assigned by the instructor, noting key terms and concepts, which could be proactively studied by consulting reference materials. The other students in the class contribute to the discussion with their questions and observations. Detailed comments and suggestions for further study are provided at the end of each presentation.

[Outline and objectives]

English is the most common international language in business, education, and mass media, and is used by more than one billion people in the world as L2 speakers alone. The fall semester focuses on the use of English in the Expanding Circle, particularly in mainland Europe and Japan. We compare the two regions regarding their use of and attitudes toward English as a lingua franca (ELF). Through individual or collaborative research, we also explore various sociolinguistic issues as potential topics for seminar papers.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students will:

- (1) study the use of English in mainland Europe,
- (2) become aware of the extensive use of ELF in education and pop culture, and
- (3) get used to collecting and analysing data for research purposes.

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed for students interested in exploring second language (L2) education from a global perspective. It delves into both the theoretical and practical aspects of second language learning (SLL). The course investigates effective strategies for teaching and learning languages applicable to both in-person and online environments within the Japanese and global contexts. It caters to a diverse range of L2 learners within and outside traditional classroom settings. A key focus of the course is on the core issues impacting L2 education, such as exploring various teaching approaches related to L2 motivational issues, educational settings with ICT, and so on that foster successful second language learning (SLL). Students are expected to develop, discuss and examine strategies to put theories into practice in dealing with various L2 learning situations. This course also addresses educational inequality through language education on a global scale. Students are also encouraged to consider their potential contributions to L2 learner achievement and to carve out their career paths in related educational fields worldwide.

[Goal]

The course provides opportunities to:

1. Learn challenging global issues of L2 education.
2. Examine how L2 education is implemented effectively with the expertise of SLL.
3. Acquire theoretical knowledge of core issues in L2 education.
4. Discuss the connection between theoretical aspects of SLL and various L2 education pedagogy.
5. Practice basic ideas for effective L2 education within the Japanese and global context.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

For the completion of this course, students are required to have Q&A/discussion sessions on a topic related to lecture contents and consolidate it as a daily task every week. A presentation, final exam, and writing assignment are also required at the end of the course; students are required to choose one of the course topics, make a presentation, and submit a writing assignment on it. Fieldwork is also required to complete related tasks and activities occasionally. The final requirements and feedback will be submitted on the learning management systems (WebClass, etc.).

[Outline and objectives]

This course is designed for students interested in exploring second language (L2) education from a global perspective. It delves into both the theoretical and practical aspects of second language learning (SLL). The course investigates effective strategies for teaching and learning languages applicable to both in-person and online environments within the Japanese and global contexts. It caters to a diverse range of L2 learners within and outside traditional classroom settings. A key focus of the course is on the core issues impacting L2 education, such as exploring various teaching approaches related to L2 motivational issues, educational settings with ICT, and so on that foster successful second language learning (SLL). Students are expected to develop, discuss and examine strategies to put theories into practice in dealing with various L2 learning situations. This course also addresses educational inequality through language education on a global scale. Students are also encouraged to consider their potential contributions to L2 learner achievement and to carve out their career paths in related educational fields worldwide.

[Goal]

The course provides opportunities to:

1. Learn challenging global issues of L2 education.
2. Examine how L2 education is implemented effectively with the expertise of SLL.
3. Acquire theoretical knowledge of core issues in L2 education.
4. Discuss the connection between theoretical aspects of SLL and various L2 education pedagogy.
5. Practice basic ideas for effective L2 education within the Japanese and global context.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

For the completion of this course, students are required to have Q&A/discussion sessions on a topic related to lecture contents and consolidate it as a daily task every week. A presentation, final exam, and writing assignment are also required at the end of the course; students are required to choose one of the course topics, make a presentation, and submit a writing assignment on it. Fieldwork is also required to complete related tasks and activities occasionally. The final requirements and feedback will be submitted on the learning management systems (WebClass, etc.).

Seminar: Intersectionality: Multiple Inequalities I

Hazuki Kaneko

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 月3/Mon.3

Notes : Not Available for ESOP Students.

その他属性 : 〈優〉〈S〉

[Outline and objectives]

Race, class, gender and sexuality, nation and so on constitute our identities, shape our experiences, and constrain as well as enrich our lives. Importantly, they constitute interconnecting sources of inequality in society and in the world today. In this seminar, students will read and critique social theories and research informed by an intersectional perspective that aims at understanding the complex, intersecting nature of social inequalities. In the process, they will acquire tools and develop perspectives to apply to their own research.

[Goal]

The main goal of this seminar is to develop students' sensitivity towards issues of inequality related to race, class, gender, sexuality, nationality and so on, and expose them to the cutting-edge theoretical and empirical works in the developing field of "intersectionality". Another goal is to develop students' skills in social research, discussion, presentation, and writing. Learning to evaluate and critique ideas and research is a particularly important goal in this seminar.

Students will conduct original research over the course of two years as a graduation project. This seminar paper can be used as a writing sample for graduate school applications, a foundation for future research, and a way to showcase your research skills and interests during job hunting. In the first year, students will develop research questions, identify research gaps, and create a feasible research proposal. In the second year, they will collect and analyze data, discuss the findings, and write up their paper.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

Since this course is a seminar, it is taught primarily through student presentations and discussions. Students deliver presentations on selected readings as well as on their own research. Further, they also engage in discussions based on critical reading of extant research and theories, as well as on current relevant social issues. Feedback is given orally after each presentation and discussion, and comments are given to individual students on every assignment submitted.

[Grading criteria]

Clear instructions and goals are set for every assignment. The grade will be calculated as follows:

Participation in class discussion (8%)

Reading presentations and discussant presentation (18%)

Critiques on readings (20%)

Research topic presentation and research paper presentation (14%)

Research paper (40%)

[Changes following student comments]

The instructor will constantly check in with students to ensure a manageable workload.

[Others]

Students are expected to have passed Race, Class and Gender I. However, this prerequisite may be waived if a student has the equivalent academic background.

Students are expected to take both Intersectionality I and Intersectionality II, and in principle, they are expected to continue for two years. Special arrangements will be made for students who study abroad for one or two semesters.

[Prerequisite]

【Grading criteria】

Clear instructions and goals are set for every assignment. The grade will be calculated as follows:

Participation in class discussion (8%)

Reading presentations and discussant presentation (18%)

Critiques on readings (20%)

Research topic presentation and research paper presentation (14%)

Research paper (40%)

【Changes following student comments】

The instructor will constantly check in with students to ensure a manageable workload.

【Others】

Students are expected to have passed Race, Class and Gender I. However, this prerequisite may be waived if a student has the equivalent academic background.

Students are expected to take both Intersectionality I and Intersectionality II, and in principle, they are expected to continue for two years. Special arrangements will be made for students who study abroad for one or two semesters.

Seminar: Intersectionality: Multiple Inequalities II

Hazuki Kaneko

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 秋学期授業/Fall | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 月3/Mon.3

Notes : Not Available for ESOP Students.

その他属性 : 〈優〉〈S〉

[Outline and objectives]

Continuing with what they have learned in the spring semester in "Seminar: Intersectionality I", students will read and critique social theories and research informed by an intersectional perspective that aims at understanding the complex, intersecting nature of social inequalities. In the process, they will acquire tools and develop perspectives to apply to their own research.

[Goal]

The main goal of this seminar is to develop students' sensitivity towards issues of inequality related to race, class, gender, sexuality, nationality and so on, and expose them to the cutting-edge theoretical and empirical works in the developing field of "intersectionality." Another goal is to develop students' skills in social research, discussion, presentation, and writing. Learning to evaluate and critique ideas and research is a particularly important goal in this seminar.

Students conduct original research over the course of two years as a graduation project. This seminar paper can be used as a writing sample for graduate school applications, a foundation for future research, and a way to showcase your research skills and interests during job hunting. In the first year, students will develop research questions, identify research gaps, and create a feasible research plan. In the second year, they will collect and analyze data, discuss the findings, and write their paper.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

This is a continuation of the seminar in the Spring semester, with the same emphasis but more time devoted to student research. The seminar research and readings, as much as possible, will be based on students' individual research interests. Feedback is given orally after each presentation and discussion, and comments are given to individual students on every assignment submitted. Talks by seminar alumni on their careers and connection of the seminar to their work will be scheduled in November and December. An updated schedule will be provided in class.

Yu Niiya

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 月3/Mon.3

Notes : Not Available for ESOP Students.

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

The focus of this seminar is on a deeper understanding and analysis of how the self and culture shape how we feel, think, and behave, by drawing on empirical literature in social and cultural psychology. In both the spring and fall semesters, the seminar will meet once a week for 2 periods. In the spring, class time will be devoted to group discussions on assigned readings. In addition, third-year students will decide on the research questions, hypotheses, and theories of the research they will pursue in the seminar. Fourth-year students will collect data by running an experiment or a survey and will analyze them using a statistical package of their choice (JASP, HAD, SPSS, or R).

[Goal]

Upon completion of the course, students are expected to achieve the following goals:

- (a) To learn how social psychology can help understand our behaviors and decisions via literature review and in-depth discussion;
- (b) To develop a working knowledge of different approaches and methods of social and cultural psychology;
- (c) To develop a deeper understanding of our own lives, using knowledge and wisdom gained through the seminar;
- and
- (d) To develop research skills and knowledge to apply selected social psychological theories to a real-life context.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This course combines several pedagogical strategies including student-led weekly class discussions and presentations. Students will receive oral and written feedback on their presentations and weekly reaction papers.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students are expected to complete all the reading assignments, write weekly reaction papers, and post them on the course website by the designated date. Those assigned to lead discussions will further prepare the summaries of the readings and discussion questions. Third-year students will formulate research questions and hypotheses based on a comprehensive review of relevant literature on the topic. Fourth-year students are expected to run their survey or experiment and collect data for their graduation thesis. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 4 hours each.

Students preferred that they split the task between those who present the readings and those who lead the discussions, as they did last year in the fall term. I agree that the quality of the presentation and discussions had improved by splitting the tasks. This will give more opportunities for students to present. I will make this change for this year. Thank you for the helpful feedback.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

Students are expected to complete all the reading assignments, write reaction papers, and post them on the course website by the designated date. Those assigned to lead discussions will further prepare the summaries of the readings and discussion questions. Third-year students will design an experimental or survey study, prepare research materials, and write up a research proposal. Fourth-year students will collect and analyze data, and write up their graduation thesis. Preparatory study and review time for this class are 4 hours each.

[Textbooks]

None.

[References]

Readings and other resources will be provided on the course website.

Additional references will be introduced in class.

Hacker, D. & Sommers, N. (2020). A pocket style manual. (8th ed.). APA Version.

[Grading criteria]

Students are evaluated based on their research (70%), contribution to the seminar (20%), and contribution to the discussion on the assigned readings (10%).

For graduating students, their research grade will be based on progress and punctuality (30%), final draft (30%), and final presentation (10%).

For third-year students, their research grade will be based on consistent progress (30%), research proposal (20%), ethics approval form (10%), and final presentation (10%).

[Changes following student comments]

Students preferred that they split the task between those who present the readings and those who lead the discussions, as they did last year in the fall term. I agree that the quality of the presentation and discussions had improved by splitting the tasks. This will give more opportunities for students to present. I will make this change for this year. Thank you for the helpful feedback.

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

Students must get the login information for PyscINFO database from the library.

[Others]

Students are strongly encouraged to have successfully completed the following courses prior to joining this seminar: Statistics, Social Psychology I and II, and Quantitative Research Methods. Instructor's permission is required.

Seminar: International Relations I

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 木4/Thu.4

Notes : Not Available for ESOP Students.

その他属性 : 〈優〉

[Outline and objectives]

The first two decades of the 21st century have witnessed dramatic changes in international relations. It has become increasingly obvious that the relative power and influence of the United States over world politics is declining vis-à-vis rising states, most notably China. At the same time, the legitimacy of Western liberal norms and values (such as democracy, the rule of law, and human rights) that have constituted an important feature of an American-led order are being challenged by the rise of alternative norms and values, supported by non-democratic rising states. This trend has been further reinforced by growing public distrust of existing political systems in many Western democracies, mainly stemming from detrimental effects of economic globalization. In addition, the international political stage, which was previously dominated by states, has increasingly featured non-state actors, including multinational corporations (in particular giant IT companies), non-government organizations, and transnational terrorist groups. The enormous growth of non-state actors poses serious challenges to the power and authority of the state. These drastic changes in the realm of IR pose the significant question: What will be the shape of the world order in the 21st century?

In order to address this question, this seminar will examine the following:

- 1) Shifts in power distribution among great powers and their strategic competitions.
- 2) Prospects for global governance (Climate Change, Trade and Investment, Financial Crisis)
- 3) New technology and geopolitics (Rivalries among major powers regarding AI and clean energy technologies, The roles of "Big-Tech" companies)
- 4) The political effects of economic globalization (The rise of populism and the decline of democracy in major countries)
- 5) Competition among differing norms and values: disputes over capitalism, democracy, human rights, and self-determination in the Middle East, Africa, and East Asia.

[Goal]

The course objectives are:

- 1) To provide students with a background for eventual careers in fields (including work in government, international organizations, business, and the media) which require articulate, clear-thinking individuals with a grasp of contemporary international relations (IR);
- 2) To enable students to establish a firm foundation for studying IR at graduate level;
- 3) To enable students to demonstrate mastery of the subject matter of the course through the expression of relevant factual knowledge and the comprehension of relevant theory, deployed with appropriate analytical skill, as evidenced in discussion, oral presentation and written work.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The spring semester will have detailed discussion on topics relating to the main theme of this seminar. Extensive review of IR theories will also be conducted in the early weeks of the semester.

During the fall semester (and the summer camp), students will undertake their own research projects. Seminar members will also engage in some group work relating to their research topics, role-play, and simulation studies).

Students will be required to write several short essays (only in the spring semester) and one research paper during the course (submitting a research paper by late January 2026). Students can choose any topics within the discipline of IR. Minimum length for the research paper is 4,000 words. Fourth-year students will concentrate on their dissertation projects during the year. Dissertation subjects can be on anything within the IR discipline. Minimum length is 8,000 words, excluding bibliography, but including notes, any appendices and tables.

Comments for assignments are given during class and office hours.

Seminar: Tourism Management I

John Melvin

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year : 3~4

Day/Period : 月3/Mon.3

Notes : Not Available for ESOP Students.

その他属性 : 〈優〉〈実〉

[Outline and objectives]

While governments are quick to laud the economic benefits that tourists can bring, there are growing concerns about the impact of relentless growth of global tourism on the environment as well as the socio-cultural wellbeing of host communities. Driven largely by deregulation, globalisation and technological developments, the overarching focus on growth that has driven post-WW2 development is being increasingly challenged and questioned. The post-coronavirus recovery process offered a rare chance for the tourism industry to consider revising hitherto unsustainable business practices, but it seems that many destinations are returning to 'business as usual'.

Adopting a lens of sustainability, this semester considers the management and marketing of tourism. Combining analysis of seminal research with illustrative and up-to-date case studies from a range of domestic and international destinations, students will gain insights into the factors driving tourism development. Students will also be introduced to different research methods, and will acquire the tools to critically investigate tourism in a context of their choice. This will form the basis of an extended research paper that will be completed during the second year of the seminar.

[Goal]

The goal of this seminar is to provide students with academic and practical knowledge relating to management and marketing that can facilitate their progression into the world of work. This will include multiple aspects of tourism management including stakeholder management, tourism impacts, Airbnb, overtourism and niche tourism development.

Upon completion of this course, students will have acquired enhanced valuable research and analytical skills that will be of great use in their future. They will develop their ability to design, organise and manage an original tourism-related research project. Additionally, through in-class discussions and presentations, students will gain valuable experience in persuasively expressing and defending their opinions on a range of issues relating to business management and marketing.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

The seminar consists of in-depth analysis of various issues related to sustainable tourism management. In the spring semester, students are introduced to some core texts and research and are encouraged to start to consider which areas they intend to focus on. In the fall semester, students will begin to refine their topic and develop a firm research proposal.

In the second year of the seminar, students will research and write their extended research paper.

While seminars will be partly instructor-led, students will play an increasing role in giving presentations & leading discussions on the Core Readings. As students' own research develops, they will give presentations on their research, and share their growing expertise on their subject areas and research methods with the other students.

Assignments will be submitted via Hoppii; insightful answers will be shared in class to facilitate discussion.

Fourth year students: Class Participation (30%), Assignments and Presentation (30%) and Research Update (40%).

Students must submit weekly reports on the reading and self-assess their seminar performance.

[Changes following student comments]

Case studies will vary year to year depending on students' interests. We will hope to take both a summer trip and undertake field work during the semesters.

[Equipment student needs to prepare]

Students should bring a laptop or tablet PC to class.

[Others]

I can draw from my experience in organizing events and as marketing director of a tourism business in the UK to help provide students with examples and to illustrate issues.

Seminar students must concurrently enroll in Services Marketing and/or Cultural Tourism (300-level courses).

Students are expected to study in the seminar for two years. Special arrangements will be made for students who study abroad for one or two semesters.

[Prerequisite]

Seminar students should have taken at least two of the following courses: Cultural Studies; Event Management; Hospitality Management in Japan; Introduction to Business; Introduction to Tourism Studies; Marketing in Japan; Marketing Management; Marketing Research; Principles of Marketing; Tourism Development in Japan.

Adopting a lens of sustainability, this semester considers the management and marketing of tourism. Combining analysis of seminal research with illustrative and up-to-date case studies from a range of domestic and international destinations, students will gain insights into the factors driving tourism development. Students will also be introduced to different research methods, and will acquire the tools to critically investigate tourism in a context of their choice. This will form the basis of an extended research paper that will be completed during the second year of the seminar.

【Goal】

The goal of this seminar is to provide students with academic and practical knowledge relating to management and marketing that can facilitate their progression into the world of work. This will include multiple aspects of tourism management including stakeholder management, tourism impacts, Airbnb, overtourism and niche tourism development.

Upon completion of this course, students will have acquired enhanced valuable research and analytical skills that will be of great use in their future. They will develop their ability to design, organise and manage an original tourism-related research project. Additionally, through in-class discussions and presentations, students will gain valuable experience in persuasively expressing and defending their opinions on a range of issues relating to business management and marketing.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

【Method(s)】

The seminar consists of in-depth analysis of various issues related to sustainable tourism management. In the spring semester, students are introduced to some core texts and research and are encouraged to start to consider which areas they intend to focus on. In the fall semester, students will begin to refine their topic and develop a firm research proposal.

In the second year of the seminar, students will research and write their extended research paper.

While seminars will be partly instructor-led, students will play an increasing role in giving presentations & leading discussions on the Core Readings. As students' own research develops, they will give presentations on their research, and share their growing expertise on their subject areas and research methods with the other students.

Assignments will be submitted via Hoppii; insightful answers will be shared in class to facilitate discussion.

[Outline and objectives]

This seminar continues from the Tourism Management I seminar, though with a greater focus on students' independent research projects. In addition to a field trip, students are expected to conduct investigative research that will form the basis of an extended research paper to be the completed during the second year of the seminar.

Building on knowledge acquired in the Spring semester on the management and marketing of tourism, the class content will continue to blend analysis of seminal research with illustrative and up-to-date case studies from a range of domestic and international destinations on tourism management. These will vary from year to year based on students' research interests and current affairs.

[Goal]

The goal of this seminar is to provide students with academic and practical knowledge relating to management and marketing that can facilitate their progression into the world of work or graduate school. Upon completion of this course, students will have acquired enhanced research and analytical skills. They will develop their ability to design, organise and manage an original tourism-related research project. ### [Method(s)]

Following on from the Spring semester, the seminar will continue to feature in-depth analysis of various issues related to sustainable tourism management in the form of discussion, presentation and writing. In the Fall semester, junior students will begin to refine their topic and develop a firm research proposal.

In the second year of the seminar, senior students will research and write their 5000-word extended research paper.

In order to get the most from each seminar, students must commit to undertake the reading assignments. Students will play an increasing role in leading discussions.

Assignments will be submitted via Hoppii; insightful answers will be shared in class to facilitate discussion.

[Outline and objectives]

This seminar is designed for students who are interested in international business. As described in the seminar title, students will mainly learn Global Strategic Management. Global Strategic Management includes many different academic aspects. In this seminar, we would like to focus on "Global Marketing Strategy", including the following fields: Intercultural Communication, Negotiation, Brand Management, Advertisement, PR, Decision Making, and Organization.

[Goal]

By the end of the seminar, students will: (a) gain academic knowledge of international /global business (b) learn "practical wisdom" by pursuing the reality (c) learn the ability to see the entire picture and a wide variety of perspectives with strategic thinking (d) learn logical /critical thinking and effective presentation skills (e) develop and enhance strategic business planning skills.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

To achieve the goal, this seminar is mainly conducted through: (a) learning theoretical studies and case studies, (b) visiting companies and local areas, (c) doing joint research and collaboration with companies and local governments (product development, focus group, etc.), (d) conducting on-site survey (questionnaire, interview, etc.), (e) approaching from manager's perspective, (f) making presentations and discussion based on "facts and data" and "experience", (g) participating in business contests.

In addition, we sometimes use case methods being currently used by the MBA program in western countries. Feedback can be given verbally, non-verbally or in written form.

[Others]

Students who have previously taken literature courses in GIS – particularly Introduction to Literature and/or Comparative Literature – will be given priority consideration.

[Prerequisite]

There are currently no prerequisites for this seminar.

[Outline and objectives]

This seminar is for students interested in literature, literary research, and composition. What separates a strong reading from a weak reading? How do critics and theorists evaluate and discuss a text? What tools and methods do researchers employ to deepen our understanding of a work of literature and its context? In this course, we will be exploring these questions through reading, researching, and discussing a selection of modern and contemporary pieces of short fiction.

[Goal]

Over the course of this seminar, students will:

- (1) develop advanced close reading skills
- (2) grasp the basic theory and methodology of literary research
- (3) develop the ability to discuss prose fiction in multiple technical and theoretical contexts

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain “DP 1”, “DP 2”, “DP 3”, and “DP 4”.

[Method(s)]

This seminar will be primarily based around reading short fiction and essays. Students will conduct independent research on assigned short stories, which they will then present in class. These presentations will be interspersed with lectures and guided readings by the instructor. Students will be assessed based on class participation, presentations, and written submissions. Feedback on presentations and written assignments will be provided in class.

[Outline and objectives]

It has often been noted that animation is the dominant medium of the current era. For instance, Disney is the world's largest media company, anime is a globally popular media, and we even use animated LINE stamps to communicate with each other. Considering how our lives are now so "animated" as the point of departure, this seminar will explore ways of thinking about media broadly, including anime and films, manga and music, games, lifestyle, fashion, and SNS. Learning various theoretical and methodological approaches, this seminar will explore how different media are both affected by and affect the global societies we live in.

[Goal]

Throughout the seminar, students will learn how to engage with various media by examining relevant theories and research, exploring them through group work and discussion. They will also learn how to apply and critique the approaches examined in class. To do so, there will be presentations as well as smaller projects that work with specific theories and methods that focus on certain media. The students will have the opportunity to examine first-hand what media theorists and researchers are discussing about contemporary (and past) media and how such media reflect and affect society. Across the semester, students will also develop their own research project on a specific media of their choosing, applying the theories and methods we explored in class.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?] Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

As a seminar, these classes will primarily be discussion and presentation-based. Each week students will be provided with an academic reading relevant to the topic, engaging with methodological and theoretical concepts in ways that connect to their research interests. Students will have group and class discussions on certain themes and prepare group presentations and activities to better engage with that week's reading. Classes will also feature visual material such as images and clips of films and animation to better address, apply, and critique the readings. Students will also receive individual feedback and consultation at different points in the semester. Assessments of their work will be based on their understanding and application of the readings through their presentations, participation in discussion, and final papers.

[Outline and objectives]

It has often been noted that animation is the dominant medium of the current era. For instance, Disney is the world's largest media company, anime is a globally popular media, and we even use animated LINE stamps to communicate with each other. Considering how our lives are now so "animated" as the point of departure, this seminar will explore ways of thinking about media broadly, including anime and films, manga and music, games, lifestyle, fashion, and SNS. Learning various theoretical and methodological approaches, this seminar will explore how different media are both affected by and affect the global societies we live in.

[Goal]

Throughout the seminar, students will learn how to engage with various media by examining relevant theories and research, exploring them through group work and discussion. They will also learn how to apply and critique the approaches examined in class. To do so, there will be presentations as well as smaller projects that work with specific theories and methods that focus on certain media. The students will have the opportunity to examine first-hand what media theorists and researchers are discussing about contemporary (and past) media and how such media reflect and affect society. Across the semester, students will also develop their own research project on a specific media of their choosing, applying the theories and methods we explored in class.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

Will be able to gain "DP 1", "DP 2", "DP 3", and "DP 4".

[Method(s)]

As a seminar, these classes will primarily be discussion and presentation-based. Each week students will be provided with an academic reading relevant to the topic, engaging with methodological and theoretical concepts in ways that connect to their research interests. Students will have group and class discussions on certain themes and prepare group presentations and activities to better engage with that week's reading. Classes will also feature visual material such as images and clips of films and animation to better address, apply, and critique the readings. Students will also receive individual feedback and consultation at different points in the semester. Assessments of their work will be based on their understanding and application of the readings through their presentations, participation in discussion, and final papers.

【Outline and objectives】

This class is the second semester in the Media Across Borders seminar. As such, it will build on what the students learned in the spring semester. This semester will continue the exploration and examination of various theories and methods pertaining to media studies, and in particular, animation as broadly conceived. There will also be more focus on students' research projects, with the students presenting their research projects in a more extended form at the end of the semester and submitting their final written versions. There will also be the opportunity to get more feedback on their topics as it develops across the semester

【Outline and objectives】

下記の目標を達するため、授業期間の初期に、法全般に関わる基礎的な概念・理解に関する内容を取り上げ解説した上で、以降の期間で日本国憲法に関する講義を行う。①立憲主義や権力分立など憲法そのものの土台に関わる原理、②日本国憲法の基本原則（「国民主権」「基本的人権の尊重」「平和主義」）、③そこでの統治の仕組みの3つがその柱となる。受講者が初学者であることを踏まえて、法一般や憲法に関わる今日的なトピックを多く取り上げることで、抽象的な議論・講述に偏ることを避け、基本的理解が容易に得られるように講義を進める。

【Goal】

本講義では、法と国家および社会の関係に関する理解を踏まえて、日本国憲法の理念や構成を理解できるようになることを目標としている。日本国憲法の基本原理とそれに基づく内容構成、特徴などの正しい理解を通じて、憲法を中心とした法体系の基本構造を把握し、あわせて基礎的な法的知識を身に付けることで、民主的な国家の市民として、また主権者として必要な法的・制度的知識と資質を習得する。それと同時に、現実の社会における様々な法関係に対して、適切かつ妥当な対応ができるような、いわゆる「リーガルマインド（法的思考）」を身につける。

【Outline (in English)】

In order to achieve the following goals, the course will cover and explain basic concepts and understanding of law in general at the beginning of the course, and then lecture on the Constitution of Japan in the following period. The course will focus on three pillars: 1) principles related to the foundations of the Constitution itself, such as constitutionalism and separation of powers, 2) the basic principles of the Constitution of Japan ("sovereignty of the people," "respect for fundamental human rights," and "pacifism"), and 3) the governance system therein. With the understanding that students are beginners, the course will avoid leaning toward abstract discussions and explanations by covering many contemporary topics related to law in general and the Constitution, and will proceed in a way that makes it easy for students to gain a basic understanding.

Assessment will be based on the assignment reports completed in the first half of the lectures (face-to-face) (50%) and in the second half of the lectures (on-demand) (50%) to measure the degree of achievement of the goals listed in the "Goals to be achieved" section: "Systematic understanding of the Constitution," "Basic legal knowledge," and "Development of a legal mindset."

After the lecture, please summarize your notes taken during the lecture in easy-to-understand text.

Before and after each class, students will need to spend about four hours studying to understand the content of this class.

[Outline and objectives]

The purpose of this course is to deepen students' understanding of the significance and role of physical activity and to foster the acquisition of essential knowledge and attitudes that contribute to the maintenance and promotion of physical, mental, and social health and self-management throughout life through lectures and practical training.

[Goal]

By the end of the course, students should be able to do the following:

1. Deepen understanding of the significance and role of physical activity from various perspectives.
2. Acquire the ability to use sports activities to establish a prosperous and healthy student and social life.
3. Acquire essential knowledge and develop attitudes that contribute to self-management.
4. To acquire the ability to demonstrate leadership and solve problems through communication with others, which is considered extremely important for playing an active role in the real world after graduation.
5. Aim to acquire various skills that lead to developing employment ability (ability to build relationships of trust, ability to act jointly, etc.).

[Method(s)]

If the Method(s) is changed, I will announce the details of any changes.

Students are expected to be in good physical condition before attending the class so that they will not have any physical or mental problems during the physical activities in the class. In addition, students are expected to follow the lecture's instructions in charge of the class regarding assignments to be done after class and preparations for the next class.

This class comprises lectures and practical lessons, and students are expected to learn and understand elementary health and physical education.

In the final class, the course will not only summarize and review the contents of the first 13 lectures. Still, it will also provide critiques and explanations of assignments completed in class, such as reaction papers and reports.

If too many students are registered for this class, I may have to select students to avoid a large group gathering randomly. Further details of this will be announced when the first lesson starts.

Also, students are expected to participate in the class proactively so they may write an essay in the first class. This is due to the selection of students with high motivation in the class.

[Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)]

This class's standard preparatory study and review time is 2 hours each. This class aims to understand that sports activities contribute to promoting physical and mental health and interpersonal relationships through lectures and practical training. Therefore, record the time spent on daily physical activity, meals, sleep time, etc., look back on the contents, and record the effects and future tasks. Also, get in the habit of looking at various sports-related information sent from TV, newspapers, the Web, etc. This work will deepen your understanding of the contents of this class.

[Textbooks]

No textbook will be used.

[References]

Reference books may be introduced as and if necessary.

【Grading criteria】

Your overall grade in the class will be decided based on the following.

1. Participation status for activities during class /Presentation /Reaction paper 60%.
2. Assignments /Reports 40%.

In principle, this grade evaluation method is used, and students who have difficulty in normal activities will be treated and evaluated individually.

【Changes following student comments】

1. Students are expected to communicate and interact with other students from all over the world, so this class tried to create the opportunity to enhance communication skills through sports and physical activities, including individual and team sports.
2. Students are expected to learn and implement the proper physical training (strength and conditioning). This class provided the appropriate information regarding physical training and aimed to improve the knowledge and skills of physical training based on the evidence.

【Equipment student needs to prepare】

1. Students must bring their proper sportswear and shoes for practical lessons.
2. Students must bring their own personal computer or mobile device to create and submit assignments.

【Others】

1. The order and content of each class can be changed/modified due to the number of participants and available facilities, as well as the situation of infectious disease and university guidelines.
2. This class will be held offline (face to face); therefore, please follow the university guidelines carefully when participating (e.g., sanitizing your hands before participating).
3. If students have any issues, including health, before, during, and after the class, students must inform the teacher of their condition.

【Outline (in English)】

(Course outline) Welcome to Hosei University! Would you like to know when, how and why your university and faculty were founded?

We will trace the more than 140-year history of Hosei University, looking at its various aspects: the university song, acceptance of overseas students, relations with other countries, distinctive research institutes, changes in student culture, outstanding graduates, etc. In the last class session, we are going to hold a discussion as to the future of our university and you can present your proposals to the university president. Hopefully this class would be a good opportunity for you to reflect on yourself who study at this university and think about your future career.

(Learning activities outside of classroom) Students will be expected to study for four hours before and after each class.

(Grading Policies) The final grade will be calculated based on the small report submitted in each class (70%) and the final report (30%).

【Work to be done outside of class (preparation, etc.)】

毎回の講師が授業内で言及した文献は、積極的に参照してください。また、2020年に開館したHOSEIミュージアムの展示、および同ミュージアムデジタルアーカイブ (<https://museum.hosei.ac.jp/archives/Users/Top>)には、授業で取り上げた人物や事象に関するコンテンツが豊富に含まれていますので、準備学習・復習に活用してください。

その他、授業に関連する特別展示などが学内外で開催される場合には、随時お知らせしますので、極力足を運んでみましょう。

なお、本授業の準備学習・復習時間は、各2時間を標準とします。

【Textbooks】

特定のテキストはありません。毎回の講義担当者が適宜、プリント配付やパワーポイント提示を行います。それらを基本的に、学習支援システム上にアップします。

【References】

各講義担当者が、その都度お知らせします。

本学の歴史を通史的にまとめた書籍には、『法政大学1880-2000：そのあゆみと展望』のほか、『法政大学参拾年史』『法政大学八十年史』『法政大学百年史』『法政大学と戦後五〇年』などがあります。図書館などで適宜参照してください。

【Grading criteria】

毎回のリアクションペーパーに反映された授業に取り組む姿勢 40%、学期末のレポート 60%を基準にして、総合的に評価します。受講者数によっては若干の変更があるかもしれませんが、その場合は授業の場（もしくは学習支援システム上）でお知らせします。この成績評価の方法をもとに、本授業の到達目標の60%以上を達成した者を合格とします。

なお、レポートの作成に際しては、典拠となる文献に必ず当たり、実証的な内容になるよう心がけてください。

【Changes following student comments】

法政大学の経てきた歴史や、その中で的人物について、ただ賛美するような授業ではありません。あくまでも学術的でありながら、同時に本学で学ぶ自分自身の生き方の参考になるような、意義ある授業を目指します。

【Equipment student needs to prepare】

とくにありません。学習支援システムを積極的に活用します。

【Others】

上述のように、本科目は「大学を知ろう <法政学>への招待」の上位科目として設置されました。したがって、本来は同科目を履修した人を受講者に想定していますが、受講していない人を拒むものではありません。未修の方は、上記した参考書などを参照に、自分なりに基礎知識を得て、授業についていけるよう努めてください。

この「法政学の探究LA」を履修し、さらに学びを深めたい方には、より演習に近い少人数の科目として、「法政学の探究LB」(春学期)も用意されています。

【Outline (in English)】

This intermediate class aims to explore the history and the spirit of Hosei University, by following the achievements and personality of several specific individuals.

Please refer to the documents mentioned by the lecturer in the class. Also, please make use of the newly opened HOSEI Museum and Digital Archives for preparation and review.

Final grade will be calculated according to the following process. Reaction papers for each class 40%, and term-end report 60%.

[Outline and objectives]

この授業では「大学と地域」をテーマに、法政大学の歴史と文化に焦点をあてます。法政大学はなぜ市ヶ谷にあるのか、なぜ多摩や小金井にもキャンパスがあるのか。法政大学に通う学生として抱く疑問や関心について、日本近現代史や大学史などの学問的な観点から検証します。具体的なテーマとして、大学創立の地・東京神田、市ヶ谷キャンパスとその周辺（外濠・神楽坂）の歴史と文化、鉄道と郊外型キャンパスの形成、グラウンドと法政スポーツの隆盛、付属校の成り立ち、北軽井沢法政大学村と岩波文化などを挙げることができます。法政大学の歴史を通して、日本の近現代や大学の在り方を捉え直す機会となるでしょう。

また、HOSEI ミュージアムの展示コンテンツやデジタルアーカイブをはじめ、様々な資料から「法政学」を探究し、実践的な試みとして、ミュージアムでの小規模な発表会開催も検討します。

[Goal]

1. 法政大学の歴史はもちろんのこと、日本近現代史や大学の歴史に関する基礎的な知識を得ることができます。
2. 身近なテーマを学問的な「問い」へと発展させる視野を養います。
3. 調査研究の前提となるテーマ設定の具体化や各種資料の調査方法・読解方法について学ぶことができます。
4. 演習形式が中心となるため、各学部の専門ゼミ履修への準備になります。

[Outline (in English)]

This is a class to accurately understand texts written in French and to consider their contents. Students will review the grammar points contained in the text, grasp the nuances of the French text, and translate it accurately into Japanese. After that, they will discuss and present the contents of the text in class. You can review grammar at the level of the French Language Proficiency Test Level 4 in one year. By looking up the meaning of words, you will be able to read and understand simple sentences written in French on your own and form your opinion.

The course will progress at a pace that allows one lesson to be completed in two classes. In the first class, students will practice reading aloud, receive an explanation of grammar points, and review the material by answering the handouts that will be distributed. In the second class, students will review the grammar points learned in the first class and translate them into Japanese using their reading aloud and grammar knowledge. Students will then discuss the content in groups and present the results. The Japanese translations that students have worked together to create can be viewed on the class web. Students will check their answers to the grammar questions during class. Group discussions will be compiled into reaction papers, which will be presented orally in class and then submitted. Grading: Regular points (participation in class, discussions and presentations) 50%, Final exam (written exam on the last day of class) 50%/Exam method: Final exams will be held during regular class time on the last day of classes, not during the "exam period". Grammar questions and French-Japanese translation exams will be held in the classroom.

【Outline (in English)】

This course is designed for students who has already learned French language for one year at least. They will enhance their communication skills by reading rather easy texts and doing exercises while using a manual which deals with the French speaking regions (francophonie) around the world. This course focuses on reading and writing without neglecting listening or speaking.

The goals of this course are to understanding the intermediate French language and expressing in spoken and written language what they want to say.

Before and after each class meeting, students will be expected to spend four hours to read the relevant chapter(s) and documents.

Your overall grade in the class will be decided based on the followings:
in class contributions (mini-exercise, etc.): 30%, term-end test: 70%.

【Outline (in English)】

This is a class to accurately understand texts written in French and to consider their contents. Students will review the grammar points contained in the text, grasp the nuances of the French text, and translate it accurately into Japanese. After that, they will discuss and present the contents of the text in class. You can review grammar at the level of the French Language Proficiency Test Level 4 in one year. By looking up the meaning of words, you will be able to read and understand simple sentences written in French on your own and form your opinion.

The course will progress at a pace that allows one lesson to be completed in two classes. In the first class, students will practice reading aloud, receive an explanation of grammar points, and review the material by answering the handouts that will be distributed. In the second class, students will review the grammar points learned in the first class and translate them into Japanese using their reading aloud and grammar knowledge. Students will then discuss the content in groups and present the results. The Japanese translations that students have worked together to create can be viewed on the class web. Students will check their answers to the grammar questions during class. Group discussions will be compiled into reaction papers, which will be presented orally in class and then submitted. Grading: Regular points (participation in class, discussions and presentations) 50%, Final exam (written exam on the last day of class) 50%/Exam method: Final exams will be held during regular class time on the last day of classes, not during the "exam period". Grammar questions and French-Japanese translation exams will be held in the classroom.

In this course students will practice communicating familiar topics to others. Model sentences will be created to explain important expressions and practice replacing them. The goal is to be able to write your own sentences by replacing expressions based on the model sentences.

Grading criteria

Students will be judged on the basis of regular scores, assignments and final examination.

Regular point evaluation: 50%.

A score based on the student's response when pointed out in class. Also, your attitude and active participation in class. Regular points will be accumulated, so if a student is absent, the regular points for that day will be zero.

Midterm exam: 20%.

Final oral exam: 30%.

In this course, students will practice communicating familiar topics to others. After replacing model sentences and memorize the expressions you have learned, you will practice them with your pairs. Next, rewrite the model sentences using the memorized expressions and present them. I will confirm what you have learned by asking some of you at the beginning of the next week's lecture.

Every week begins with a review of the previous week. Students will practice in pair, so they are expected to prepare well and actively participate in class. The estimated study time is about 60 minutes for each class.

Families and Sexualities in Japan

Hazuki KANEKO

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year :
Day/Period : 火 4/Tue.4

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

This course introduces students to diverse family lives in contemporary Japanese society through the lens of sexuality. In particular, the normalization of heterosexuality within the family institution is explored and challenged. Topics include, but are not limited to, dating, marriage, procreation, infidelity, and the Japanese koseki system. Modern family structures, such as same-sex couples and cross-national families, are also within the scope of this course.

[Goal]

There are three goals for students to achieve by the end of the semester. First, students should become familiar with sociology as a debunking discipline and grasp the relationship between personal biography and social history. In other words, being able to explain what sociology does with specific examples when asked by others. Another goal is for students to be able to discuss how people from diverse backgrounds experience "the family" in Japan with relevant theories and concepts. Lastly, students are expected to gain greater sensitivity to inequality issues and to cultivate critical thinking skills to question the social norms and systems shaping people's intimate lives.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

[Method(s)]

This course is delivered through a series of lectures, but students also engage in group presentations, participate in class discussions, and complete written assignments. Feedback on oral presentations and written assignments is typically provided in written form.

[Others]

Students must inform the instructor if they will be absent for one of these cases such as medical reasons, job interviews, family emergency, and other circumstances. Students with special needs should contact the instructor as early as possible.

Using AI tools to check English writing (grammar/spelling) is allowed, but using them to generate content for written assignments is strictly prohibited. (If suspected, the student will be contacted personally and receive no point).

This course is committed to fostering an inclusive and respectful learning environment that values student diversity. As the instructor of this course, I will ensure a comfortable space for open dialogue, where different perspectives are encouraged. Mutual respect, active listening, and constructive engagement with ideas are expected from all students. It should be noted that diversity is sometimes misused to mask or even justify discrimination, undermining its original purpose. Diversity should foster inclusion and fairness, not serve as a cover for exclusionary practices.

Japanese Social Problems

David H SLATER

Day/Period : 火3/Tue.3

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

We will draw on a "social constructionist" framework and examine how certain social problems have been discovered, defined, and dealt with in post-war Japan. We begin the course by providing an overview of sociological approaches, in particular, a social constructionist approach to social problems, and critically examining Nihonjin-ron (theories of Japanese-ness) to provide frameworks for approaching Japanese social problems. We will then discuss specific Japanese social problems around the issues of race, social class and gender.

The aim of this course is to take critical perspectives into representations of Japanese social problems, particularly in the media, through taking a constructionist approach.

【Goal】

By the end of the course, students will be able to explain the "social constructionist" framework and apply it for making sense of Japanese social problems in post-war Japan. It is expected that students will develop a nuanced understanding of contemporary Japanese society through critically examining the social problems from sociological/anthropological perspectives.

【Method(s)】

Classes will primarily be based on discussions rather than lectures. It is therefore expected that students come to class having done the assigned reading and ready to discuss them. There will be some reading or thinking notes due for each class to aid students in class discussion and their final assignment. Every student will make a presentation or write a paper on a chosen topic. Feedback will be given on the Learning Management System for assignments submitted on the Learning Management System, and in class for work done in class (e.g. presentations).

Global and Transnational Japan

Kei TAKATA

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year :
Day/Period : 水3/Wed.3

その他属性 :

【Outline and objectives】

This course examines Japanese society through the lens of globalization and its transnational relations with foreigners and foreign societies. On the one hand, Japan's relative geographical isolation as an archipelago surrounded by the sea has cultivated a unique aesthetic culture that attracts people across the world in recent times, as well as being one of the driving forces behind its economic development. Yet, at the same time, this could also be a critical factor in generating a peculiar social system and norms that sometimes generate a considerable gap with the "global standards." Hence, in theory, the global process would be an agency that shapes, reshapes, and alters the social structure in both positive and negative ways. As such, how does globalization - the closer integration of the countries and peoples of the world, especially after the 1980s - affect the change in contemporary Japanese society? The course will explore this question through reading and discussing the effect of transnationalism - both inbound/import and outbound/export - on migration, work, civil society, tourism, education, family, culture, identity, language, and Olympics, among others. The course also introduces theoretical approaches to understand globalization and transnationalism.

【Goal】

The primary goal of this class is to gain an alternative understanding of Japanese society that cannot be seen only by observing from the perspective of the nation-state. Taking the transnational and relational approach would then provide us with insights into why and how Japan is changing in this contemporary era. Students are expected to gain skills and knowledge to critically analyze Japanese globalization through a comparative approach with other countries from East Asia, North America, Europe, among other regions that you are familiar with.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

【Method(s)】

The course follows a mixed lecture-seminar format, combining short lectures, discussions, and group work designed for ESOP students at Hosei. In the class, followed by the instructor's lecture, participants are expected to discuss the topics through a critical reading of the assigned materials. There will be a group project to work on, and we will allocate time to discuss the project with your group members. Each group will make a short presentation on the final week of the class, and students will write a final assignment individually based on the findings from the group work.

The instructor will provide feedback on the presentations during the class. Students can also access the instructor during office hours (prior appointment needed).

Journalism in Japan I

Robert SAKAI-IRVINE

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year :
Day/Period : 金 5/Fri.5

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

This course asks you to think about and discuss the principle of press freedom through its expression here in Japan. Over the 14 weeks of the course, you will delve into the Japanese free press' sometimes troubled history and present reality, while grappling with questions that go to the heart of not just journalism, but to definitions of the "public good" and the health of democratic systems. For example: Is state control of the news media ever justified? Looking at real-world situations for context, your own responses may surprise you. Like any good journalist, be curious and critical.

[Goal]

Using historical and present-day case studies, you will examine what press freedom actually means in practice, and the different ways it can be restricted. For example, does keeping secrets and imposing penalties for reporting them count as limiting press freedom? You will do this by:

- examining the early days of print news in Japan, and the dark days of the descent into war;
- discussing types of information control, and present-day law and attitudes to official secrecy;
- questioning, through actual examples, whether there are any ethical limits to freedom of the press and expression;
- comparing coverage of the same issues in different publications;
- a midterm essay and end-of-term team debate on a question related to press freedom or freedom of speech;
- and talking about how news is covered from day to day, through class analysis of at least one real-time news article per week (of your choosing).

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

[Method(s)]

In Class

Each class will start with a discussion on one or two articles (chosen by you the student) from the previous week, focussing not just on the content of the news but on how it is presented and why.

We will then move on to the topic of the day, starting the class discussion with points from that week's readings and treating each as a case study, and attempt to draw conclusions about the role and responsibility of journalism in each situation.

This is a heavily discussion-based course (as is reflected in the grading structure), and you will get feedback on your comments from the instructor in real time. While participation is necessary, quality of contribution is more important than volume; well thought-out ideas are appreciated, and will be acknowledged in class.

After Class

By the end of the Monday after each class, students will post their personal thoughts on the topic discussed in the course discussion forum on Hoppii, and comment on at least one other student's reflections, to keep the discussion fresh and moving forward. The instructor will also read and comment on the students' posts.

Midterm Paper and Team Debates

The two major projects are a midterm paper of about 2,000 words on a major issue of journalism, information literacy or freedom of expression, and a final team debate on the same or similar issue. For the debate, the instructor will be looking at the quality of the arguments, strong evidence, debate performance, and the team's ability to answer questions on their topic. The instructor will provide paper and debate topic suggestions on request.

Other Written Work

The instructor will provide feedback on written work in the form of extensive comments and constructive criticism, as well as a number grade.

【Outline and objectives】

News plays a significant role in forming what we all think we know about the world. Through the lens of print news here in Japan, this course asks students to question and discuss the ethics of reporting, tackling issues including anonymous sourcing, privacy vs. public interest, and cozying up to information sources. Hopefully, you will never look at news articles the same way again.

NOTE: You may enrol in this course without having taken Journalism in Japan I.

【Goal】

To achieve the above, you will explore the ins and outs of news reporting by:

- delving into how print news media operates in Japan, especially the big national dailies;
- learning the basics of writing articles and penning a few of your own, from a simple crime story to a major news feature;
- looking at real-world examples from both the past and more recent times, and discussing ethical problems and solutions for each case with classmates and the instructor;
- and choosing real-time news stories to dissect in class, asking the basic but important questions: What happened? And is it news?

In Class

Each class will start with a discussion on one or two articles (chosen by you the student) from the previous week, focussing not just on the content of the news but on how it is presented and why.

We will then move on to the topic of the day, starting the class discussion with points from that week's readings and treating each as a case study, and attempt to draw conclusions about what it means to behave as an ethical journalist, editor or publication in each situation.

This is a heavily discussion-based course (as is reflected in the grading structure), and you will get feedback on your comments from the instructor in real time. While participation is necessary, quality of contribution is more important than volume; well thought-out ideas are appreciated, and will be acknowledged in class.

Articles

The bulk of the written work for this course is made up of three news articles the students will have to write based on provided information and, for the last two, their own research. The articles will rise in complexity from a basic news report to a news feature on a major social issue. The instructor will be looking for structure, efficient presentation of information, and adherence to newswriting ethics such as source accreditation.

Other Written Work

The instructor will provide feedback on written work in the form of extensive comments and constructive criticism, as well as a number grade (where applicable).

Media Representations

Müge IGARASHI

Credit(s) : 2 | Semester : 春学期授業/Spring | Year :
Day/Period : 木3/Thu.3

その他属性 :

[Outline and objectives]

When you follow media outlets from different countries, you will notice that very similar events or concepts can be elaborated upon in very different ways. Some issues that are covered widely and positively in one country could be ignored or covered negatively in mainstream media of other countries.

This is because societies have dominant ideologies that are formulated through institutions of power and diffused through mainstream media outlets.

Consequently, we are subject to stereotypical media representations formulated by the dominant culture and ideology that we live in.

Repetitive and stereotypical media representations have a significant impact on how we think about ourselves and "others" even if we do not always realize or question these.

Lectures throughout the semester will combine theories from cultural studies, media studies, and gender studies to analyze stereotypical representations in mainstream media outlets of Japan. Through this class, students will gain academic skills to identify stereotypical media representations and to question or challenge these with a critical perspective.

[Goal]

Each class will be formulated around media chosen by students. These will be analyzed from various theoretical perspectives such as cultural studies, media studies or gender studies.

The analysis of various media will allow class discussion on mainstream ideas as well as what is over represented or under represented in the media and why.

At the end of the semester, students will be equipped with enough knowledge to identify the discourse formulated by power institutions that sustain dynamics of how minority groups and disadvantaged groups are portrayed in mainstream media. Although difficult to find, sharing positive representations of minority cultures and subcultures in the media are encouraged.

[Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?]

[Method(s)]

Students are required to participate in class discussion and share their views and ideas with their classmates while respecting different views and cultures. All students are required to actively participate in discussion throughout the semester.

General feedback will be provided at each lecture whereas individual feedback on weekly homework will be provided through Google Classroom system.

There will be two discussion sessions throughout the semester, one before the midterm exam and one before the final exam. During discussion sessions students will have the opportunity to work in small groups and to exchange ideas and discuss particular theories with their peers.

【Outline and objectives】

The last decades of the 20th century witnessed a great shift in the landscape of East Asian media and popular culture. Border-crossing visual cultural flows in conjunction with trans-Asian co-production among East Asian countries have not only strengthened the imaginary bond of "Asia," but also have cultivated a wider pan-Asian identity. This course will engage the interdisciplinary field of visual media and popular culture studies of East Asia. In this course, students will learn about the trans-Asian flow of East Asian Media.

【Goal】

Students will also develop an understanding of the processes that enabled Asian entertainers to become part of the larger Western media flows. Students will develop a critical awareness of how visual media and cultural globalization has engaged with the East Asian region and how the local visual media flow has influenced the global.

By the end of the course, students will be able to

- ・ understand the historical development of visual media flows within East Asia
- ・ learn through examples of East Asian visual media flows how culture and socio-political forces help shape hybridized trans-national identities
- ・ cultivate a better understanding how East Asian visual cultural flows border cross and interact with globalization

【Outline and objectives】

This course is an introduction to financial management for companies which operate globally. The course discusses the basic principles of financial management and applies them to the decisions faced by financial managers in global firms. The objective is to familiarize the student with financial concepts and tools used in business. The course provides an introduction to standard financial decision-making tools, the role of stock and bond markets, the risk & return tradeoff, and foreign exchange markets in a Japan based context.

【Goal】

The fundamental goal of this course is to equip you, as a future business person, with a working knowledge of finance as a tool. Upon completing this course students should:

- 1) be familiar with financial securities such as stocks and bonds (Japan context).
- 2) be able to explain and critique a net present value and internal rate of return analysis for a project (financial decision making).
- 3) be able to explain the risk-return trade-off as discussed in finance.
- 4) acquire working knowledge (familiar with) of EXCEL for discounting exercises and other finance related functions.
- 5) develop a solid understanding of the link between topics covered in finance and international business (and other areas /fields in business).
- 6) acquire the basic skills and knowledge to undertake more advanced course work in the area of finance.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

【Method(s)】

The class consists of lectures, weekly assignments and case discussion. Feedback on assignments and numerical exercises provided during class when appropriate. Select assignments will involve some research (data collection and analysis). Active class participation is encouraged. ## 【Outline and objectives】

In a more complex and interdependent world, the issues have become even more challenging. Collective efforts of governments, international organizations, non-state actors, and individuals are needed to address these issues, such as the recent pandemic, the wars and conflicts that ruptured in various parts of the world, the humanitarian crisis, increasing poverty, economic insecurity, and climate change. Given the scale and depth of these challenges, global cooperation and collaboration are important. Governance of the efforts to deal with transborder problems has become vital for our world's stability and survival.

This course introduces the students to global governance and helps them critically analyze the important issues that transpired and continue to persist, as well as the ideas, actors, institutions, and mechanisms involved in dealing with the issues. The course will focus on three themes: (1) peace and security; (2) human rights and humanitarian actions; and (3) economic governance and sustainable development.

The first half of the course tackles the key concepts, theories, and institutions of global governance to provide the students with a framework for analyzing global issues. The second half of the course is devoted to discussions on crucial issues related to the three themes.

【Goal】

In this course, we will answer three key questions: (1) What is global governance?, (2) Why is it important?, and (3) How does global governance address the current and future challenges that the world is facing?

By the end of the course, the students will have a deeper understanding of global governance and understand the ideas, institutions, and mechanisms that enable the actors to address global issues, as well as the limits and challenges of global governance. The students will study some of the milestones in global governance in the past to solve conflicts, in addition to critically analyzing the present global conflict flash points, and vital future issues.

【Which item of the diploma policy will be obtained by taking this class?】

【Method(s)】

(If the Method(s) is changed, we will announce the details of any changes.)

Apart from lectures by the instructor, the students are expected to participate actively in class during group and individual reports. There will be group assignments and individual reports on assigned topics.

Feedback and comments are provided to individual students on their reports and Final Exam.

I have previously worked in a developing country government, an international research institution, and multilateral institutions. I will try to integrate some of the lessons I learned from my research and previous work experience in our discussions to give you a practical, real-world perspective on the interaction between and among governments and international organizations.

As with AI use, there are strict university guidelines about that. You may not use AI-generated work and pass it as your own for class reports and essay tests. It counts as cheating and can result in disciplinary action. If you're using the work of others, you need to cite them in your essays and reports, including the use of AI.

【Changes following student comments】

From the students' presentations and reports, we could see their high interest in sharing and learning from various perspectives. In particular, in this course, various discussions are actively held from the perspective of hospitality on topics such as intercultural exchange, promoting diversity, and solving social issues. We will consider not only hospitality towards others, but also hospitality towards society and the future. At the same time, we will introduce practical initiatives that our industry is aiming for.
